The Saints had opened the second stanza with another attack on the Lindsay citadel and the rubber had been worked back to the Peterborough blue line when Gerster and Meagher got into a tangle and dropped their sticks for a set-to. It didn't last. There were too many others on the ice including the referee. Thus the fans were treated to some more five-man hockey and when the scrappers came back on, Begley of Lindsay and Meagher drew penalties so closely that it was continued. Play speeded up and for the next ten or more minutes the fans saw two teams as evenly matched as could be desired. The break came when Frost did a nice solo down the right rail and drove from the corner to beat Lee and put his team on even terms. That was eighteen minutes after play began and the period ended without further threat.

Petes' Uphill Fight.

The final session started out blue, very blue for the invaders, what with the new Lindsay uniforms and a Lindsay goal that came within a half minute after the face-off. Wood came through with Fred Gerster at his elbow, bounced the rubber of Miller's pads and scooped in the rebound. A minute later he drew a penalty for dropping Frost. Play evened up after that and only inaccurate shooting held the Petes off the tally card again. But with the homesters begining to slow up, Hewett and his fellow gunners climbed in. Dunkerley took a long drifter at the Lindsay nets and Gord Cuthbertson, happening along capitalized accordingly and it was anybody's prize, at 2-all.

Take 4—Gordon .eo!xef5ugh

There the Petes took the upper hand and swarming the Lindsay end held the Midgets behind their own blue line until Cuthbertson repeated his kind act of a few minutes before and the Petes were out in front for the first time.

With one minute to go, the Midgest uncorked a smart attack that was only lacking in goals scored and the final gong saw the Petes on the defensive. Hartley drew a penalty before it was over.

The teams:

FAMOUS HOCKEY GAMES OF PETERBOROUGH TEAMS

By F. D. C.

The Peterborough intermediates of 1912 sailing along toward the championship in great style stopped with a sudden bump when they met the fast Midland team, losing the first game in Midland 10 to 2.

The return game was also won by Midland, but only after a game that remains as a hockey classic.

One of the biggest crowds in Peterborough sporting history saw the rivals clash, the jam outside the rink being so big that the players had trouble getting inside to dress for the game. Midland sent 160 rooters down and all the district towns were represented.

The Midland team that year played hockey ahead of its time, that is they introduced the six-man defence idea. In fact the Northerners were six forwards and a goalkeeper on the attack and six defence men and a goalkeeper when pressed. They had the speed to play that style of hockey and make it effective and good and were the Petes of that year, the strange tactics and skating ability of the Midlanders proved too great an obstacle.

But it was a great game, made all the closer by reason of the fact that the ice soon softened. Chase, the curly-headed Midland centre ice star scored the only goal registered in 56 minutes of desperate hockey, beating Derocher with a quick shot half way through the first half. There was not another marker until four minutes before the end of the game when, after Giroux had been banished for the balance of the struggle for slashing, Chase slipped through for a pretty goal and repeated the play in 30 seconds. Half a minute later Jerry Coughlin scored the Petes' only goal after a rush by Glover and Kelly, and Eddie Gould retaliated with Midland's fourth on a combination rush with Levigne and Beatty.

The line up:

Peterborough — Goal, Derocher; point, Glover; cover, Bearss; rover, Giroux; centre, Park; right wing, Coughlin; left wing, Kelly.

SAINTS HAVE HARD BATTLE ON THEIR HANDS HERE MONDAY WITH OLD LINDSAY RIVALS

Hope To Win and Increase Their Lead in the Junior Group Race.

NO SET-UP THOUGH.

Midgets Are Strong and Confident of Reversing Last Night's Verdict.

St. John's Juniors O.H.A. team, by reason of their neat victory over their old rivals, the Lindsay Midgets in Lindsay last night, are nicely out in front in the group race, but the Lindsay-Bobcaygeon-St. John's argument is a double schedule affair so that anything can happen yet.

Lindsay and the Saints clash again on Monday night, this time at Brock Street Rink, and despite their victory of last night, the Peterborough youngsters will have to be at the top of their form to repeat their win. The Midgets have always played their best hockey here, and nettled by an unexpected loss at the hands of a team they had beaten four times last season, they are determined to win back the ground they have lost by a victory right in Peterborough. The Midgets still have Forbert, Spratt, Gerster, Wood and other stars of last year in their line-up, and they are a dangerous crew who cannot be counted out until the last bell.

The Saints, who got nowhere last season, have rounded out a colorful team that has already caught the eye of the fans, who appreciate their style of hockey. The team is young, with all but one player eligible for at least one more junior season after this, and young Tommy Miller, the goalie, good for three more years. Miller, by the way, appears to be a distinct find for the Saints if he maintains the form he has shown in his first two games, and any visiting goalie who can perform to advantage in that crowded little Lindsay rink should go good anywhere. In front of Miller the Saints have Frost, a big and willing boy, who was used but little last year, but who is developing nicely, and Howe, a graduate from last year's iCty League, who is a most promising deefnce player.

As a regular forward line St. John's use the three musketeers of last fall's good Collegiate football team. Gordon Cuthbertson at centre, Doc. Hewitt at right wing, and Joe Dunkerley at left. These three youngsters, who also played together with the P.C.I. hockey team last season, are an unselfish trio who realize the value of team work, and they are improving fast both in a line and individually. Hewitt and Dunkerley are sturdy and hard working wings, while Cuthbertson, who is captain of the team this year, is a light but fast and game centre ice player. As alternates the Saints have used Freddie Meagher, of last year's Junior City League champions, the St. Peter's team, and Archie Weir, who was a sub. last season. Both of those youngsters come of good hockey stock, for Meagher is a son of Detective-Sergeant "Bill" Meagher, himself a decidedly useful defence player with the T.A.S. Trent Valley team, the Strathconas, and other well-known teams of yester year, and Weir is a nephew of Rollie Weir, the fast little rover of the Peterborough Bear Cats of 1912, one of the city's best Junior O.H.A. teams. In addition the Saints also have Terry Hall and Murray Hartley, members of last year's team, who have been under the weather and have not yet rounded into condition, as well as several other young players of promise.

Hard and fast but clean hockey is the slogan of the St. John's team, and they are hopeful that that brand will not only appeal to the fans, but will make it possible for them to make a creditable showing in the O.H.A. race.

Monday night's game should be one of the most enjoyable of the season, and the indications are that the biggest crowd of the year will be on hand, particularly as it is the only local game until next Friday night. Popular prices will prevail, with the general admission at 25 cents.

MAYOR ROLAND DENNE OPENS CITY HOCKEY LEAGUE SERIES; THRILLS AND SPILLS GALORE

CANUCKS WIN 6-0.

C.G.E. Play Clever Hockey To Defeat Cogs 3-2—Good Back-Checking.

Mayor Roland Denne started the Senior City League hockey teams off on the first leg of the race for city honors when he faced the first puck of the game between Harrison's North Enders and the C.G.E. Tool Room which proved to be a real battle from gong to gong and resulted in the 5 to 3 victory for the Harrison Crew.

The first period started with both teams opening up at full speed, the forwards racing from end to end of the rink as the play changed rapidly, Calladine whipping in long drives at the Tool Room goalie but was unable to locate the net. Harrisons scored the first after four minutes of play when Thornton netted the disc after a pretty piece of combination with Jarvis.

Hatton evened the count three minutes later when Swanger outguessed the Harrison defence and worked in for a close shot which Gillespie saved but Hatton batted in the rebound. The Tool Makers worker hard in an effort to get their combination going and when Johnson drew pass for bodying Williams, Hatton and Corkery broke away in a pretty piece of work only to have Williams Miss the net. The scramble in front of the net was successfully weathered by Harrisons, who retained the offensive although one man shy. Hatton's close checking was a feature of this stanza.

Many Penalties

The second session of the battle was the most strenuous of the three with both teams inclined to hand out the bumps. Calladine headed the penalty parade with three free trips, while Jarvis merited one. The play was fast and exciting with both teams missing numerous scoring chances, Gillespie holding the Tool Room at bay with sensational saves. The Harrison gang had a slight edge on the play doing a great deal of long distance gunning which proced successful when Thornton rushed in for the second counter to score on his own rebound. Carroll and Epps combined to even the count one minute later, the former taking the pass to slam in a high one making it 2 all. Swanger on the defence for the Tool Room displayed the nicest defensive work of the game. The fast pace was maintained throughout, Calladine putting the Harrison team in the lead with one minute to go in the period when he capitalized on a high shot which Griffin failed to spear.

Thornton who was the most effective player for the winners carried the play into the Tool Room territory from the face off of the last stanza, going in alone to find the open side of the net with a neat corner drive. The Tool Makers worked their heads off in this frame battling gamely in the enemy territory, but the defence of the winners gave the Tool Room gunners very few chances for close in shots. Calladine took a blue line pass, carried the puck along the boards and a drove a sizzling shot at Griffin, who blocked it nicely only to have Jarvis score on the rebound. Micky and Eddie Williams distinguished themselves near the close of the period by their tenacious checking and clever rushes which were rewarded two minutes before the final gong when Williams fairly pushed in the final tally.

The Teams:—

C. G. E. Tool Room—Goal, Griffin; defence, Swanger and Hatton; centre, Epps; wings, Ed. Williams and Carroll; subs., A. Williams, G. Williams and Corkery.

Close Contest.

The C.G.E. and Cognawaga teams who battled it out in the second game of the night, provided the fans with the most closely contested battle of the program, the C.G.E. winning 3 to 2.

The C.G.E. team, which is a new entry in City League circles, threw a lot of sand in the usually smooth-working Cogs' combination by a brilliant display of back-checking and clever defensive work, although the difference in the calibre of the two teams was almost nil. What probably cinched the game for the Electrics was the stellar rushing and long distance gunning of Allen on the right wing for the winners, backed up by the remarkable net tending by Cameron, who was able to weather three pile-ups in front of his citadel without mishap. Payne, in goal for the Cogs, was good, and turned in a performance that was truly creditable. Cripps, with his speed and poke check, and Johnny Wilson and Graham, with their uncanny ability to take possession of the puck, were the biggest thorns on the side of the Electrics, while the Davis pair on the defence are as husky a couple as any team could wish for. Allin, Killoran and Hall were the big guns for the winners, the first two getting the three counters between them. Allin's success lay in his ability to break fast and whip in shots at a moment's notice. Doddridge, the stocky defence man, who cut his hockey teeth at the University of New Brunswick, convinced the Cogs that he was a factor to reckon with, and although unable to tally, was always successful in making a shot. Paired up with him was Ashmore, whose weight and checking ability were a decided asset to the winners. The brilliant display of puck chasing trotted out by this C.G.E. team convinced the fans that this team will be a dangerous contender for championship laurels in this league.

The teams:

C.G.E.—Goal, Cameron; defence, Doddridge and Ashmore; centre Hall; wings, Allin and Killoran; subs., Hedger and Masterson.

Cogs—Goal, Payne; defence, A. Davis and D. Davis; centre, Cripps; wings, Wilson and Graham; subs., Rooke and Heal.

Summary.

First period:
Cogs—Cripps, 10.00.
Second period:
C.G.E.—Allin, 16.00.
Cogs—Wilson (Cripps), 18.00.
C.G.E.—Allin, 20.00.
C.G.E.—Killoran, 24.00.
Third period:
No score.
Penalties—Doddridge, Allin, Rooke, Hall, Cripps.

De Laval Blanks Church Team.

The last game of the night was slightly one-sided, the George Street Church team being no match for the speed and team work of the De Laval, who took them into camp to the tune of 6 to 0.

The De Laval, with their red-headed forward line, were very speedy, and teamed up well, working their combination with persistent accuracy. Dallin, Creighton, and Edgar, who played Junior O.H.A. for Peterborough in 1922 are all red-headed, hardly ran true to form, as this trio turned in a perfectly clean game. The losers although very brilliant individually lacked the teamwork that results in close in shots, and as a result had their long drives picked off easily by Johnny Ward.

But there was more to the De Laval victory than the wizardry of the forward line as every member of the team played and checked back with a determination that speled victory from the initial face-off. Fowler, the De Laval defence man, made some very clever rushes, netting the first counter with a long shot from mid-ice, but it was quite apparent that his work would have been a great deal more effective had he passed the puck.

Outstanding Players.

Allin, Gillespie, and Graham were the outstanding players for George Street Church, while every member of the team were remarkable for their clean playing. Creighton, Jones and Evans all worked splendidly for the winners, while taken as a whole, the De Laval hockey machine seems to be as smooth-working as any of the senior entries.

The teams:

George Street Church — Goal, Delahaye; defence, Graham and Gillespie; centre, Magee; wings, Allin and Robertson; subs., Terry and McColl.

De Laval — Goal, Ward; defence, Evans and Fowler; centre, Jones; wings, Dallin and Edgar; subs., Miller and Creighton.

Referee—H. Ranger.

Summary.

First Period—
De Laval—Fowler 7.00.
De Laval—Edgar, 9.00.
Second Period—
De Laval—Creighton, 16.0
Third Period—
De Laval—Jones, 33.00.
De Laval—Jones (Dallin), 37.00.
De Laval—Creighton, 41.00.
Penalties—Dallin, Magee and Jones.

CANUCKS BLANK CANOEISTS.

Playing an offensive game in what was also combined flashes of combination hockey that netted them three counters in the first period, two in the second and one in the third, in all a total of six goals, the Canuck sextette easily blanked the Peterborough Canoe club in the opening junior game of the City Hockey League last night. The losers depended upon individual rushes solely for their goal-getting, and although they came within scoring distance of the Canuck net several times, the Red and White sweatered crew were there every time to stop the rushes of the Canoeists.

Burke, wing man for the Canuck club, was by far the star player of the fixture, his stick-handling and clean body checking being one of the chief features of the game, while Hatton and Creighton did their part in adding to the total for the victors. Hatton scoring the third tally of the game in a lone rush down the centre ice in the second period. Creighton sank the first and third counters in the first period. The game was regularly free of penalties. The Canuck players collected the only two which were issued in the second period, Creighton and Burke being the offenders.

The line-ups were:

Canuck Club—Goal, Foley; defence, Hatton and Stante; wings, Bernie Jones and Creighton; centre, Burke; sub., J. Jones.

Canoe Club — Goal, Merritt; defence, G. Stemer and Smith; wings Jarvis and R. Stenner; centre, F. Daniels; subs., Fredenburg and O'Brien.

Second period:
Hatton—Canuck.
Burke—Canuck.
Penalties—Burke and Creighton.
Third period:

VIEWS ON SPORT

The Peterborough Hockey Club's Juniors have a difficult assignment when they play Bowmanville in that town Monday night.

Last night's Bowmanville battle if played at the Brock would have had the fans talking for a month. The Petes looked like a million dollars; every player showing neat stickhandling ability, speedy skating and the team's combination was irresistible toward the last of the game, sweeping two and three men abreast past the defence.

* * * * * * *

The Petes have a clever, fast forward line in Foley, Dundas, and Maudsley, and the defence of Legon, Ted Lebarr and Jack Lebarr between the posts, on their showing in Bowmanville, left nothing to be desired, very, very few attacks getting past them.

* * * * * * *

In beating Bowmanville on their own narrow, little rink the Petes proved their strength and should win the group handily.

* * * * * * *

The referee, Jimmy McFadden, although rather loose in catching offsides was fair and the abuse he received from the Bowmanville fans was certainly uncalled for. One fan, in particular, who called loud abusive names at the ref. from the safety of the crowd was picked off and evicted from the rink by a constable.

* * * * * * *

It looks as thought St. John's will win the group after their well-earned win over the old enemy, the Lindsay Midgets, on their own door step.

* * * * * * *

The City Hockey League exhibited some fine hockey in the opening games last night. The City League has four juvenile four junior, and six senior teams playing, and it is in this league that many a lad has received his earlier hockey training. The city seems to be going at it from the right end to develope future hockey teams.

* * * * * * *

The Willowdale team of Toronto, on which Frankie Collins is holding down centre ice is reported to be the strongest Intermediate team around Toronto and last night they continued their victories by winning over the first string Oshawa 5 to 1.

* * * * * * *

Oshawa made it two straight from the Bowmanville Junior by defeating them 4 to 1 at Whitby last night. Oshawa looms up as the big obstacle in the group.

* * * * * * *

Basketball is booming around the "Y" and a team will invade Lindsay next week.

* * * * * * *

Perhaps some of the local hockey managers will adopt the same rule that "Newsy Lalonde has issued to his Niagara Falls Canadian-pro team. "Newsy" claims that dancing is bad exercise for hockey players and he enforces the strict rule that none of his proteges shall "trip the light fantastic" during the playing season. The Falls' chief claims that in dancing, the feet get just the opposite kind of action from skating, and he doesn't want his men to go fox-trotting on their necks when they are in a good scoring position.

* * * * * * *

One-eyed Connolly, better known as the gate crasher extraordinary, ran into a real barrier in Pittsburg recently and before passing on handed out a watch and $116 to two highwaymen. Connolly was out walking after a strenuous day of "doing nothing" when the bandits accosted and they, paying no heed to his reputation as a "jogger-by-gates" demanded whatever change and jewelry he had.

* * * * * * *

The National League scouts have been combing the by-ways and highways for good ball tossers and over one hundred ambitious young baseball players will drop in on the eight training camps this spring. Some of these will have had previous trials but many are youthful bushers, who played smart ball in minor leagues last season, and have impressive batting and fielding marks to their credit. New faces will likely appear on every line-up.

THEATRES

AT THE REGENT

Helene Costello, sister of Dolores is featured in "Good Time Charley" the Warner Bros. production which comes to the Regent Theatre next Monday for a run of three days.

Warner Oland and Clyde Cook are also featured, and Julanne Johnston, Montague Love and Hugh Allan are prominently cast. Michael Curtiz directed. "Good Time Charley" is from the pen of Darryl Francis Zanuck and tells the serio-comic life drama of a small town song-and-dance-man, his trusty pal, and his orphaned daughter who grows up and triumphs on the stage while her father's star is waning. The pal has kept secret from Charley the fact that the theatrical manager has been the case of his wife's early death, and Charley is an inmate of the Actors' Home, when he learns the truth.

In mad fury he gropes his way to the office of his enemy, and with failing sight, shoots his reflection in the mirror, hastening to give himself up, as a murderer. Complications, swift and moving, tangle the lives of the actors in the glittering panorama—and the climax is a terrific one.

There is a haunting beauty about the character of happy-go-lucky, well-meaning, erring, old Charley as played by Warner Oland and his changing fortune are followed with breathless interest. Never has life beyond the footlights been more realistically depicted.

AT THE CAPITOL.

LOVE VS. CAREER IS THEME OF FOX FILM

Love or a career! Which takes precedence?

That question is answered, in a most dramatic way, in Fox Films "Mother Knows Best," featuring Madge Bellamy, Louise Dresser and Barry Norton, and due at the Capitol Theatre on Monday for a three day's engagement.

"Mother Knows Best" is based on the widely read and internationally discussed story by Edna Ferber, said to be based on the actual lives of a famous stage star and her mother but actually just a similarity to a score of mothers and daughters dating back to Corinne and her mother. Jennie Kimball, a matter of a half century ago.

The picture reveals the transition of a stage child to a Broadway star with a theatre named after her. Through it all the daughter is merely a puppet with mother pulling the strings until the daughter comes in contact with romance and awakening in the girl that there is something more in life than just the footlights. The battle is on with a surprise denouement.

"Mother Knows Best," capably directed by John Blystone, successful Fox director, brings to the screen as "Sally" the girl, a new Madge Bellamy, likewise a more brilliant than ever actress in Louise Dresser as the mother, as well as superb work by the entire supporting cast.

AT THE GRAND.

FANNY'S FIRST PLAY and THE DARK LADY OF THE SONNETS

On January 19th at the Grand Theatre Maurice Colbourne will present a double bill of Shavian comedies. The pieces of the evening will be "Fanny's First Play", a delicious 3 act comedy and light as froth, and this will be preceded by "The Dark Lady of the Sonnets", a one act piece, half comedy, half farce, and full of laughter. In this latter piece, the character are a Beefeater, Queen Elizabeth, William Shakespeare and the Dark Lady. Good Queen Bess will be played by Constance Pelissier who has won such success as the mother of the irrepressible twins in "You Can Never Tell."

The part of Shakespeare, who in the play is an extraordinarily cheeky fellow, is played by Maurice Colbourne himself.

The way in which, in "The Dark Lady," Shakespeare escapes being arrested for high treason and turns the tables on her Royal Majesty is one of the drollest and most amusing things that ever fell from the pen of the great G. B. S.

"Potboiler" is the word which Bernard Shaw himself uses to describe his comedy "Fanny's First Play": that is to say, it is in his lightest, gayest vein. He says "I hate to see dead" people walking about; it is unnatural. And our respectable middle "class people are all as dead as mutton."

The play deals with two such families and the way in which they are suddenly gingered up into unwonted liveliness is too good to be revealed beforehand. Suffice it to say that the younger members of the families knock policemen's hats off in the middle of the night and find great exhilaration in suffering the penalties of the law for doing so; while perhaps the chief "gingerer-up" is a delightful young lady called Darling Dora, who though bringing consternation to the two families, undoubtedly adds very much to the gaiety of nations in general.

Darling Dora will serve to introduce to patrons of the Grand Theatre Miss Phillis Coghlan, one of the loveliest members of Mr. Colbourne's Company.

Miss Pelissier, Miss Rowell, Mr. Pyott and Mr. Larking will appear as the parents; Miss Humphreys and Mr. Barry Jones as their respective children; and Mr. Coulbourne himself will appear as the mysterious footman, Juggins.

Uncle Wiggily

UNCLE WIGGILY AND LULU'S PRESENT

(Copyright, 1929, McClure Syndicate.)

When Uncle Wiggily sat down to the table of good things to eat at the surprise party of Lulu Wibblewobble, the rabbit gentleman heard a whisper, as I told you in the story last night. And the whisper surprised him very much even while he was looking at the big chocolate cake which he had brought to the party.

Now the whisper that Uncle Wiggily heard, as he sat down with the others after playing games, came from Jackie Bow Wow, the puppy dog boy. And Jackie whispered to Sammie Littletail, the rabbit, and said:

"What did you bring Lulu for a present?"

"I brought her a picture book," said Sammie. "What did you bring her, Jackie?"

"I brought her a story book and I have it here under my coat," softly barked the puppy dog. "And after we get through eating I'm going to give Lulu my present."

"So am I!" said Sammie.

And when he heard these whispers, all of a sudden Uncle Wiggily felt very queer for he said to himself:

"Goodness me! I haven't brought Lulu any present except that chocolate cake and that doesn't count, for everybody will eat part of that and it won't be for Lulu at all. I should have brought her a present such as a necklace of shells or a bracelet of beans or something like that. How stupid of me to forget! I was so excited about that chocolate cake that I never thought of a present. And everybody else will be giving Lulu one after we eat and she surely will expect one from me and I won't have any to give her! Oh, this is dreadful!"

The rabbit gentleman felt so badly about this that he did not hear all the other talk that was going on around him. But he caught the word "present" several times and he knew the other children were speaking of what they were going to give Lulu.

"I wonder if I couldn't slip out to a drug store and buy something before it is too late?" thought Uncle Wiggily, as he reached for the pitcher of water when Mrs. Wibblewobble asked him to pass the spoons and the duck lady looked at him sort of queer like.

"Oh, excuse me," said Uncle Wiggily. "It was pepper you asked for."

"No! Spoons" laughed Mrs. Wibblewobble with a quack and she wondered what Uncle Wiggily was thinking of to be so absent-minded.

"Yes, I'll slip out to a drug store and get Lulu a present," said the bunny to himself, pushing back his chair. "Drug stores keep open late and they have things that little duck girls like." But as Uncle Wiggily started to go away from the table Mr. Wibblewobble quacked:

"Keep your seat, Mr. Longears! The party isn't half over yet. The best part is yet to come. We're going to cut your chocolate cake."

"Yes, and there's something else, too!" barked Jackie and he partly took his story book out from beneath his coat—the book he was going to give Lulu as a present.

"Dear me!" thought Uncle Wiggily. "I don't dare say why I want to go out. Lulu would think I didn't love her if I said I was going out now to get her a present at a drug store. She will think I should have brought the present with me when I brought the cake. And so I should have done if I hadn't been so forgetful! Oh what shall I do?"

Once again the bunny tried to slip out to go get Lulu a present, but each time Mr. Wibblewobble caught him and, not knowing the reason, made Uncle Wiggily sit down again. At last Mrs. Wibblewobble said:

"Now I will cut Uncle Wiggily's chocolate cake!"

"Yes, and then we will give Lulu her presents!" cried Susie Littletail.

"Oh, dear! And I haven't one to give her!" thought Uncle Wiggily. His pink nose twinkled very fast. Mrs. Wibblewobble thrust a knife into the big chocolate cake. It seemed to stick. Then the cake fell apart and out of it rolled a package, wrapped in oiled paper and tied with a pink ribbon. Mrs. Wibblewobble looked at the package and read:

"A present from Uncle Wiggily to Lulu!"

"Oh, what is it?" screamed the duck girl, clapping her wings. And when the present was opened, inside was a lovely red shell necklace.

"Oh, how wonderful!" quacked Lulu, rushing over to kiss Uncle Wiggily. "And how clever of you to hide my present in the chocolate cake!"

"Ye-ye-yes!" stammered the rabbit gentleman. "Wasn't it!"

And then he thought, which was the truth, that this was a trick of Nurse Jane's, who baked the cake, to put a present for Lulu inside as a surprise, not only for the duck girl, but for Mr. Longears as well.

Anyhow, the bunny didn't have to go out to buy a gift at the drug store and everybody was happy—Lulu most of all and not a crumb of chocolate cake was left.

RAPS WIFE TRADING.

CLEVELAND, O., Jan. 12.—Judge Carl V. Weygandt went on record here recently against wife trading In a suit for divorce brought by John Kader against his wife who, he charged, left him for another man whose own wife had come to Kader, the judge said: "They divide their children like so many wheelbarrows They trade them like groceries Some call two men their fathers. It's the most inhuman thing I've heard of in 1600 divorces cases."

FREED WOMAN IS REVEALED AS NOTED SPY

did care very deeply for the wife of his one-time friend.

Once more the little French woman believed him. In a moment of resolution she put up to his wife the matter of divorcing him that she and he might marry. Mrs. Martelliere agreed. Her husband, she told the other woman, had forfeited her love long since. If he would make provision for her and their children she would grant him his freedom. She hoped Mrs. Saludes would make him happy.

Refused to Keep Word.

Martelliere apparently was overjoyed. He used the occasion to induce Mme. Saludes to transfer to him title to her husband's business, her home, her jewels, her automobile. Having disposed of all these, he told his trusting sweetheart he was through with her.

The interview took place in his office.

"Then you do not intend to carry out any of the promises you made me?" Mme. Saludes asked.

"No," he said pointedly.

"You would force me into the streets?" she persisted.

"I do not care," he shrugged.

Mme. Saludes went to an attorney. She wanted Martelliere arrested. The attorney pointed out that it would be hard to convict him of defrauding her in view of the documents she had given the broker.

Mme. Saludes returned to make one more plea to Martelliere. He was out of his office. In a drawer of his desk she found a revolver and concealed it in her lap while she awaited his return.

He Again Refused.

Martelliere was brusk and rude when he found here there. Once more, according to a stengrapher who overheard them, Mme. Saludes demanded that he make good his promises to her. Once more he refused.

Five shots rang out. All of them found a resting place in Martelliere's body. He dropped to the floor and Mme. Saludes rushed out. An hour or two later, after Martelliere had died in a hospital, she was surrendered to the authorities by her attorney to whose office she had returned.

To the authorities Mme. Saludes spoke frankly of the relations with Martelliere which led to his killing, but said she had been driven to emotional insanity by his acts. Of her past, however, she was strangely incommunicative. Who or what she was before she became the wife of Saludes she would not tell and efforts to find out in France met a blank wall.

Even when the district attorney in an effort to spare her the electric chair offered to let her plead guilty to manslaughter if she would be frank about herself, she but sealed her lips tighter, faced a jury and made that plea of emotional insanity her sole defense.

France Did Not Forget.

Eventually Auburn prison shut her in and the world forgot, all the world that is, but France. Unceasingly its representatives in this country have maneouvered to bring about her release and return to her native land. Officially, it could not do anything. Spies expect nothing else, however great their service may have been.

Unofficially, however, France's representatives were busy. She had been in prison but two years when the judge who had presided at her trial and the district attorney who had prosecuted her agreed not to oppose her release. Governor Smith, however, was a bit more adamant. He decline to interfere after so short an incarceration for her but is believed to have promised to free her before he left the governorship.

NEW DOLLAR BILLS

WASHINGTON, Jan. 12—The government is pulling a fast one and crossing up the gent who makes his living by manufacturing Federal money. New Federal bills will soon be issued about one-third smaller, in both dimensions, than the present bills.

RAPID PROGRESS HAS BEEN MADE

Sir George Eules Foster, now also in the Red Chamber, were members for Yale and Caribou, and York, N. B., respectively.

Canada has grown remarkably since the opening of the century and her statesmen are taking a greater interest in world affairs, but it is surprising how similar in many respects was the Parliamentary bill of fare in 1900 compared with that of the present day.

Hostilities had recently broken out between Great Britain and the South African Republic when Parliament met in 1900 and Canada sent two contingents of volunteers to the seat of war, not including Lord Strathcona's Horse, equipped at the expense of the former High Commissioner of America.

Similar Problems Arising.

The British preferential tariff, inaugurated by Fielding in 1897, had the happy effect of recementing and intensifying the cordial relations existing between Canada and England.

A reduction has been made in the letter postage rate, Premier King has just announced another reduction effective throughout the British Empire; trade with the West Indies has been encouraged, Canada still is fostering it by improved steamship service just inaugurated, and the Governor-General in his Speech from the Throne announced that "our canal system is connecting the Great Lakes with the Atlantic seaboard, has been completed so as to allow vessels having a draft of fourteen feet to pass from the head of Lake Superior to the sea." The present Government is considering a scheme to deepen this waterway to twenty-five feet at a cost of several hundred million dollars.

TENDERS WANTED.

On behalf of a Client, we offer for Sale, by Tender, House Number 771 Water Street, Peterborough. This property is an Eight-Room Brick House, with all modern conveniences. Tenders will be accepted up to Wednesday, the 23rd instant. The lowest or any Tender not necessarily accepted. Cheque for 10% of the amount should accompany each Tender.

PECK, KERR & McELDERRY, Solicitors, 415 Water Street, Peterborough, Ontario. 5d-5,9,12,16,19-4885

DRAMATIC ART IS DISCUSSED BY MRS. PETTIT

MAN'S INHERITANCE.

Following Address Mrs. Pettit Gave Audience Series of Greek Statue Poses.

A Talk on Dramatic Art by Mrs. L. J. Pettit was the subject of the meeting yesterday afternoon, in the studios at the Conservatory of Music, of the Women's Art Association. Taking the attitude of the actor and his audience as the basis of the address which formed the first portion of the program, Mrs. Pettit gave the second portion to Greek statue pose which were extremely effective and aroused the enthusiastic appreciation of her audience. These were done against a background of velvet hangings, in a Greek costume of white, with the traditional classic lines in its long, flowing draperies and pearl filet.

Displaying a wonderful command of memory in the manner in which she gave an eloquent, beautifully-worded address, with only a brief reference to notes, Mrs. Pettit outlined Dramatic Art for her hearers.

The speaker defined her subject as "the art of expressing one's mental and spiritual impressions through the personality."

"Man has always had an urge for self-expression", she said, "and the effort has been made in different ways through the ages. The war-dance of the Indians, the self-inflicted suffering of the Hindu, the hari-kari of the Japanese, are all developments of this mental and spiritual urge within, just as are the masterpieces of art in history.

"History reveals what men and women have done in the past, literature what they have thought, but what they have dreamed and idealized is art. But art is a means of expression, rather than the end itself. Art is the method of expression of a man who has something to say and says it in a poem, or in music, or in a play. Art is a divine inspiration to awaken and keep alive the wonder in man and to lift him above the materialism of everyday existence. Art is the expression of a wonderful interpretation of inward truth and the world's failure to applaud cannot dampen creative genius.

Man's Inheritance.

"Art in painting and music and literature has kept pace with the evolution of the race, but sometimes I wonder if the increasing materialism of our age will not cause us to lose such an inheritance. The art of dramatic self-expression through the personality is as old as time, as civilized as the ages and as eternal as the soul. Personality is the supreme factor in the expression of truth."

Mrs. Pettit quoted here some blank verse written by herself around the story of Genesis.

Then she went on: "Through the centuries man has remained more or less of an embodied mystery and it has only been when he has been able to harmonize the three-sided nature with which he is endowed; the sensitive, the intellectual and the spiritual, that he has been eabled to rise to his highest development. Demosthenes defined the first and last characteristic of dramatic art as action, but I would say rather that the first and last attribute should be truth, and that the expression of personality should constitute all that is beautiful and good in the mind and the heart, while the body should be disciplined in order that it to may express truth in the highest degree.

"The power to sway his audiences has been lauded as the summit of the actor's art and this is possible only through a controlled and disciplined personality. The wider the actors experience of life in all its phases, the wider will be his scope of influence. All art demands sacrifice on the part of its exponents, and none more so than dramatic art. Art is ruthless in its demands on the mind and body."

Referring to the media of dramatic expression as being vocal, verbal and visible, or patomimic, Mrs. Pettit emphasized the importance of a flexible, vibrant, appealing tone as indispensable to the actor. Grace in movement should be practised and affectation or exaggeration avoided. The elusive, spiritual, rhythmic quality which is the essence of the genius of the great artist defies capture, but it is this very soul of truth in its expressions which makes the difference between the great and the mediocre dramatic artist.

Greek Statue Poses.

Following her address, Mrs. Pettit devoted a short period of time to giving her audience a series of Greek statue poses which were supber in their presentation, and illustrated the graceful freedom of movement which had been emphasized in her address. Mrs. Pettit's command of language in her address excited the admiration of her hearers and her graceful ease and ability to depict, in a swift, sudden change of posture and facial expression, various moods, aroused their intense admiration and they applauded heartily this portion of the program.

With varying attitudes and expressions, these poses, are arranged by the great French master of movement, Delsarte, depicted in turn such emotions as triumph, horror, listening, abhorrence, astonishment, anguish, faith, mourning, resignation, pain, secrecy, challenge, impudence, bashfulness, sympathy, disdain, curiosity, determination, revenge, shame, ridicule, anger, flattery and many others. They were extraordinary in the effect achieved so simply and were announced by Mrs. Pettit's daughter, Shirley. Music for the poses was played softly by Mrs. T. Cruikshanks.

At the conclusion of the program, a very appreciative vote of thanks to Mrs. Pettit for her interesting and out of the ordinary program, which is an introduction to the formation of a Dramatic Study Club, was voiced by the president, Mrs. W. Blackwell.

Afternoon tea was then served.

U.S. air mail poundage for October totaled 467,422, an increase of ten per cent over September.

DAIRY PRODUCE IS PLENTIFUL

BUTTER 43c. PER POUND.

The basket section of the farmers' market was glutted with dairy produce and fowl this morning. At a late hour, birds of all size and shapes remained unsold, as was the case with dozens of baskets of eggs and many pounds of butter.

Prices did not react appreciably to the large supply. Chickens of a milk-fed quality were quoted at 35 cents a pound, while 30 and 33 cents was the regular price, with a few birds at 28 cents a pound. There were many large chickens on the market this morning, several touching a weight of nearly seven pounds.

Butter was 43 cents a pound, generally and eggs were 40 to 43 cents a dozen. Cream was 30 cents a pint.

On the open market, supplies were at the usual range of prices. Potatoes were $1 a bag and apples ranged from 45 to 75 cents a peck, varying qualities.

Beef was 16 and 18 cents a pound for front and hind sections and pork was 18 and 20 cents. Lamb was 26 and 28 cents a pound. A beef tongue was priced at 60 cents, a pig's head, larger than most, was 75 cents and pork livers sold at 20 cents apiece.

Fire Chief Gimblett expressed his need of the co-operation of citizens in keeping the snow removed from around the hyrants. Many of the hydrants are low and the snowplows often pile the snow high around the hydrants, often almost covering them up, and if people who have hydrants near their property would, while shovelling the snow from their walks, also remove it from the proximity of the hydrants the Chief declared that this would help the fire prevention service very materially.

COURT UPHOLDS PLEA OF CHICAGO

Chief Justice Taft Holds Valid Permit For Water Diversion

Chicago Will Be Permitted To Continue To Withdraw Water From Lake Michigan, Pending Completion of Other Arrangements For Sewage Disposal.

WINDY CITY IS CONDEMNED FOR ITS ATTITUDE AND PRACTICES IN THE CONTROVERSY WITH STATES

Matter is Further Referred to Justice Hughes to Determine Form of Decree Which Court Should Enter Into to Reduce Volume of Diversion.

WASHINGTON, D.C., January 14 (Canadian Press). — Chicago won a victory to-day in its controversy with other Great Lakes states over the diversion of water from Lake Michigan.

The Court sustained as valid the permit issued by the Secretary of War under which the Chicago Sanitary District was withdrawing the water.

Under the decision, which was delivered by Chief Justice Taft, Chicago will be permitted to continue the withdrawal under the terms of the permit pending completion of other arrangements for sewage disposal.

Chief Justice Taft said that the permit of the Secretary of War was authorized to protect navigation in Chicago Harbor, and was not and could not be authorized for disposal of sewage. The Chief Justice said the permit did not authorize the diversion to aid navigation on the lakes to the Gulf waterway.

Condemning Chicago for its attitude and practices the Court again referred the controversy to Mr. Hughes as special master to determine the form of decree which the Court should enter to reduce as rapidly as possible the volume of diversion.

The decision sustained that part of the findings of Charles Evans Hughes, who as the court's representative took testimony in the case, that the permit granted by the Secretary of War in March, 1925, authorizing the diversion was valid, and that Congress had full authority to control it.

States Joins in Attack.

All of the Great Lakes States excepting Illinois and Indiana joined in attacking the diversion as illegal, contending that Congress alone had authority to permit it when it impaired the navigable capacity of the Great Lakes. They insisted that under treaties the consent of Canada must be obtained before any withdrawal could be permitted which would lower lake levels. New York specifically challenged the validity of the diversion on the ground that it impaired the State's water rights in developing Hydro-Electric power.

All of the Mississippi River States south of Illinois, including Missouri joined in contending that the diversion permit granted by the Secretary of War was legal. Chicago Sanitary District and Illinois asserted it was in compliance with a former decision of the Supreme Court in a case brought by the Federal government against the sanitary district which specifically recognized the right of the Secretary of War to grant a permit. They challenged the right of the Great Lakes States to bring such suits, asserting that the Federal Government had exclusive control over all matters relating to commerce. The Mississippi Valley States insisted the diversion was valid because it aided navigation on the lakes to the Gulf waterway.

FAMOUS WRITER TELLS CLUB OF HIS WANDERINGS

Dr. Charles G. D. Roberts Gives Whimsical Talk to Rotarians.

WORD PICTURES.

Dean of Canadian Letters Proves Most Entertaining Speaker.

"A man should never be contented at least until he is ninety-five, for contentment means stagnation," declared Dr. Charles G. D. Roberts, famous Canadian author and poet in a whimsical and delightful little talk to the Peterborough Rotary club today.

Dr. Roberts said that at first when he had accepted an invitation to address the Rotary Club he had decided to adopt a serious vein and speak on Canadian literature with regard to its importance in developing Canadian unity, but en route to Peterborough he had been in conversation with a Toronto man who had been chained to business for thirty-five years or more, and who yearned to be a wanderer. Having been a roamer all his life himself, Dr. Roberts resolved that he would give a light touch to his remarks to the Rotary Club, by relating some entertaining incidents that had happened to him during his wanderings.

And thus the Rotarians had a half hour of sheer delight, as the gifted writer, in a few deftly-drawn pictures, full of color and romance, took them into strange lands and among strange people. The little sketch of the French cottage half hidden in roses, renting for the ridiculous sum of 100 francs a month and with a marvellous cellar that contained a most wonderful wine that sold at 35 centimes a bottle; the story of the Tunisian chief who proved to hail from Dr. Roberts' own county in New Brunswick, and the description of the hospitable native ruler who honored his visitors by turning over to them his favorite wife, were fascinating pages from this little travelogue, brightened with frequent touches of dry wit that made the recital most entertaining.

Dr. Roberts explained his wonderings on the ground of necessity. He was a Blue-nose, and the people of the Maritime Provinces were naturally wanderers, and the farther you

SIX MAROONED IN HIGH TOWER

Fire Breaks Out in Great Woolworth Building in New York.

HIGHEST CONFLAGRATION.

NEW YORK, Jan. 14 (Canadian Press).—A young woman and five men were marooned for ten minutes yesterday on the fifty-fourth floor platform of the Woolworth Tower when fire broke out in machinery installation on the fifty-fifth floor. The fire was put out. Damage was negligible.

Edward J. Link, an accountant, who was accompanied by his sister-in-law, Miss Margaret Shields of Bay City, Mich., was the first person to fight his way through the smoke and flames down the circular stairway to the fifty-fourth floor.

There he found Miss Phoebe Smith, a souvenir-stand saleswoman, and several guards. While they called firemen, Link fought his way back to the marooned party, threw his overcoat over Miss Shields and escorted her down the stairway to safety. Two of the marooned men followed.

Link then unrolled an emergency fire hose, and, with the aid of several of the guards, was directing a stream of water into the heart of the blaze by the time the firemen arrived.

PRISONERS OBJECT TO PRISON RATIONS

Outbreaks Occur On Friday and Saturday—Police On Guard.

PHILADELPHIA, Pa., Jan. 14 (Canadian Press).—More than fifty city police remained on guard at the country prison at Homesburg to-day, as a result of a series of disturbances inside the jail Friday and Saturday, but the trouble had ended.

The first outbreak occurred Friday noon when the prisoners were being served with food. They had been complaining about the quality of food and then they found that no tea accompanied the meal there was a louder protest.

GAS MAIN BREAKS IN CITY OF OSHAWA

Fumes Penetrated Many Homes Last Night, Rendering Two Women Unconscious.

OSHAWA, Ont., Jan. 14.—(Canadian Press).—Fumes from a broken gas main of the Oshawa Gas Company penetrated many homes in this city last night, rendering two women unconscious. The fumes which travelled through the underground telephone conducts, advanced more than a mile from the original break; entering churches. Test of gas main failed to reveal the break and to-day, the city of Oshawa is without gas, the main source having been turned off as a "precautionary method."

AFGHAN KING HAS ABDICATED

Quits in Favor of His Elder Brother Prince Inayatullah.

SITUATION OBSCURE.

LONDON, Jan. 14 (Canadian Press).—British official advices late to-day confirmed reports from Peshawa that King Amanullah of Afghanistan has abdicated in favor of his elder brother, Prince Inayatullah.

The exact situation in Afghanistan for the past week has been somewhat obscure. Recent despatches have indicated that fighting between the King's forces and the rebels had somewhat died down, although there were reports of sporadic clashes.

Despatches from New Delhi last week told of the publication in an Afghan newspaper of a proclamation supposed to have been signed by Amanullah, in which he rescinded most of his recently prolonged regulations for the westernization of his country.

During the heavy fighting around Kabul last month before the rebels were driven off, there was a rumor that Amanullah had abdicated, but this later proved untrue.

Amanullah Khan, is the third son of Amer Habibullah Khan. He was born in 1892 and succeeded to the throne on the assassination of his father in February, 1919. Inayatullah is four years older than Amanullah, having been born October 20, 1888.

Stanley A. Lowe Is Appointed to Fill Vacancy on Council

Peterborough's 1929 Council Holds Inaugural Meeting—Committee Chairmen Are Appointed and Committees Chosen —Mayor Denne Outlines Work For Year.

PROSPECTS ARE BRIGHT FOR GOOD YEAR; NEW MEMBERS ARE WELCOMED TO COUNCIL

Gas Plant Purchase Will Be One of First Items the Council Will Have To Deal With—Addition Has To Be Built To Disposal Plant.

Ex-Alderman Stanley A. Lowe was appointed to the vacancy left in city council by the resignation of Lie ut. Col. Chas. H. Ackerman at the inaugural meeting of the City Council for 1929 this morning. The chairmen of the cimmittees and the members were also appointed.

Alderman Nagel Phelan was re-appointed to his veteran post as chairman of the Finance Committee; Alderman Walter Stocker succeeds J. M. Greene as chairman of the Railways and Parks committee. Alderman Cotton was re-appointed for the third term as chairman of the Fire, Water and Light committee and Alderman McIntyre retains the chairmanship of the Manufacturers committee. Alderman Harry Huffman takes his first office as chairman of the property committee.

Mayor Denne in his inaugural address said:—

"In beginning another year's work for the city, I wish to welcome Alderman McIntyre, Phelan and Huffman back to their old seats in the Council Chamber and to give a cordian welcome to the new members, Aldermen McNabb and Holland. You, I know, regret with me the retirement of J. M. Greene, who was a hardworking member of the Council and always kept in view the interests of the ratepayers.

"One of our first acts will be to appoint an Alderman in the place of Chas. H. Ackerman, who resigned at the end of the year. Mr. Ackerman found that his business interests required his absence from the city so frequently that he felt that he could not give that attention to the city's business that he desired to give and that they required. It may be that you will recall to the council one of last year's members, Stanley A. Lowe, to fill the vacancy.

"In a municipality of the size to which Peterborough has grown there are important matters to be dealt with every year, and this year, if it is an exception, is so because matters of unusual importance will require attention."

Purchase of Gas Plant

"The by-law authorizing the purchase of the gas works having been approved of by the ratepayers, the purchase of this plant will be one of the first businesses to be taken up. While the Utilities Commission will have charge of the operation of the works after they are taken over, the council will attend to the details of the purchase.

"The addition to the sewage disposal plant is another subject to be dealt with. The Department of Health for Ontario, has issued an order that the addition be made, and plans have been prepared for this purpose. There is not in Ontario a system such as is proposed here and the matter must be carefully considered.

"Last year notice was given of the intention of the Council to construct asphalt pavements on a number of streets. The notice was given then so that the necessary preparations could be made. Early consideration should be given as to whether all of this work will be carried out this year, and the tenders asked for in order that an early beginning in the construction may be made.

Attract Industries

"The Council has for a number of years made earnest efforts to add to the number of industries of the city and has been fairly successful. The work will of course be continued this year in the same vigorous way.

"The Committees should as soon as possible have their estimates prepared, for until the budget for the year is completed the work cannot be carried on satisfactorily. Ef-

TRINITY CHURCH HOLDS ITS 57TH ANNIVERSARY

Rev. Clarke F. Logan, of Ottawa, is the Special Preacher for the Day.

SPECIAL MUSIC BY CHOIR.

Need of Social Work Is Stressed at Evening Sederunt of Worship.

Yesterday marked another important day in the long history of Trinity United Church being the occasion of the 57th anniversary since the time when Charlotte Street became a separate pastoral from the parent church George Street. The Rev. Clarke F. Logan of Ottawa was the special speaker for the services and he preached powerful, heart-searching sermons both morning and evening.

"Lift up your eyes and look on the fields for they are ripe already to harvest" was his text for his evening sermon and he brought home to his congregaton the need for individual social service if the needs of those about us are to be remedied. All the improvements that have come about in raising the standards of education, morals and life were started and pushed to completion by someone, who saw the need and was big enough to take upon himself the responsibility of working for the cure of them. The speaker urged his hearers to take upon themselves the work of helping others and righting the wrongs that are being done about and not say "somebody should do that"; but do it themselves. The world's work is never done and Jesus said, "The poor ye have always with ye." The speaker further urged not to delay for public opinion citing the case of Christopher Columbus who if he had waited until public opinion said that he should sail westward and find America, would never have sailed.

Special Music.

The music of the choir was especially good at both services, the solos and the anthems being heard in splendid voice.

The music for the morning service was:—"O Praise the Lord"—Anthem—by Tschaikousky.

Recit.—"Ye People Rend Your Hearts."

Air—"If with All Your Hearts" from the "Elijah" by Mendelssohn.

Evening:

Chorus—"Judge Me O God" Mendelssohn.

"O Come Let Us Worship"— by Mendelssohn —tenor solo by Mr. Park.

"Now the Sun is Sinking," Ashworth —soloists Mrs. W. Hohner, Miss A. Blanchard, Messrs M. Park and A. Barton.

Famous Painter Takes Own Life, Had Been Suffering From Cancer

NEW YORK, N.Y., January 14 (Canadian Press). — Because he suffered from cancer, Emil Fuchs, famous painter and sculptor, committed suicide by shooting in his studio yesterday. He was 63.

After writing a note to his sister, Renee Fuchs, the artist fired a bullet into his heart. In the note, Fuchs said he was a burden to himself and his surroundings, and "to live longer would only mean prolonging my agony."

A native of Vienna, Fuchs had won renown with his portraits and other works, especially in England and America. He numbered among his patrons and clients members of royalty as well as persons prominent in society on both sides of the Atlantic.

John Singer Sargent, the painted, introduced Fuchs in London, and soon the Austrian artist became the vogue, receiving commissions from members of the British Royal Family and nobility. He remained in England 21 years; then came to America, largely because of the Great War and the attitude in England towards Austria as a result of it.

Low Temperatures In Northern Ontario, Thermometer 50 Below Zero At Cochrane

COBALT, Ont., January 14 (Canadian ress). — Extremely low temperatures were again recorded on northern thermometers last night, as the cold spell continued without signs of abatement. In Cobalt the mercury dropped to 35 below, at Englehart it fell to 46 below zero, and at Cochrane the figure was 50 below. The night was clear and still, the wind having dropped from yesterday morning. Cobalt Fire Brigade was called out at one o'clock this morning when a roadster caught fire on Lang Street, and was totally destroyed. The radiator froze up, and the engine became overheated.

Delayed trains and interrupted wire communications marked the descent upon Ottawa this morning of the severest cold wave of the season. From the high point of 14 above yesterday, the mercury skidded sharply to the lower depths, with the minimum reading of 20 below zero, reported at 7 a.m.

DEPARTMENT IS CONSIDERING ENLARGING LAKE OUTLETS

Chief Engineer of Government Explains Situation at Lake Nipissing.

PROPERTY BEING DAMAGED.

Provincial Cabinet Takes Stand That Question Is Federal Affair.

OTTAWA, Ont., Jan. 14 (Canadian Press).—Department of Public Works experts are considering the practicability of enlarging the outlets of Lake Nipissing, following representations made to the government by a delegation of property owners from North Bay, who have complained in the past that erosion along the lake shore is destroying valuable property.

K. M. Cameron, chief engineer of the Department of Public Works, explained the situation in regard to Lake Nipissing Saturday. The government had widened the lake outlet through French River at considerable cost some years ago when it put in its dam system to bring the level of the lake to a point where it would allow navigation in a canal system linked with the Ottawa River. When the lake water rose above a certain point, he said, the government had paid to property owners for any property loss sustained. But with the outlet of the lake increased over and above that of the natural flow, the department had taken the stand that it was not bound to protect landowners against erosion. Any steps the department may take to increase the capacity of outlets will be pure courtesy, he explained.

Although property owners waited upon the provincial government to seek assistance, they were informed that it was a matter of federal responsibility.

The cost of building protecting walls about the lake where erosion has taken place, is said to be prohibitive.

INSTITUTE HOLDS REGULAR MEETING

Interesting Program Presented At Monthly Meeting of Marmora Society.

MARMORA, Jan. 14 (Examiner Correspondence)—The monthly meeting of Marmora Women's Institute was held on Wednesday at the home of Mrs. F. N. Marett, and proved one of the most interesting in the history of the branch. After the singing of "O Canada," the roll call, "most notable event in the year," was well responded to. Some excellent readings were then given by the following: "New Year's Greetings," Mrs. W. A. S. Anderson; "Vote," Mrs. C. Gordenier; "New Year's Origins," Mrs. W. E. Prentice; "The Spirit Peace," Mrs. D. E. Bell; "Miss Ruth Morgan," Mrs. H. W. Sabine; "Early Treatises on Table Manners," Mrs. F. E. Wells.

A contest on towns and villages was much enjoyed. An exhibition of antiques received closest attention. Those present were interested in seeing among other things, a pocketbook dating back to 1700, knitting needles about a century old, old-fashioned calling cards, and a piece of lady's headgear about 150 years old.

It was decided to have a summer speaker in June.

The February meeting will be held at the home of Mrs. D. E. Bell.

BUDAPEST, Jan. 11. — After a man's married, he very seldom sits on a park bench with his wife. Yet, city officials have ruled that anyone sitting in th epark with a lady friend must produce evidence that he and the girl friend are married—to each other.

NORTHERN AERIAL PARTY IS REPORTEDD SAFE IN NORTH

Group of Prospectors Reach Moonbeam On Their Return Trip From James Bay.

TWO AIRPLANES.

Cause of Delay Is Not Known —Weather Conditions Bad.

TORONTO, Ont., Jan. 14 (Canadian Press).—Fears for the safety of the Northern Aerial Minerals Exploration Company's expedition, missing with two airplanes in the James Bay region, were set at rest last night, when it was learned that all members of the party and both planes arrived safely at Moonbeam, west of Cochrane.

While the cause of the delay is as yet unknown, weather conditions are thought to have prevented the earlier return of the expedition, comprising officials of N.A.M.E. and prospectors. The party, headed by Colonel John Leckie, included Captain H. A. Oakes, chief pilot; "Pat" Reid, pilot; Thomas Caddick and Gordon Murray, mechanics, in addition to seven prospectors who have been at work in the north.

Gooderham Lumberman And Two Sons Die Within a Few Days From Influenza

LINDSAY, January 14 (Special to The Examiner). — A rather discouraging situation has developed in connection with the flu epidemic in this district, according to reports received. Dr. Hall, of Little Britain, who was in town on Friday, stated that there was an increase in the number of cases in Mariposa Township, while reports from Woodville, Beaverton, and other nearby villages would indicate that the epidemic was still serious, a number of cases proving fatal.

A tragic story of the ravages of the flu comes from Gooderham, Haliburton County. William Richardson, a lumberman of that hamlet, who lives with two sons and three daughters, contracted the malady a few days ago and passed away. His son also took ill and passed away a short time after his father. The second son's condition became so serious that he was placed on the train on Friday for the Ross Hospital, Lindsay. When the train reached Fenelon Falls the young man passed away.

The flu is making serious inroads in Manvers Township. The nineteen-year-old son of William Jordan succumbed to the disease last week, while on Friday Willoughby Stinson, of Janetville, one of the prominent residents of this district, passed out suddenly when he was believed to be on the road to recovery.

Miss Helen Cuthbert, of Lindsay, a young lady prominent in many local activities, ceased work on Thursday afternoon on account of illness. On Friday morning she was found dead in her bed.

BIG ESPINOLA PAPER MILL SUSPENDS ALL OPERATIONS

Newsprint Industry At Present Is Reported Very Unsatisfactory.

MANY OUT OF WORK.

Population of Two Towns Depends Entirely On Employment in Closed Mill.

SUDBURY, Ont., Jan. 14 (Canadian Press).—The Espinola mill of the Spanish River division of the Abitibi Power and Paper Company suspended papermaking operations Saturday. In a long distance telephone interview, G. R. Gray, vice-president of the Abitibi Company, said he was unable to state how long the suspension would last. It was attributed to the unsettled conditions prevailing in the newsprint industry at the present time.

TORONTO, Ont., Jan. 14 (Canadian Press).—Hon. William Finlayson, Minister of Lands and Forests, said last night that he had not received word of the suspension of operations at Espinola, but that it had been intimated to him that some curtailment might be necessary. His Department, he said, had been negotiating in an effort to keep the plant in operation.

Mr. Finlayson said that with the suspension of papermaking operations the situation in Espinola and Sturgeon Falls would be most serious, since the population of these towns was dependent upon the paper mills.

MOTOR SHOW OPENS

FARM RESIDENCE IS DESTROYED BY FIRE

J. Forester Suffers Heavy Loss From Fire—Outbuildings Saved.

LINDSAY, Jan. 14.—(Special to Examiner).—J. Forester, who has been living near Port Perry, and whose family had moved to that town this week, had the misfortune to lose his fine residence by fire. Mr. Forester had been living alone, and when returning from a neighbors found the kitchen in flames. A call was sent out to the neighbors, but it was impossible to stay the progress of the flames. The Port Perry fire department was called to the scene, as it was feared the barn and outbuildings would be destroyed. However, the wind favored the fire fighters and further loss was averted. The house was one of the finest in the district and was partly covered by insurance.

CANADA LOSES ABLE SERVANT

FILLED IMPORTANT POSITION

OTTAWA, Jan. 14.— (Canadian Press).—Major Graham A. Bell, Deputy Minister of Railways and Canals and the Dominion Government's representative on the Board of Directors of the Canadian National Railways, died here early yesterday. He had been in the hospital for nine weeks with a typhoid infection. He had not been in good health for some time previous to that, but had remained at his work until forced to bed. He was 54 years of age.

The body was taken yesterday by special train to Perth, Ont., his home town, where the funeral will be held on Tuesday at 2.30 p.m.

Filled Important Post

Major Bell filled a big place in the railway management of this country. He entered the department 37 years ago and steadily advanced until he became Comptroller. Ten years ago, when A. W. Campbell, then Deputy Minister, was placed in charge of good roads, Major Bell became Deputy Minister.

During his years in the department Major Bell obtained a comprehensive insight into the financial standings and methods of Canadian railways. He was a Major of the Forty-third Rifle Regiment in this city and when the war broke out he was anxious to go overseas, when so many of his brother-officers were leaving. However, a number of the Canadian railways were in critical financial situation and the Government insisted that he stay to look after this. He played an important part in straightening out the tangle due to the financial difficulties of the Canadian Northern, the Grand Trunk Pacific and the Grand Trunk.

Representative on Board

When the various lines were welded into the Canadian National, Major Bell was made the connecting link between the Government department of which he was deputy head and the publicly owned railway system by being the Government's director on the Canadian National Railways Board. He had a remarkable grasp of the workings of both the department and the board, particularly the financial workings and the financial arrangements as between the Government and the railway system.

He was a diligent, approachable and painstaking public servant and his death is greatly regretted both here and throughout the railway service. He is survived by his widow and three sons.

Paying tribute to the late Major Bell, Hon. C. A. Dunning, Minister of Railways, to-day said: "In the death of Major Graham Bell Canada has lost one of her ablest public servants. Apart from my great sense of personal loss, there is no doubt that the country has lost the services of one who possessed a wider range of personal knowledge of Canadian railway problems than any other man."

FIVE-DAY COURSE PLANNED FOR KEENE

Farm Mechanics Will Be Discussed By Two Good Lecturers.

A five-day course in farm mechanics will be held at Keene from January 21 to 25, inclusive, under the supervision of the Department of Agriculture. The lecturers in this very instructive course will be H. P. Green, B.Sc., of the Hydro-Electric Power Commission, Windsor, and J. C. Duff of Tara, a close student of farm machinery.

The course will cover a variety of subjects, including the care of farm machinery, study of gas engines and their repair, pulleys and electricity's place on the farm. Hydro is a live question in many farming communities in the district, and this course, besides providing instruction on farm machinery, will give them data on this important feature of farm life.

SHORT COURSE BEING PLANNED

E. J. Quail and Miss Hopkins Will Lecture in Havelock Next Month.

FOR FOUR WEEKS.

The annual short courses in agriculture and home economics for Peterborough County have been arranged and will be held in Havelock for the period of four weeks between February 4 and March 1. These courses are conducted by the Ontario Department of Agriculture and that of this county will be conducted under the supervision of J. B. Nelson, B.S.A., local agricultural representative. Mr. Nelson will be assisted in the lecture by two experts, E. J. Quail, B.S.C., and Miss Edith Hopkins.

For a number of years past, annual winter classes have been held in the various counties of the province by the department, and those held in Peterborough County, at Norwood, Keene, Warsaw, Lakefield and Bridgenorth have been particularly successful. Every young man and woman, who attends these courses with a desire to improve his knowledge, receives instruction of inestimable value in agriculture and home making. The courses are made very practical and include only sufficient technical and theory to explain some of the principles underlying the practices described.

The classes will be held in school-hours and school-days; so that the students can attend every day and still assist with the work at home. The charge to each pupil is very small, fifty cents, which covers cooking supplies and incidental expenses.

Wide Field Covered

The course in agriculture embraces a wide field of studies embracing: plant diseases, poultry, vegetables and gardening, special courses in sheep and swine, and bank forms and banking. The course in home economics is one that would attract any woman, consisting of: domestic science, housecleaning and decoration, home nursing and first aid, and sewing. Both classes will unite once a week to carry on a literary and debating society, which will give the students instruction in the proper method of handling meetings, preparing minutes, making motions, rules of order, and carrying on debates. There will also be several social functions.

A special educational trip of one day will be made to the city of Peterborough, allowing the students thorough tours of the following interesting plants: Quaker Oats, De Laval, The Peterborough Examiner, Peterborough Milk Products, and other places of interest throughout the city.

U. S. QUOTA LAW PLAN IS HALTED

Restriction Against Canadians Is Not Favored By Administration.

COMPROMISE IN CONGRESS.

WASHINGTON, D.C., Jan. 14 (Canadian Press).—The move to apply the quota law to Canadian immigration into the United States was definitely halted over the week-end when the house committee on immigration agreed to consider a compromise on the various new immigration bills now before Congress. It is understood that this compromise will be one which will not antagonize this country's neighbors to the north and south.

The administration has never been favorable to a quota restriction on Canadians if only because it would involve elaborate and expensive machinery at the border. Now the Washington Government is anxious to avoid anything which might disturbe the effect of President-elect Hoover's good will tour of Latin-America.

While a small but powerful bloc in Congress continues its efforts to restruct immigration from other countries of the American continent, there is a sufficient majority of legislators in committee and on the floor to stop any serious attempt to put continental America on the same basis as overseas countries under the United States immigration laws.

Peter Minuit was one of our shrewdest realtors; he bought Manhattan Island from the Indians for twenty-four dollars.

DOCTORS END COLD QUICK, NOVEL WAY

Many Here Find Hospital Method Ends Colds In a Few Hours—Is Convenient For Home Use

Urging the danger of neglecting a cold during pneumonia weather, hospital physicians are recommending home use of a pleasant hospital method. And numbers of Peterborough people find that it gives almost instant relief—then quickly drives the cold out of one's system.

Miss Mildred Kearne, for example, had neglected a cold until congestion started spreading rapidly. Fearing pneumonia then she called her doctor, who advised double strength doses of Ayer's Cherry Pectoral, a concentrated mixture of wild cherry, terpin-hydrate, and other ingredients which have relieved even the most extreme hospital cases.

With the first pleasant swallow she felt its comforting, healing warmth—from her nose passages deep down into her chest. In a few hours that "feverish, grippy" feeling began to disappear; she coughed less, and could breathe easier through her nose. And in another day or so, doctors report, she was completely rid of the cold.

Note: Other cases reported daily—all certified by attending physician.

Just a few pleasant spoonsful of Ayer's Cherry Pectoral now and you, too, will feel like a different person to-morrow. Endorsed by all druggists.

Constipation

. . . . Plunderer of Beauty

Make this two weeks' test and note the difference

Constipation must not be neglected. Start a two weeks' test now. Order a package of Post's Bran Flakes from your grocer.

Start by eating a dish of Post's Bran Flakes for breakfast. Eat it as a cereal with milk or cream. You will find it as delicious as it is effective.

Do this every day for two weeks. We predict you will find a real difference in the way you feel, and that you have been "regular" all the time.

But don't stop at the end of two weeks. Eat Post's Bran Flakes every morning for health and regularity.

Write for free trial package to Canadian Postum Co., Limited, Metropolitan Bldg., Toronto 2, Ontario.

CONSTIPATION steals away beauty and personal charm. Because of it the system daily absorbs poisons which cause sallow skin, dull eyes, blotchy complexion.

Don't let this Plunderer steal away your beauty. Combat constipation by including the necessary roughage in the food you eat. Post's Bran Flakes provides the right kind of roughage in a delicious, tempting form—a bran you'll want to eat daily.

Cases of recurrent constipation associated with too little bulk in the diet should yield to Post's Bran Flakes. If your case is abnormal consult a competent physician at once and follow his advice.

THE MIRROR OF THE MODE

By Mary Marshall.

This combination of pale pink printed chiffon has the new bare back arrangement with narrow flesh-colored ribbon straps and a T-arrangement of the ribbon to keep the slip from slipping off the shoulders. The slip is cut in normal height at the front and is edged there as in the back with cream-colored lace.

Doctors—most of them—are hand in glove with the dressmakers in the present tendency to make women's clothing less bulky and substantial. And where doctors agree, it is hard for the moralist to get a word in edgewise.

In days gone by when fashion delighted in such caprices as eighteen-inch waists and tight collars four and five inches high, those who frowned on fashions could call the doctors to their support. There were terrifying X-ray pictures of ladies who had their ribs all bent and twisted and their stomachs and hearts pushed all out of place.

But most of the new extremes of fashion are on the whole salubrious—no corsets worth worrying about, unhampered limbs, light-weight clothing and all the ventilation that the law allows. These fashions, some of the doctors say, are the reason why the weaker sex is rapidly coming to be much more robust and more able to resist disease than the sex that is said to be stronger.

Partly as a matter of fashion and partly as a matter of health women have adopted the bare-back bathing suit. When they bask in the sun's rays on the beaches of balmy winter resorts they want to get their money's worth of violet rays. Having bared their legs as far as they dared or cared to and having given up sleeves entirely they bared their backs. There was a good broad area of skin that might be exposed without giving offense. The doctors looked on and cheered and—anyway, there isn't anything very shocking about a woman's back.

There were tennis frocks made with bare or almost bare backs last summer—a few of them. There will undoubtedly be more of them next summer, and the bare-back evening gown is no longer cause for comment. There are bare-back nightgowns to be worn where weather is warm and slips and step-ins made practically without backs. These are provided with flesh-colored ribbons which are practically invisible when worn with evening gowns. Some women are planning to wear them with high-backed daytime dresses next summer so that there will be just one layer of material twixt their backs and all outdoors.

MARION'S MAIL

Address correspondence to Marion, at The Examiner Office.

"Dear Marion:

I have enjoyed reading your pages recently, and I don't know when anything did me more good than your little 'sermonettes' on HOPE. I certainly think you have hit the nail on the head, and I, for one, will try this year to live up to your high ideals.

Do you believe in horoscopes, Marion? I notice there is one printed in The Examiner every day, but I have never been able to see how the movements of the stars and planets could have any effect upon poor little me. I'll be glad, though, to have your opinion, because you seem so sensible on everything.

I won't take up too much time, this writing, Marion; I just wanted to tell you how I like your writing. I hope The Examiner is as proud of you as we neighbors are.

Yours truly,
Margy."

Thank you, "Margy," for all the nice things you write about our pages; I am glad that you enjoy them. I certainly enjoy receiving letters from neighbors. About the horoscope, they say "The stars incline, but do not compel." Certainly the belief in astrology is very old, and probably we have, most of us, an inbred feeling that "there may be something in it." I don't, but that is my personal opinion.

• • •

"Dear Marion:

Thanks for the little card at Christmas time. I liked the verse very much.

I am sending 'New Year Resolutions.' They will probably find the W.P.B., but if that is their fate, never mind. You may use anything I send in—letters, hints, etc., just as you see fit to use. I realize you can't publish all contributions.

I am very fond of reading, but my trouble is to find time to read. After reading the papers to keep in touch with current events (which I think we should do), it is seldom I have time for a book.

Now just a hint relating to household linens: When the clean linens are being put away, place them on the bottom of the pile and when taking articles for use, take them off the top, and your linens will wear out more evenly; all having equal usage.

Good luck to you, Marion.

Susie."

Thank you, "Susie," for your hint, which I'm sure many neighbors will appreciate. I hope that our Daily Reading enables you to get that other phase of reading we should all have, besides current events. No entry in any competition finds the W.P.B. "Susie," and all will be printed this week.

"Dear Marion:

I am enclosing a recipe for sausage, for Marleigh, also two other recipes I like very much.

I sent my New Year Resolutions. It is well that we are to write our own resolutions; were we to write for others, my pen might run away with me writing for the Thinkers. I would rather you judge the Resolutions.

Wishing you continued success.

Yours very truly,
Lucinda."

Thank you very much for the answers to SOS calls, "Lucinda"; it is good of you to go to so much trouble—but then, isn't that real neighborliness? Your entry in the contest will be printed this week. Thank you, too, for your good wishes.

"Dear Marion:

It is with faint heart that I send you my entry in the contest, but it has certainly done me good to write out these resolution. I may as well tell you I have broken two or three already, but I've mended them and hope to do better from now on.

I have found out this winter a splendid way to get the family out of bed. It is SO hard these cold mornings, isn't it? My husband fastened an extension on the furnace chain, so that he need only go out on the landing upstairs to open it up, and he sets the clock for half-an-hour early to give the house a chance to warm up—but, gracious, what is that with an east wind blowing?

My secret is—WAFFLES! I got a waffle iron for Christmas, and the thought of the delicious breakfast seems to tempt everyone, young and old, from bed. I make mine with sour cream, like this: Mix a cup of sour cream or half sour cream and half sour milk, whatever I happen to have, three-quarters of a teaspoon of soda dissolved in milk, one cup flour, a quarter teaspoon salt, one egg yolk, a tablespoon melted fat, and an egg white. I beat the egg white stiff, and fold in last, making the batter the consistency of whipped cream. Then I bake the waffles about three minutes.

I don't know how long the attraction will last, but it's worth trying by any neighbor who has a lie-abed family.

All good wishes to you, Marion.

Orange Blossom."

That's a mighty fine idea, "Orange Blossom," but not so easy for you, unless you have to get up so much earlier anyhow. Thank you for the recipe, and maybe the neighbors will tell us what success they have in rousing the family by the waffle method!

TO HEAR the wind howling outside makes one appreciate one's fireplace, doesn't it? As an old gentleman of my acquaintance said, one night upon arriving home when one of the worst storms of the winter was raging, "Ah, it's a good job you've no home to go to to-night."

But isn't it just great to sit in a lovely warm room looking out upon the fairy-like flakes falling heavily? I remember when a youngster building castles in the air as the small flakes piled up on the window sill and on up on the window pane.

Each flake would add more beauty to the imaginary castle, but as it crept up on the warm pane, my dreams would fall to ruin. But when the next blow came, up it would come again.

"If at first you don't succeed, try, try again!" I guess the little snow flakes have the same idea!

But to come back to the fireside, have you seen the new smart footstool which is made to stand before the chesterfield? It is only about a foot in width and is as long as the chesterfield, or as long as you desire.

This stool is not padded as the one which we have been used to in front of our fireplace. Instead it is painted black with one of the new lacquer paints, and on the top is a large painted design of flowers, and stems. The main stem starts from the middle of the stand.

The flowers are large to harmonize with the dimensions of the stool and the colors are brilliantly gay for contrast against the black background. They are painted in a flat manner, that is, they were not shaded, and the shades are conventional, such as one might copy from designs to be found on cretonnes, etc.

What a comfort these stools would be in the living room and what a gay color they would give with their paintings!

With the snow getting higher and higher one will soon be donning the new spat which has made its appearance in Peterborough.

Detroit women have returned to them from the short golosh worn last year I am told, while inspecting a pair with a view to buying, for my limbs DO seem to get the full benefit of the breeze!

Some of these spats come in a Jersey Cloth, but do not come all the way to the knee, while others are of a heavier, all wool material and have a sort of a loosely knit elastic top which covers the knee entirely and clings tightly—therefore there is no danger of them slipping or wrinkling.

Of course, there aren't a hundred and one buttons to fasten, as there were in the spats of other days. There is only one dome which fastens at the instep, holding the strap which goes underneath the shoe.

I sent a perfectly good velour hat to the cleaners just recently, (perfectly good with the exception of a few spots I wanted taken out) and upon its return, I almost "flew off the handle" because it looked I thought, even worse than when I sent it.

Much to my amazement I am told that I could have cleaned it myself with steel wool. The wool is the same as I have seen used in the kitchen for the pans, but is bought much finer—an 00 grade.

• • •

The hat is first gone over with some commercial liquid, paying special attention to the dirtier spots and is then rubbed lightly with the wool.

White felt ones are cleaned first with lump magnesia, rubbing gently and afterwards using a brush that is not too stiff.

The new wool trimmings are very attractive as seen on some of the new spring sport frocks. We still have a number of the instructions left for a design in the wool trimming as well as for the velvet trimming.

And then this week, we have the mob cap; which is made from cotton or silk, is excellent for a work cap, but if made from net or crepe de chine, it may be used for a boudoir cap.

• • •

Just mail the coupon and see how easy it is to make one.

The flu still continues, doesn't it? So are the measles, they just seem to take their course as children having the whooping cough, etc.

The street-corner talk just now instead of the weather, is "Have you had the flu?" then everyone proceeds to give some remedy which she has used for checking a cold and the accompanying flu.

One hears some very strange ways. I heard that if one would drink as many glasses a day as possible of strained, canned tomatoes, it would check an on-coming cold!

It would be worth trying anyway! One never knows these days what will cure and what won't. Anyway it wouldn't hurt anyone to try—it certainly isn't poisonous.

One man replied, on being asked if he had had the flu, "No, and I don't intend to take it. And I think that if you say you won't you will not, these pessimists make me tired."

But, alas! The next thing I heard was, "Mr. So-and-So has the flu." Did I give a slight sigh of relief as I heard it? Yes, I believe I did, one would almost like to say, "It serves him right, 'n I hope he has it enough so he'll know that he has got it."

But then if you've got IT you'll know—there will be no guessing match going on.

Have you ever tried Pea patties? Here is the recipe I had at a buffet luncheon the other day. Small rolls had been scooped out in the center, and a can of peas had been drained, and mixed with the white sauce and put into the hole in the roll. After these were seasoned well, my hostess said, they are put into the oven until they are piping hot.

• • •

I forgot to say that the rolls were put into the oven first to be browned Try them some day, you'll find them delicious.

DAILY READING

A FEW MINUTES A DAY WITH THE BEST OF THE WORLD'S AUTHORS CONDUCTED BY THE NEIGHBORS AND MARION

JANUARY 14, 1929.

THE SLEIGH BELLS

I am particularly happy to print "The Sleigh Bells," sent by "Mrs. M.", because it was written by Mrs. Susanna Moodie (Miss Strickland), about whom I wrote in the Whatnot some weeks ago. She settled near Peterborough about 1832, and was not only a pioneer of settlement but a pioneer in Canadian literature.

'Tis merry to hear, at evening time,
By the blazing hearth the sleigh bells' chime
To know the hounding steeds bring near
The loved ones to our bosoms dear.
Ah, lightly we spring the fire to raise
Till the rafters glow with the ruddy blaze;
Those merry sleigh bells, our hearts keep time
Responsive to their fairy chime
Ding, dong, ding dong o'er vale and hill,
Their welcome notes are trembling still.
Our hut is small and rude our cheer,
But love has spread the banquet here;
And childhood springs to be caressed
By our beloved and welcome guest.
With a smiling brow his tale he tells
The urchins ring the merry sleigh bells
The merry sleigh bells, with chant and song
They drag the noisy string along;
Ding dong, ding dong, the father's come
The gay bells ring his welcome home.

From the cedar swamp the gaunt wolves howl,
From the oak land whoops the felon owl;
The snow storm sweeps in thunder pas
For forest creaks beneath the blast;
No more I list, with boding fear
The sleigh bells distant chime to hear;
The merry sleigh bells with soothing power
Shed gladness on the evening hour
Ding-dong, ding dong what rapture swells
The music of those joyous bells!

SAFE LIFEBOATS

That Body of Yours

By Dr. J. Barton

LIVER FOR EVERY PATIENT.

Now that the use of liver has become so widespread, it is becoming increasingly difficult to obtain it and the price asked is now as much as for the choicest delicacy in meats.

I have spoken before about the experiments of Dr. Cornell which proved that while liver would increase the quantity and quality of the blood in "rundown" folks, it was not any more effective than other foods in folks who were normal in health.

Now, in order to eat sufficient liver daily for building purposes, anemic individuals should eat not less than half a pound, and as this is not available in many stores, the supply running out an hour after the opening of the store, enterprising firms are now making an extract of liver which is always obtainable.

Recognizing the fact that many poor patients with pernicious anemia cannot afford to pay for liver, the Ontario Government, under its Minister of Health, Dr. Godfrey, has decided to supply free Watery Extract of Liver for treatment of this ailment.

Dr. Godfrey states: "It has been my policy that no person shall die in this Ontario of ours just because he, or she, hasn't the price to pay for the cure required.

"The distribution of free insulin which controls diabetes in older folks, and affects a cure in younger ones, now costs the Province of Ontario $50,000 a year, and the distribution of Liver Extract will cost a good many thousands more, but it is a noble work, and one which will receive the heartfelt gratitude of many sufferers."

My idea in mentioning the above is that the very thought that what was formerly a fatal ailment can now be cured by the simple method of liver or liver extract, should be such an inspiration to governments and private individuals, that funds for work in other lines of medical research should be forthcoming.

For, after all, can anything give the satisfaction that comes with the knowledge that something you have done has prevented suffering, and actually saved the life of a human being.

My New Year's Resolutions

The following have been entered in a competition, the result of which will be announced on Saturday.

(By Jenny Wren II.)

Hurrah! At hand is the beginning of a new year. Therefore, now is a time of retrospect, and a time of resolutions.

Are we not going to make the best resolutions we can for the new year?

Surely the retrospect of the past will give some encouragement for the year to come. The mistakes we made in the past can be righted this year, and will be a lesson for the golden future.

Take up our old resolutions with our new ones, and make them a practice.

Why not make those resolutions, everybody? You will find it helps to accomplish the duties that are before us the year around.

Make resolutions, and uphold them, is the best motto.

As for my resolutions this year, my object is to overcome all backbiting calumny and detraction, also speeches and words hurtful to our neighbor's honor or reputation. We should speak of others with justice, as we would be glad they did speak of us. Don't you think it would be advisable for "Thinker" and "Another Thinker" to take similar resolutions, too. To repair the injury done as far as they are able—for example to restore our good name and not to call us spinsters, etc.

Here's wishing all a Happy and Prosperous Year (including the two Thinkers).

Jenny Wren II.

(By "Bluejay")

My New Year Resolutions this year are certainly entirely different from any I have ever made before. Marion, just a short while ago I lost a loved one and I have been grieving terribly, but I have made a resolution to put my grief behind me and carry on for the sake of my children. I am going to make my home a pleasant place for my children and I am going to try and equip them in the best way I can for their battle in life.

My second resolution is that I am going to economize in everything. It is true that we cannot take money or any worldly goods with us when we leave this world, but we can certainly help ourselves a good deal with money in this world, for without money where are we and who is our friend?

My third resolution is that I am going to have rules and regulations for my children and I intend to stick to them this year, rules such as regular bedtime, the hanging up and putting away of their own clothes, etc. I have also made a resolution to have more patience in the coming year, but alas, Marion, I seem to make that resolution every year, but really this year I am going to try and do better.

Last but not least I resolve to read Marion's page every night and to write to the page more often.

Wishing you a Happy New Year, I remain,

Bluejay.

(By "Twin Sis".)

Once again another Christmas has rolled into eternity and I trust it has been a Merry Christmas to all. We are now entering upon a New Year, another page in our book of life, as it were. May it prove a Happy and Prosperous one.

There are very few people who do not begin the New Year with some resolutions. Why do we make our resolutions just at this time of year?—I often wonder just how many of these wonderful ideas and plans are carried into execution throughout the whole year.

This year I have a particular need of making resolutions, and I hope and pray that I may be able to carry out my plans.

Only a few weeks before Christmas my own Dear Mother passed into the Great Beyond, leaving me the only girl to keep the home with the help of a father and brother. Thus, it is my duty to bear the burdens and cares left to me by the passing of a kind and loving Mother—a vacant place which never can be filled.

But, as to my resolutions— One of the important resolutions in my circumstance, is to try to become a better cook and housekeeper. I hope to be able to accomplish this with the many helps and recipes I have pasted into two large notebooks from the wonderful columns of the Examiner, for which I wish to thank a great many unknown friends and neighbors.

I discovered the other day that I had succeeded in obtaining the correct answer of an important puzzle in one of our farm papers, and will be sent a "tie-breaker" puzzle in a few days. So I am resolved that, with the other work, I shall do my best, my very best, at trying to solve it correctly.

I trust my household duties will not be so great that I neglect helping in the interests of the community life. May I fill, as well as possible, the vacant place in our neighborhood.

Above all, I desire to continue with renewed faith and stronger enthusiasm my attendance and help in the work of the church and Sunday School, which the Absent One loved so well.

So, keeping Faith and Trust, I hope to follow the Christian example set by my Mother and abide by these resolutions of 1929.

When the Book of Life is closed may they say of me also—"She hath done what she could—she is kept the faith."

Again wishing one and all a Happy and Prosperous New Year.

Sincerely,
Twin Sis.

A THREE DAYS COUGH IS YOUR DANGER SIGNAL

Persistent coughs and colds lead to serious trouble. You can stop them now with Creomulsion, an emulsified creosote that is pleasant to take. Creomulsion is a new medical discovery with two-fold action; it soothes and heals the inflamed membranes and inhibits germ growth.

Of all known drugs, creosote is recognized by high medical authorities as one of the greatest healing agencies for persistent coughs and colds and other forms of throat troubles. Creomulsion contains, in addition to creosote, other healing elements which soothe and heal the infected membranes and stop the irritation and inflammation, while the creosote goes on to the stomach, is absorbed into the blood, attacks the seat of the trouble and checks the growth of the germs.

Creomulsion is guaranteed satisfactory in the treatment of persistent coughs and colds, bronchial asthma, bronchitis and other forms of respiratory diseases, and is excellent for building up the system after colds or flu. Money refunded if any cough or cold is not relieved after taking according to directions. Ask your druggist. (adv.)

A CHANCE FOR CANADIAN BOYS.

One of the most serious problems with which Canada has to grapple is that of keeping the young people of the present generation upon the farm.

Rural depopulation has increased to such an extent as a result of the drift to the cities that serious conditions are being created, conditions that unfortunately become worse each year.

In view of that situation, it should be the cause of satisfaction that Hon. Robert Forke has announced that the Federal Government will give Canadian boys the same opportunity to settle upon land of their own as is being offered to British lads, and that provincial administrations are ready to give dollar for dollar with the Ottawa Government in carrying out this policy.

There has been some criticism of the advantages offered newcomers, but this will vanish with the knowledge that any Canadian boy who wants to take up land and launch out as a farmer may claim the same assistance provided by the Federal and Provincial Governments for newcomers from the British Isles.

Even though it would be foolish to look for any great rush on the part of Canadian boys to participate in the scheme, it is wisdom on the part of the Governments to provide the necessary opportunity, thus removing any justification for charges of discrimination.

THE WELSH MINERS' FUND.

The splendid response that has been made to the Toronto Globe's appeal for funds for the Welsh miners is gratifying.

As members of the great British family, Canadians, after a year of unprecedented prosperity, should be willing to give gladly of their bounty to their Welsh brothers and sisters whose distress has stirred the compassion of every one who has investigated their condition.

Briefly, the situation is that while there are 250,000 miners who are permanently out of employment because of conditions in the coal industry, the number actually on the verge of starvation, including the dependents of the miners and the storekeepers whose business has gone because of the poverity of their former customers, is approximately one million.

Thus we have dire distress and suffering, houses almost bare of furniture and bedding, families without clothes or food, half-clad children lucky to get even one meal a day—in short, utter destitution.

The need of immediate assistance is admitted by everybody; and the fund now being raised through the medium of the Globe, while small perhaps as compared with what is actually required, represents very welcome aid, and it should grow rapidly as a realization of the conditions in the Welsh mining district comes home to the prosperous people of Canada, living in almost luxurious comfort in this land of plenty.

THE SALVATION ARMY CRISIS.

"Throughout much of the world, among men of all faiths and of none, reconciliation among the warring leaders will be hoped for," says the Ottawa Journal in referring to the controversy among the heads of the Salvation Army, and The Examiner shares the wish that the present split over organization and leadership will be satisfactorily adjusted.

We here in Peterborough, far away from the actual quarrel and knowing very little about the merits of the case, have to judge the Salvation Army by what we have seen of it locally, and tested in that way the organization has justified its existence.

It has a definite place, not only as a religious body, but as a social service organization that has done and is doing a great work among us, and we know that its activities are world-wide and along similar lines as those that have proved successful here.

The present crisis is disquieting; if it has the effect of lessening the activities of the Salvation Army the result would be widely felt.

An organization that had its inception amid arrests, denunciation and street fights, it has grown and expanded until it has received universal recognition.

It would be unfortunate indeed were the present controversy to impair its usefulness or interfere with its widely spread endeavors.

THE HORTICULTURAL SOCIETY.

Alderman Stocker's remark at the annual meeting of the Peterborough Horticultural Society that the organization should have at least one thousand members was a simple statement of truth.

Surely there are that many people in Peterborough who are interested in the beautification of their own property and of the city in which they live and sympathetic toward the aims and objects of the Horticultural Society.

This organization, which has for thirty-four years been struggling for a more beautiful city, should have better support from the community on whose behalf it strives, and the encouragement and enthusiasm that a larger membership would provide.

It is disappointing to know that the senior membership last year was but 194—but a ray of hope is furnished by the knowledge that the junior society has the largest membership in the Province.

If the children are becoming genuinely interested in the things for which the Horticultural Society was created, there is the possibility that the indifference of their elders will be overwhelmed by the enthusiasm of the new generation, and that as the junior members reach adult years they will continue to give their support to a movement that should enlist the active co-operation of the whole community.

Meanwhile the officers of the organization deserve congratulations for what they have been able to accomplish, and thanks for their public-spiritedness in remaining loyal to a work that the many are too willing to leave upon the shoulders of the few.

BRITAIN AND TOURISTS.

England, according to the cables, is determined to attract tourists to her "green and pleasant land." A scheme of publicity, running into a cost of thousands of dollars, is afoot to draw across the Atlantic travellers from this side. It is not yet decided what form of publicity will take, but it is to be hoped that money will not be wasted on the usual method of publishing photographs, or sketches, of famous buildings. There is, of course, a certain publicity value in these things, especially in views of the birth-place of famous men. Few who have gone to the other side have not made a point of seeing Stratford-on-Avon, or the tombs of the great in Westminster Abbey. But it is not, or should not be, the first desire of the tourist to visit famous things, or places. Indeed, England can do no better in this respect than other European countries.

The visitor to Britain who will learn the most is the one who hardly tours at all. England or Scotland well rewards the man who is wise enough to spend his three months in one or two places only, for thus only can a visitor from the new world gain an idea of that which has made Britain great.

Consider that England has bettered civilization in more than a third of the globe; has given the name of British Subject to five hundred million souls; has spread her language so that to-day it is spoken everywhere; and consider that it is a country whose square mileage, in comparison with land area over here, is negligible.

No. Britain is not a country merely for sightseeing. It is a country that must be lived in for as long as time permits. Nor is it difficult for the tourist to leave England with a real understanding of her—if he will take England as calmly as England will take him.

An ideal itinerary for a three-months' stay would be this: First, a month in the place where one's ancestors were born and bred, lived and died—be it a village or a city. Then, a long six weeks of summer on the coast; somewhere where England's cliffs rise sheer from the sea; Cornwall, perhaps, or on the long coast of Kent or Devon. Finally, a few days in "Town." London will teach little of England, but, since a course of breathless sightseeing, and theatre-going, must certainly come somewhere on the tourist's list, let London be your host for this: London, still the world's greatest city. New York's skyscrapers notwithstanding.—Ottawa Journal.

MEDICAL PROGRESS.

It would be pleasant if looking back over the past year's advance in medicine one could see clear signposts indicating discoveries for the cure of all the ailments against which science has been contending. Progress has resulted from the year's labors, but the New York Academy of Medicine reports that there have been no epoch-making discoveries. It is particularly difficult to point to the precise moment when any great medical discovery is made. It is as true as in other lines of research that each man builds on what his predecessors have done, and that credit given to one person should more reasonably be distributed among many. But at least the discoveries outside of medicine have the advantage of being quickly proved. The testing of medical discoveries involves hundreds of cases and requires many months. Perhaps some things dug out this year will be tried, questioned, altered and finally corroborated five years hence. Medical research necessarily is lacking in the spectacular.

Though it moves thus tentatively and by a series of suspended judgments, it nevertheless does move. In 1928 substantial progress was made in the treatment of a number of infectious diseases, in methods of anesthetizing, in accident surgery, in heart disease, cancer, gynecology, sinus trouble and pernicious anemia. Everybody, not excepting the butchers, knows about the use of liver for all forms of anemia. Iodized oil has been found useful in the diagnosis and treatment of diseases of head sinuses. For some reason they seem to have grown more common in recent years, and not only because they are extremely painful but because they set up conditions leading to other trouble people are glad to know that relief is in sight.

In connection with experiments in killing cancer or tumor cells X-rays and radium rays have been studied. It has been established that the wave length is of no consequence, the selection now depending only on the distance of the cell from the surface and on its sensitivity to radiation. Cancer of the skin occurs most frequently among persons exposed to excessive sunlight, and experiments with ultra-violet radiation confirms the suspicion of scientists that in certain cases the lamps now so popular for home use may have dangerous results. The information bureau of the Academy of Medicine warns against the indiscriminate use of ultra-violet radiation lamps by the public. It points to the history of the X-ray, which when discovered was carelessly employed and led to many deaths, and which "should serve as a warning in the case of the ultra-violet radiations."

Emergency treatment for industrial accidents has advanced greatly. Immediate attention for accident cases, especially in fractures, is the ideal, and hospitals are being staffed so that a broken bone will receive treatment as speedily as that accorded a ruptured appendix. A new method of relief for the burns which result frequently in industry has been found. A year or two ago, if a third of the skin was burned doctors conceded that death must follow. It was caused by the absorption of poisonous waste from the burned skin. Now tannic acid in solution is applied. It coagulates the proteins, absorption is diminished and recovery becomes possible.—New York Times.

EDITORIAL NOTES AND COMMENT.

That impending railway war may be a bad thing both for the railways and for the politicians.

The appointment of Hon. Herbert Marler as Canadian Minister to Japan will be approved. Mr. Marler has many excellent qualifications for the honorable position to which he has been appointed.

Canadian boys are being offered good opportunities to take up farm land. It will be interesting to watch the reaction to the announcement.

A Thought

"THE GREAT NEW YEAR"

By Velma Runnels, Campbellford.)

At this time of the year, everyone is trying to make new resolutions. Some have missed in their aim through the past year and their hopes have been hurled into ruin. The New Year calls to each one of us to carry on and build new hopes; to gild the bruised dreams.

If we have done well in the faded year, then we must resolve to do still better in the coming year. We, sometimes, are afraid of the future. We look upon it as a dark storm rising and fail to see the sunlight through the shadows.

We must bury our former errors and instead of regretting over the wasted strength, why not resolve and begin re-building.

We may not reach the heights that we aim for in 1929. But as long as we do our best, then we have found that nameless strength that turns pain into comfort.

We need courage to keep walking on the road to true life. This road should begin our New Year. It leads to a higher plane where man learns to love the soul of man. The lower trail is filled with unworthy treasures and mocking pleasures. Down on the misty road our eyes are veiled with deception and worldly greed. Twelve months of the year are as one to the travellers of the lower highway. They are missing the greatest treasure of beauty called spiritual enjoyment.

We must not have the bitter feeling toward man this year. Life is too short to fill it with hatred. Love should take its place, for love lives on forever and ever. Love links the world to God's City and chisels an unsightly, ugly character into a priceless gem.

The New Year is the time to shake hands with strangers, comrades and friends. Turn an unfathomed sea of space into a home ground. Build windows in the soul and there will be progress. Make 1929 a peace-crowned height.

HOROSCOPE

The Stars Incline, But Do Not Compel

TUESDAY, JANUARY 15, 1929.

(Copyright, 1929, McClure Syndicate.)

Benefic aspects guide today, according to astrology, which reads in the stars good luck for most important human activities. Speculation, however, is to be avoided.

This is a rule most auspicious to projects founded on well tried principles, but risks of every sort should be avoided.

Banks and bankers will benefit under this direction of the stars which encourages great combinations of capital and increased scope of operation.

While there is a sinister sign read as forecasting failures in business and serious embarrassments, the planetary government is read as encouraging big organizations to the detriment of small ventures.

Speculation continues under a rule making for heavy losses to investors who seek speedy fortunes.

Women are well directed while this configuration prevails, and the seers prophesy for them a red letter year in public service.

Much travel and wide connections will mark women's organizations which will be represented in world conferences, it is forecast.

This is read as a lucky wedding day when those who plight troth will go forth into the world to contribute to its prosperity.

It is a fortunate day for art and artists. Musicians should be particularly happy today when they should receive good news relating to their engagements.

Theatres, and especially the players engaged in them, come under a direction of the stars that should be of supreme benefit.

Sensational crimes will continue to mark the days, and despite agitation the public will be quiescent until a frightful murder arouses determined reform work, astrologers announce.

Civil war between law-breakers and law-supporters will go on in the new year, but there is to be an extreme provocation that will stir public indignation to the point of action, ocultists prognosticate.

Persons whose birthdate it is have the augury of a happy year in which joy will come to young and old. Gain in friends as well as money is indicated.

Children born on this day probably will be able to win much success through charm of personality and real talents. These subjects of Capricorn may be inclined to change occupation too often and many are extravagant in their benefactions to friends.

Lyrics of Life

By Douglas Malloch

HERE'S A FRIEND

Friend, here's a friend. Not those who spend
Nor even those who praise,
For flattery will have an end,
Good fellows go their ways.
And then the friend you never thought
About when other friends you sought,
And yet who stood there all the while,
Will greet you with the same old smile.

Yes, heres a friend. He sees you send
Your friends of old away,
And yet his pray'rs will still attend
Until you've had your day;
And then when strangers tire of you,
As sudden friends so often do,
And when you come to seek his door,
You find it open as before.

Friend, here's a friend who does not bend
Or break, and here is why:
A helping hand he longs to lend
To ev'ry passerby.
He did not love for just a day,
He loved because he's just that way,
And helping other fellows out
Is all he ever thinks about.

THE LUCKIEST LADY

— By —

Ruby M. Ayres

THE STORY THUS FAR:

BIDDY SAUNDERS—the Little Flapper—always called her young adopted mother, MARNA PAGET, the Luckiest Lady, for she thought Marna had everything heart could wish—youth, beauty, wealth and the love of a devoted husband. But Marna was unhappy. She had married without loving GEORGE PAGET, and three months later had met HUGH HUBBARD and given him her heart. He had gone to China, but after years of separation they find that they love each other as much as ever. As the Little Flapper grows older she realizes something of the situation and worries about it. Hugh returns after five years, and is a guest of the Pagets. Biddy realizes that she is herself in love with Hugh. DOLLY BENSON, the Big Flapper, friend of Biddy, and RENNY MARTIN, in love with Marna, both realize how things stand between her and Hugh. So does MRS. BLAIR, an old friend. Marna, suddenly weakening, decides to return to China, but reaches the pier after his boat has sailed. Biddy is recovering from pneumonia. Dolly comes to her and asks her for forty pounds.

TODAY'S INSTALMENT

XXXI.—"I CAN'T EXPLAIN!"

"Plaster Saint!" Dolly sneered. She puffed at her cigarette savagely for a moment, then her manner changed.

"Be a dear and help me," she whispered. "It's really dreadfully urgent. I don't know what I shall do if you refuse. I'm in an awful mess. Be a pal, Biddy darling! I'll never ask you again, and I'll pay you back—honestly I will."

"How can you? It's such a lot of money! Where will you get it from?"

"I'm bound to win some day. Renny says that the luck always changes, sooner or later."

"Renny Martin is a hateful man."

"That's what you think! I like him, and, anyway, that's not the question. Biddy—will you do this for me?"

"I can't."

"You can if you like—you know you can. We've always been such good friends, and I wouldn't ask you if I wasn't in such a dreadful mess." She rose and came closer to the bed. Biddy, I beg of you!"

"I can't."

"You mean that you won't?"

"I won't tell Marna a lie to get it."

There was a little silence, then Dolly Benson laughed and flung her half-smoked cigarette into the fireplace.

"All right. Then I shall ask Marna myself."

Biddy smiled.

"Very well; but she won't let you have it. She doesn't like Renny Martin, either, and she wouldn't approve of you going about with him, or of your going to his club. If she knew you'd lost at cards—and that he makes you play——"

"She will let me have it," Dolly said positively.

The Little Flapper caught her breath; something in the tone of Dolly's voice frightened her.

"Why will she?" she whispered.

"Because, if she doesn't," the Big Flapper said calmly, "I shall tell George Paget what happened the night we all drove over to the Blairs' to dance, and I shall tell him——"

"What happened?" the Little Flapper demanded.

"Never mind! I know, and so does Renny——"

For a moment the two girls glared at one another, then Biddy said passionately:

"You little beast!"

"It's no use calling names," Dolly declared indifferently. "All's fair in love and war, and this is war. I'm in a tight corner, and if you and Marna don't help me get out of it——"

"You'll never frighten Marna with threats," Biddy said proudly.

"Shan't we? We shall see. I don't imagine she's dying for me to tell George about the day Hugh Hubbard went away, for instance."

"What do you mean?"

"Only that I know she wanted to go with him, and meant to go! That she would have gone if something hadn't happened to prevent her." She laughed triumphantly, reading the shock in Biddy's eyes.

"So much for your saintly Marna!" she said jeeringly.

The Little Flapper lay very still, her face quite white and her eyes blazing; then suddenly, with a great effort, she sprang up in bed. She threw the clothes back and was out on the floor before Dolly Benson could move or prevent her.

"You beast—you beast!" she sobbed pantingly. "After all Marna's done for you! Oh, I hate you! I hate you!" She threw herself upon Dolly and beat at her with weak hands. "I hate you! I hate you!"

"Little fool!"

But the Big Flapper was frightened.

"Go back to bed," she pleaded. "You'll make yourself ill—dreadfully ill. Go back to bed at once. If anyone comes——"

"I hope someone will. I hope someone will. I'll tell them what you've been saying—every word of it!"

"I don't think you will," Dolly said calmly. She gave Biddy a little contemptuous push, so that hse fell back on the bed, sobbing still. "Marna's only an ordinary woman, like the rest of us," she said coldly. "I'm not blaming her. It's not business of mine what she does, only she's got to help me. Here, get into bed."

She put a firm arm round the younger girl and laid her back amongst the pillows, pulling the clothes round her again.

"Do you want to die?" she demanded.

"I wish you would!" Biddy sobbed passionately.

Dolly stood at the foot of the bed, drumming her fingers on the rail, waiting impatiently for Biddy to be quiet; then she said:

"Well, I'll be off, as I seem to upset you so. You can write to me and tell me what Marna says, or I'll come again in a day or two."

"I never want to see you again!" Biddy sobbed.

The Big Flapper laughed.

"I don't know that I want tosee you particularly," she said heartlessly. "But I suppose I shall have to. Bye-bye!" And she went away, closing the door behind her.

On the stairs she encountered Marna.

"Are you going already? Isn't Biddy all right?"

Dolly hesitated, then she shrugged her shoulders.

"I don't think she's very well," she said reluctantly. "She got cross with me, so I thought I had better not stay, in case it made her worse. I didn't mean to upset her."

"I'm sure you didn't," Marna said quickly. She never believed unkind things of anyone. "I'll run up to her. How do you think she is looking?"

"She doesn't look too frightfully strong," the Big Flapper said. There was a clever shade of wistfulness in her voice. "Do you mind if I say something, Mrs. Paget?"

"Of course not."

"And you won't tell Biddy I said it?"

"Why, of course not."

"Then I believe she's worrying about something," Dolly said in a lowered voice. "I'm sure she is. She wouldn't tell me, but she might tell you; she's so fond of you."

"But what can she have to worry about?" Marna asked anxiously. "I'd do anything in the world for her. She knows that."

"She's very lucky," Dolly said.

When Dolly had gone, Marna went up to Biddy's room and found the girl pretending to sleep. She was lying with her head half under the bedclothes, huddled up in a forlorn little heap, and she did not stir when Marna spoke.

"Biddy darling!"

No reply.

"Biddy, are you asleep?"

Still no reply.

Marna sat down by the window, leaning her chin in her hand. The May afternoon was drawing to a warm, golden close, and a faint breeze was stirring the scented lilacs in the park opposite.

More than a month since Hugh Hubbard went away—more than thirty days, and God alone knew how many hours!

Looking back to their last meeting, it seemed a lifetime ago to Marna, and yet, somehow, since the Little Flapper's illness the days seemed to have raced away on winged feet.

"It's because I've been busy. Because I've had no time to think about myself," Marna thought. "That's how it must always be. I must keep on doing things all the time. I must never let myself have any time to look back or think."

"Biddy!" she said again, almost imploringly, and this time the Little Flapper looked up from under the bedclothes, her face all flushed and tear-wet.

"I wasn't really asleep," she said.

"And you've been crying!" Marna was beside her in a moment, petting her, scolding her, stroking her hair. "What have you been crying about, you baby? What is the matter? Tell me what is the matter, Biddy."

"I can't—I can't!" Biddy wept, but she put her arms round Marna's neck tightly. "I love you so much! I'd just die for you!" she sobbed.

"And that's what you will do if you go on upsetting yourself like this," Marna said with pretended severity. "Biddy, stop crying at once, or I'll go away and leave you. Stop crying, and then tell me what you've been crying about. If it's anything to do with Dolly, she—"

"It isn't—oh, it isn't!"

"Then what is it? Tell me. Biddy, haven't you always told me everything?"

"You know I have."

"Then tell me this."

"You'll be angry. You'll never trust me again."

"Trust you?" Marna tried to raise her, to see her face. "Biddy, what have you been doing?"

"I can't tell you. It's nothing."

"It's not like you to cry for nothing, Biddy."

"I'm tired. My head aches."

Marna ignored the excuse; there was an anxious light in her pretty eyes.

"It's nothing to do with Dolly?" she urged again.

"No, no!"

"To do with me?"

"Oh, no!"

"To do with somebody else, then?"

No answer.

Marna unclasped the girl's arms from her neck.

"Biddy, if you don't tell me, how can I help you?"

"I'm afraid to tell you."

"Afraid—of me?"

"You've always been so good to me."

"Is that a reason for being afraid, Biddy?"

"Yes, because this time I can't explain."

LEGION LADIES HOLD MEETING

Reports Read Show Auxiliary Has Had Prosperous Year.

AT LAKEFIELD.

LAKEFIELD, Jan. 14 (Examiner Correspondence).—The annual meeting of the Ladies' Auxiliary to the Canadian Legion was held on Tuesday evening in the Legion club room of the Town Hall.

Mrs. Marling, the retiring president, occupied the chair, and according to custom, the meeting was opened with two minutes' silence.

In the absence of the secretary, Mrs. J. R. Robinson, the treasurer, Mrs. W. W. Leonard, read the minutes and also the report of the secretary, which showed a prosperous year with varied activities which were, in the main, successful.

In April a card party was held with excellent success and in the spring also; a box of clothing was shipped to Mrs. VanKoughnet, of Toronto, for relief work at headquarters.

In November the Auxiliary joined the Legion in giving a dance which was not as successful as the other branches of activity.

The Auxiliary also helped the men in the sale of poppies for Armistice Day and also co-operated with them in the annual Christmas tree. During the latter part of the year the ladies havve worked with the men in aiding a needy veteran's family.

Mrs. Leonard read the treasurer's statement, which showed that the financial returns were satisfactory and in spite of many calls on the funds the balance amounts to $72.

A committee was formed to co-operate with the convenor of the charity committee of the municipal council during the latter part of the year and this committee was re-appointed, viz., Mrs. Marling, Mrs. Chappell and Mrs. Stuart.

Honorary president, Mrs. T. B. Marling; president, Mrs. H. J. Stuart; vice president, Mrs. T. M. Wesley; secretary, Mrs. J. R. Robinson; treasurer, Mrs. W. W. Leonard.

Executive committee—Mrs. T. Junkin, Mrs. A. Wannamaker, and Mrs. Cameron.

Auditors—Mrs. C. Stenner and Mrs. Stuart.

A letter was read from Col. C. H. Ackerman, president of the Provincial Command of the Canadian Legion of the B.E.S.L., recommending remembrance not only of families of returned men but also remembrance of the families of the men who have passed on. The appeal touched a cord of sympathy by its simplicity and its humanity, and there is no doubt that it will inspire greater zeal in this work which is both a responsibility and a privilege.

Mrs. Cameron brought a message from Mrs. Greenway, the provincial president of the Ladies' Auxiliary. Mrs. Greenway sent her love and best wishes for the New Year, both for the individual members and for their work. She urged expansion and greater co-operation with the men. Union is strength and it is never comfortable unless there is perfect accord.

Mrs. Marling, before vacating the chair, thanked the ladies for the support given her during her term of office and also for the tangible evidence of their regard given at the Christmas tree in the form of a handsome silver vase. She bespoke the same co-operation for her successor and assured the ladies of her willingness to assist in every way possible as the work has been and always will be extremely dear to her.

Votes of thanks to Mrs. Leonard and Mrs. Robinson for their splendid reports were given on motion of Mrs. Wesley and Mrs. Wanamaker.

School Re-opened.

The Grove re-opened on Thursday, the boy returning with enthusiasm, laden with skates, hockey sticks, skis, and all the impediments of sporting youth. One small boy brought a typewrites and apaprently another has a portable gramaphone. From the appearance of the baggage, winter sports will not languish.

Uncle Wiggily

A Bed-Time Story by Howard R. Garis

UNCLE WIGGILY AND THE COLD STONE

(Copyright, 1929, McClure Syndicate.)

One day when Uncle Wiggily was hopping around in the snow, looking for an adventure, he sneezed so hard that his glasses fell off and bumped on a place where the wind had swept the ground bare of the white snow. The ground was very hard, for it was frozen, and the rabbit gentleman's glasses broke.

"Oh, dear!" he said. "Now I can't see very well. I will hardly know an adventure if I get close to one. Oh, dear!"

Uncle Wiggily could see well enough to pick up the broken pieces of his spectacles, and he could also see well enough to find his way home. But without his glasses he knew he could not tell one of his little rabbit children from another. If he saw Buster he might think it was Custer. And Jingle would look the same as Jangle.

"I must take my glasses to the shoemaker's shop and have them mended," said Mr. Longears as he put the pieces in his pocket. "Oh, dear!"

And then, to his surprise, he heard another voice close to him say:

"Oh, dear!"

"Why, who are you and what's the matter?" asked the rabbit.

"I am so cold!" was the answer.

As well as he could, without having his glasses riding on his nose, Uncle Wiggily looked around. He saw no Bad Chaps, which he at first feared he might see, but still a voice said again:

"Oh, dear! I am so cold. So very cold! Burr-r-r-r-r!"

"I don't blame you for feeling cold," spoke the rabbit. "For even in my fur overcoat I am a little chilly. But who are you?"

Then he looked around again and on the ground, near where his glasses had fallen and broken, he saw what looked like a round, black stone, with some red and yellow specks on it.

"Oh, you poor, cold stone!" exclaimed Uncle Wiggily. "I am so sorry for you I will put you in my pocket and take you to my hollow stump bungalow where, I am sure, Nurse Jane has a warm fire. Don't feel sad any more, cold stone. I will take care of you!"

"Thank you" said the voice, and Uncle Wiggily could see well enough without his glasses to pick up the cold, black lump which he put in his pocket. Then he hopped on to his bungalow.

"Well, did you have an adventure?" asked his wife as she let him in.

"I sneezed my glasses off and they broke and I brought home a cold stone to get warm," answered the rabbit gentleman.

"A cold stone," laughed Mrs. Longears. "Whoever heard of bringing home a cold stone to get warm. Ha! Ha."

"Ha! Ha" laughed Uncle Wiggily. "It does sound rather queer. But here it is," and, taking the round, cold, black thing, spotted with red and yellow out of his pocket, the rabbit gentleman put it in the kitchen close to the stove where Nurse Jane was making a clover pie.

"What have you there?" asked the muskrat lady housekeeper.

"A cold stone who wants to get warm" said the rabbit.

"Dear me I never heard of bringing a cold stone in to warm it," squeaked Miss Fuzzy Wuzzy. "You are so kind, Uncle Wiggily."

"Indeed he is," echoed a voice from beneath the stove. "Oh, I was so cold! So very cold out in the snow."

"My goodness Whoever heard of a stone talking," cried Nurse Jane.

"This is a very smart stone!" said Uncle Wiggily with a laugh. "If it can talk I will keep it in my bungalow all winter, and it will be company for you when you are in the kitchen, Nurse Jane."

"All right," said the muskrat lady, and she went on with her pie baking while Uncle Wiggily got ready to take his broken glasses to the drug store to have them mended. But he was hardly out of the front door before Nurse Jane came running after him shouting:

"Uncle Wiggily! Uncle Wiggily! Come back!"

"Back where?" asked Mr. Longears.

"Back to my kitchen and see what has happened!" shouted Nurse Jane.

"Goodness. Have you burned the clover pie?" asked the bunny.

"Oh, no!" squeaked Nurse Jane. "But that cold stone you brought home and put under my stove to get warm has come to life and it's crawling all around. It crawled over my tail and rolled into a corner. Come and look at it."

"Dear me This is very strange!" thought Uncle Wiggily. "That cold stone getting alive! I must see about this.

So, not bothering to take his broken glasses to the grocery store to have them stuck together with molasses, Uncle Wiggily hopped to the kitchen to see about the cold stone.

MISSION CIRCLE HOLDS MEETING

Mrs. G. E. Burnham Entertains Millbrook Society in First Meeting of Year.

TREASURER'S REPORT READ.

MILLBROOK, Jan. 12.—(Examiner Correspondence).—Mrs. G. E. Burnham entertained the Golden Links Mission Circle for its first meeting of the New Year, at her home on Tuesday evening, when an interesting program was presented.

The newly-elected president, Miss Jean L. Burnham, was in the chair and the treasurer, Miss Francis Jones, presented the report covering the amount raised the previous year and remitted to the Branch Treasurer, as follows:

Annual members, 33; life members, 8; fees, $8.25; Easter Thankoffering $16.75; mite boxes, $10; donations, $36.90; systematic giving $35.01; total, $166.91; less expenses, $6.91; sent branch treasurer, $100.

Miss Gertrude Spence gave a reading, "Christian Canadians in the Making," detailing the work being done by the Church of All Nations in Toronto, and Miss Charlotte Luxon followed with an account of what is being accomplished among the Ukrainians in the West.

A piano duet by Misses Francis and Beatrice Jones was much enjoyed, and the story of the collecting of $23,500 for the Girls' School in Korea, which reads like a romance, the cheque being presented to the Executive Committee of the W.M.S. of the United Church of Canada, at a recent meeting, was told by the president and followed with intense interest by the listeners. "First of all there was prayer—much prayer; and then the people were told of the need; circulars were sent broadcast, and friend told friend, and then the money began pouring in; not in great sums, but from east, west, north and south the money came with some such message as this: 'We too are praying for the girls in Korea, and for their new school'." The amount was raised in one year; the school is located at Hamheung, Korea.

New Copy Used

The new copy of the "Girls' Own Book" was in use for the first time at the meeting of the Wide Awake C.G.I.T. group on Wednesday evening.

Following the suggestion of the general secretary, Miss Jessie McPherson, the opening chapter on "A History of Canadian Girls in Training" was read, each girl taking a paragraph in turn, and the short chapter on the C.G.I.T. Insignia was read in like manner. The practice of wearing the C.G.I.T. Costume at each meeting will probably be made the rule in the near future.

The leader read "Membership Obligations and Penalties" by request as a number of new members have been received since this manual was last brought before the meeting; special emphasis was placed upon the pledge to keep the "Morning Watch" and its benefits stressed from personal experience.

The decision to hold a sale of homemade candy within the next two weeks was endorsed by all present, and one new member was welcomed and enrolled. The new pass word, and motto, were in use for the first time at this meeting.

In the worship and devotional period, the scripture lesson was read from John 14, and members taking part. The poem, "Others" was read by Miss Annie McMahon; Miss Dorothy McDowell read a short story "A New Year's Christmas" and Miss K. Donnelly gave "Resolutions" from the Girl's Own Paper.

The leader's talk was on "Changed Life Plans" with two short poems, "My Garden" and "The Silversmith" illustrating the points emphasized.

Music, games, and the usual social hour were enjoyed at the close.

THE relationship between the Bell Telephone Company and the Northern Electric Company is direct and definite. It consists of:

1. ownership—the telephone company controls the Northern Electric by owning 51 per cent of Northern Electric shares.
2. contract —The telephone company has a contract with the Northern Electric by which the latter sells equipment to the telephone company at favorable prices.

This relationship has come about in five gradual stages, as follows:

1. the factory department of the telephone company;
2. the old Northern Electric and Manufacturing Company;
3. the Western Electric alliance;
4. the Wire and Cable Company;
5. the present Northern Electric Company.

Each of these stages now will be explained.

the first two stages

WHEN the telephone company started in 1880 it found that it was in for rapid growth and that one of its problems was going to be the securing of proper new equipment.

At that time there were no companies in Canada manufacturing telephone equipment. So the telephone company set up its own factory and repair department. By 1895 the factory department had $100,000 of plant.

This $100,000 plant was turning out good equipment but its costs of production were high, due to the fact that it was engaged in manufacturing only for the telephone company and thus was idle part of the time.

To round out production a separate company was organized called the Northern Electric and Manufacturing Company from which the present Northern Electric took its name. All its shares were owned by the telephone company except five shares sold as qualifying shares to each of the seven directors.

the third stage

THE manufacture of other products reduced costs but there were still difficulties due to the fact that the telephone was in a state of constant change. Factory planning and methods were, therefore, vital factors.

The outstanding leader in this field was the Western Electric Company which was, and is, the manufacturing end of the Bell system in the United States. It had developed processes and methods which were indispensable.

Finally the Bell Telephone Company decided to secure the Western Electric as a partner in its manufacturing business.

This was accomplished in 1906 by the Northern Electric and Manufacturing Company selling 2,000 shares of treasury stock to the Western Electric Company. This gave the Western Electric a 40 per cent interest in the enterprise, while the Bell Telephone Company retained control with 55.8 per cent of the shares. The directors' shares represented the remaining 4.2 per cent of the stock.

The 2,000 shares purchased by the Western Electric in 1906 were paid for in cash at $200 a share. In 1911 the Western Electric purchased an additional 520 shares from the Bell Telephone Company and again paid cash at $200 a share. It has taken up its proportion of new stock issued to raise new capital at the issue price of $100 a share.

This relieved the telephone company of carrying the entire risk of a manufacturing business while permitting it to retain control of its chief source of supplies.

THE telephone company, back in the eighties, also found that it required increasing quantities of copper wire and cable.

It bought wire from various sources until 1899 when there came an opportunity to buy the machinery and patents of a good wire concern in Montreal. The telephone company reorganized this as the Wire and Cable Company later named the Imperial Wire and Cable Company.

In this case the Western Electric Company was secured at the start as a partner, holding 40 per cent of the outstanding shares, while the telephone company retained control with the remainder.

The object here was to secure the Western Electric's method of making paper insulated cable which, up to this time, had not been produced in Canada.

The Western Electric Company in common with all other shareholders paid cash at par value ($100) for the initial shares of the Wire and Cable Company. Its later subscriptions have also been at par value except for the purchase of 200 shares in 1911 when it paid cash at $200 a share.

the fifth stage

THE Northern Electric and Manufacturing Company and the Imperial Wire and Cable Company were operating as separate concerns.

It was inevitable, for economy and efficiency, that they should be brought together. This was done in 1914 in the incorporation of the present Northern Electric Company.

In this the telephone company and the Western Electric retained the proportion of ownership which they had held in the separate companies. Today the shares of the Northern Electric Company are owned as follows:—

by the Bell Telephone Company	50.9 per cent
by the Western Electric Company	43.6 per cent
by directors, other individuals and estates	5.5 per cent

In the last mentioned group there are 32 individual holdings of shares.

what this relation means

THE telephone company thus has direct control of its supply of both apparatus and cable. Without control there would be constant risk of being forced to pay high prices for apparatus or of being unable to secure a consistent standard of equipment.

If either of these conditions prevailed the result would be higher rates or poor service for telephone users.

Apart from this there are two definite results secured:

1. revenues—51 per cent of all dividends paid by the Northern Electric on its total business come back into the revenues of the telephone company.
2. prices —the telephone system gets its equipment at the Northern Electric's lowest prices, with the Northern Electric selling to other telephone systems in open competition.

1. revenues from dividends

THE Northern Electric Company, from its start as the small factory department of the telephone company, has developed to an outstanding Canadian success.

It now employs over 4,900 persons, and does business throughout Canada and in foreign countries in competition with the world.

In 1928 the Northern Electric's total business was over $25,000,000 which is four times the business done in 1914.

Of the $25,000,000, 48 per cent was in sales to the Bell Telephone Company; 11 per cent was in sales to other telephone systems and 41 per cent was in general electrical equipment sold to other customers, both domestic and export.

In all this total of success, year by year, the Bell Telephone Company has participated as the majority shareholder.

During the fifteen years since it was incorporated in 1914, the Northern Electric has paid to the telephone company in dividends over two-and-a-half million dollars.

These dividends go directly into the revenues of the telephone company and have contributed to the operation of the system in place of equal sums which telephone users otherwise would be called upon to pay in rates for telephone service.

In its fifteen years of operation the dividends paid by the Northern Electric represent an average annual return of only 5.7 per cent on the capital stock.

The Bell Telephone Company, as the majority shareholder, might have insisted that larger dividends be paid, but the conservative dividend policy of the Northern Electric has been dictated entirely for the benefit of the telephone system in another form.

To provide for expansion of the Northern Electric the amount of money invested in the business has been practically doubled since 1914. All this new money has come from the company's surplus earnings which instead of being distributed in dividends to shareholders have been put back into the business.

If earnings had not been put back into the business, the new capital required for expansion must have come largely from the telephone company as majority shareholder.

The policy has been that, so long as the Northern Electric could finance its own requirements for expansion, the telephone company should not be called upon to provide funds for that purpose.

2. low prices by contract

THE contract which the Bell Telephone Company has with the Northern Electric stipulates that the prices the Bell Telephone Company pays for equipment shall be as low as, or lower than, the lowest prices paid to the Northern Electric by its other customers for similar equipment.

The other customers of the Northern Electric include every telephone system of importance in Canada. The Northern Electric supplies the greater part of their equipment. All this business has been obtained in open competition with British and American manufacturers.

It is the lowest price level of this competitive business which governs the prices paid by the Bell Telephone Company.

In order to assure itself that the Northern Electric is fulfulling the price obligations stipulated in the contract the Bell Telephone Company maintains an accounting staff in the Northern Electric offices in Montreal.

This accounting staff has access to all the Northern Electric's sales records and checks prices charged to the Bell Telephone Company with prices charged to other customers.

The Board of Railway Commissioners in 1926 made a detailed inquiry into these prices.

The evidence demonstrated beyond contradiction that the prices paid by the Bell Telephone Company to the Northern Electric were lower than the prices paid by other customers and lower than the Bell Telephone Company could obtain from other manufacturers, and the judgement of the Board of Railway Commissioners in 1927 stated:

"—the agreement and the supplementary agreement which govern their relations are distinctly advantageous to the Bell Telephone Company."

two proofs of the results

QUITE apart from considering dividends or prices there are two sure ways of finding out whether this relation has produced good results or bad.

These are to examine what the telephone company has spent in building the system and what the subscriber now has to pay to use it.

If the system has been built economically, and if rates are moderate, it must be true that the prices paid by the telephone company for its equipment and supplies have been low.

1. cost of building system

HERE are figures from the last published annual reports to show what the telephone company has spent to build the system in Ontario and Quebec as compared with other systems in Canada, the United States, England and Brazil.

Some of these other systems are operated by governments and some are private companies. It must be recognized that the conditions of operation are very different. Some are easier; some are more difficult.

But over so wide a range of comparison, and taking an average of all conditions, the figures tell the story.

System	Number of Telephones	Capital cost per telephone
1. government system in Great Britain	1,511,585	$307
2. government systems in Manitoba, Sask., and Alberta	161,351	$294
3. Brazil	83,677	$248
4. all companies of Bell system in United States	13,726,000	$221
5. Bell Telephone Co. in Ontario and Quebec	668,383	$189
6. companies in B.C. and the Maritimes	160,515	$157

The average cost per telephone of all the other systems, according to their annual reports, has been $227. The cost per telephone of the system in Ontario and Quebec has been $189.

2. rates paid by users

THE rates which telephone users pay in Ontario and Quebec are the lowest in the world for comparable service.

Without making specific comparisons the fact may be stated that throughout Ontario and Quebec, especially in the larger cities, telephone users are getting service at substantially lower rates than those paid in corresponding cities across the border.

And the rates paid in Ontario and Quebec are lower than those charged in other provinces of Canada.

This has been officially stated in the report of the Board of Railway Commissioners following their investigation of the subject in 1926.

The Commissioners stated that while comparisons of rates are not always conclusive, it was apparent that the rates charged in Ontario and Quebec are more reasonable than those charged in other provinces for comparable service.

In cost of using, as well as in cost of building, it is apparent that the telephone company's relation with the Northern Electric has worked to the definite advantage of the system and its subscribers.

further investigation

DETAILS of the Northern Electric Company's operations in so far as they relate to the telephone system have been examined several times by the Board of Railway Commissioners and are available whenever required.

But the suggestion has been made that, in addition to such related details, all the affairs of the Northern Electric Company should be opened to investigation, with the inevitable result that the information thus secured would become common property.

This would mean that the Northern Electric Company, alone of all manufacturers in Canada, would be obliged to disclose, for the benefit of competitors, details of production methods, costs and administration which have no relation whatever to the telephone system.

It would be a discrimination without precedent in any country.

The position of the Bell Telephone Company in this respect was stated by the president in a letter which was widely published last June. There has been no change in this position, which was stated as follows:—

"It does not seem reasonable that the Northern Electric Company should be singled out for public disclosure of its affairs unrelated to Bell Telephone business. If the Railway Board feels that further enquiry into the Bell Telephone side of the Northern Electric Company's business is necessary in order to determine the fairness of this company's rates then we offer no objection."

The Purpose of the Bill

THE Bell Telephone Company is bringing before parliament a Bill which is in the public interest. The Bill would allow the company to seek new capital from investors. The new capital is for extension of the telephone system.

A previous advertisement has fully described this situation. This advertisement is to state in detail the relationship between the telephone company and its chief source of supplies, the Northern Electric Company.

RICHARD HALL LIMITED

CATTLE, GRAIN, PRODUCE

MONTREAL GRAIN AND PRODUCE.

MONTREAL, Que., January 14 (Canadian Press). — Owing to the renewed strength in the future grain markets at Winnipeg and Chicago on Saturday local grain dealers advanced prices for car load lots of Manitoba wheat two cents per bushel, barley one cent, oats ½ cent, and American corn two cents. There was some further demand from exporters for scalping oats and sales of fair sized lots were made at 32c per bushel, track, Fort William, for tenday shipment. The trade in car lots of all kinds of grain with the country was quiet. Manitoba No. 6 wheat sold at $1.06, feed wheat at 98c. Manitoba feed barley at 78c, and American No. 4 yellow corn at $1.10.

The undertone to the flour market was firm under a good demand for spring and winter wheat grades.

A feature of the millfeed trade was the easier feeling that developed for bran and shorts and prices were reduced $2.00 per ton. This was attributed to the large stocks available and the inactive demand. Standard grades of rolled oats were unchanged.

The trade in butter was moderately active, and prices were well maintained. Receipts were 146 packages.

The cheese market was quiet, but the tone of the market was steady. Receipts were 437 boxes.

There was no further change in wholesale and jobbing prices for eggs, but the undertone to the market continued unsettled. Receipts were 3,490 cases.

Canadian beans continued to sell well at $5.40 per bushel, wholesale.

The potato trade was dull, but the values were unchanged. Prince Edward Island Whites sold at 84c, Green Mountains at 88c per 90 pounds, in bags, while New Brunswick Green Mountains sold at 65c per 90 pounds in bulk.

CHICAGO GRAIN

CHICAGO, Ill., January 14 (Canadian Press). — Grain prices went up with a rush on Saturday. Buying on a big scale developed after reports came that special session of Congress is assured. The news was generally construed to mean that comprehensive quick farming relief legislation has been brought to a practical focus. As a net result, corn scored to about 8½c a bushel over prices current last week, with wheat up more than 8c, and al deliveries of corn and oats surpassing every top-price record heretofore this season.

Corn closed strong 1⅞c to 2⅛c to 2⅝c over Friday's finish. Latest quotations for wheat were unsettled at 1⅞c net gain, while oats were ¼c to ⅝c advanced and provisions showing 7c to 30c upturn.

Sudden upward swings in the corn market on Saturday went further and held better than was the case with wheat. One reason evident was that corn values were given buoyancy not only by Washington advices indicating speedy enactment of farm relief measures, but also by word that the drought situation affecting the new Argentine corn crop has become acute. Despatches were at hand describing the widespread dearth of moisture in Argentina as very bad, and stating that heavy rain in the immediate future are necessary to save the crop from extensive damage.

No impediment to the sensational advances on Saturday in grain prices came from definite reports which were circulated that the door had been closed to farm relief legislation at the present session of Congress. An outlook for quick action on farm measures at a special session appeared to operate as much more than an offset, and highest prices of the day were reached long after the reports referring to the door being closed at the present session were out.

Particular interest was shown by corn traders in the fact that Saturday's advance carried the corn market to above $1.00 a bushel. The July delivery of orn here went to $1.00⅝. Profit-taking sals set in at this stage, however, and a reaction from the day's top level took place in the late dealings, although a rallying tendency was again evident at the wind-up.

Wheat responded to corn strength as well as to the news from Washington about farm relief. Besides, talk was current that the wheat trade has been excessively bearish for six months, and that wheat is too low in price as compared to other commodities. A big increase of speculative buying of wheat on Saturday found offerings light, and a profusion of standing orders from previous sellers to stop losses at various fixed limits were forced into operation. Much of the new buying of wheat was credited to houses with connections east. Oats followed the upward course of other grains.

Provisions joined in the advances scored by cereals.

COMMITTEE APPOINTED.

(Examiner Correspondence)

ROSENEATH, Jan. 14.— At the first meeting of the Women's Institute for the year held at the home of Mrs. (Rev.) Brown, a communication was read from Fenelon Falls, asking for cast-off clothing, but this was turned down as the Roseneth Branch has calls nearer home where the yresponded to the needs of the poor..

Mrs. Lottie Nichol presided and opened the meeting. The secretary was instructed to pay Miss Jessie Johnston for handkerchief bought for the aged people at the County Home, Cobourg, and to pay the bill of John McMillan for street lights and sundries.

The program committee for February was appointed and will consist of Mrs. Ella Brown, and Miss Mary Braithwaite. There was some discussion regarding the play to be given, but this was left to a committee to report at the next meeting which will be held at the home of Mrs. Andrew Brown.

The following ladies contributed to the program:—Reading, Mrs. James A. Brown, "New Year's"; reading, "Tell the Rector", Mrs. James Webb; reading, Mrs. Orra Varcoe, "The New Year". Mrs. (Rev.) Brown favored the ladies with a beautiful solo entitled "When Irish Eyes are Smiling" accompanied by Mrs. C. W. Varcoe at the piano. Mrs. Lottie Nichol gave a reading entitled "The Old and the New Year" and Mrs. C. W. Varcoe contributed an instrumental selection which was much enjoyed.

At the close of the meeting, each member took hold of a string hanging from a large covered basket and in drawing, each one received a surprise gift. This was a new feature of the meeting and took the place of a Christmas gift for everyone present.

The hostess and her friends, including the Misses Bessie Turner and Joy Morrison, served lunch when a social time was spent.

COMPANY WILL ERECT PLANT UPON SITE OF OLD FACTORY

New Building Will Be of Cement Block Construction—Modern Machinery.

OPEN MAY 1.

Bert Buck of Norwood Purchases Farm Property in Asphodel Township.

HASTINGS, Jan. 14 (Examiner Correspondence).—On July 19, 1928, fire which originated in the boiler room while the men were at dinner, totally destroyed the Ormond Cheese and Butter Factory, situated on the Norwood Road, just outside the corporation of Hastings Village. The stockholders held several meetings and finally decided not to rebuild, and sold the site to R. W. Montgomery, who had been their cheesemaker for eleven years. Now upon the ashes of the old building, a modern cheese and butter factory is being erected by Mr. Montgomery and George Gillespie of the City Milk Products, Peterborough.

The new factory, which is to be ready for operation May 1st, will be a one-storey building, 30 x 60 feet, with a boiler-room 16 x 40 feet. The walls will be of cement block construction, with continuous hollow formation, thus destroying all dead air spaces. There will be a daily capacity of twenty-seven cheese from the beginning, but the butter-making machinery will not be installed for the first season. A modern cool curing room and refrigerator is planned as part of the main building. The agitators and separators will be operated by electric motors and an auxiliary steam engine.

The John S. Stacey Construction Co. of Trenton have the contract for the erection of the factory, while A. N. Scriver of Hastings has secured the contract for five thousand cement blocks specially designed and reenforced with steel.

Mr. Montgomery is to be congratulated for his enterprise, in planning for such an up-to-date plant for Hastings, and one which will be a real asset to the farmers and dairymen of the area to be served.

Real Estate Transfer.

In Asphodel Township, slightly over a mile north of Hastings, is a two hundred acre farm, which for the past seventeen years has been owned by Mr. Wellington Buck, a very successful farmer. Recently, Mr. Buck sold his splendid farm to Mr. Bert Buck of Norwood for the handsome price of eleven thousand dollars. The purchaser is also securing the stock and implements for an additional amount. Mr. and Mrs. Wellington Buck expect to reside in Hastings, where they will receive a hearty welcome from their many friends.

Curling Season Opened.

Curling enthusiasts of Hastings have been delayed in getting into the game this year, owing to the mild weather, but at last the ice is fine and fit. On Tuesday evening L. E. Kelley and William Wellman played the first game, with Wellman winning a twelve end game by one shot.

OBITUARY

MICHAEL TORPEY.

The death occurred in Mt. Pleasant, Michigan, on Tuesday, Jan. 8th, of a former resident of this district, in the person of Michael Torpey, after an illness of over two years. He is survived by one sister, Mrs. Ellen Tobin, 621 Water street, also several nieces and nephews.

CHARLES KITNEY.

At the age of 78 years, Charles Kitney, sr., head of the firm of Charles Kitney and Sons, Market Gardeners, of Otonabee township, passed away at his home on Sunday at noon, January 13. The funeral will take place from the family residence in that township on Tuesday, January 15, at 2 p.m., proceeding to St. James United Church and thence to Little Lake Cemetery for interment.

The late Mr. Kitney was widely known in this district, having come to Peterboro from Kent, England, in the year 1885. He was particularly active in the life of St. James United Church, having served as an elder since union, and a member of the official board since church was established. He was also highly esteemed as a member of the Sons of England Lodge and the Orange Order here. Mrs. Kitney predeceased him ten years.

Two daughters and three sons survive, namely Florence Kitney and Mrs M. Stokes, at home and C. F. Kitney and Ernest Kitney, both resident of Otonabee. A brother Walter, caretaker of Nicholls Oval park, is now the only survivor of seven brothers.

THOMAS WOOD.

South Monaghan lost one of its oldest and most respected residents in the death of Thomas Wood on Monday, January 7, at the home of his nephew, Wilbert C. Wood, in his 84th year.

He was the last surviving member of a family of ten children of the late George Wood and his wife, Isabella Rebecca Colton, who came to Canada in 1829 from Yorkshire, England and settled on lots 11 and 12, concession 2, South Monaghan. His sisters were Mrs. Stenton, of Chatham, Mrs. Chambers of Fenelon Falls and Mrs. W. Morrison of Monaghan. His brothers were Robert, Henry, Joseph, David, George and Jim, all of South Monaghan. He was a member of the Benefort United Church. His wife was Elizabeth Moncrief, who predeceased him some twenty years ago. He is survived by three sons, Alfred of Vancouver, Edgar of South Monaghan, William of Toronto, and two grandchildren, Grace Perrin of Vancouver and Blake Wood of Toronto.

The funeral was held on January 9th from the old homestead and was conducted by Rev. Mr. Swayne. Interment was in the United church cemetery, South Monghan. The bearers were his two sons, Edgar and Wiliam and four nephews, Arthur, Wilbert, Everett and Byron Wood.

MRS. MARY GARVEY.

DOURO, Jan. 14.— The funeral of the late Mrs. Mary Garvey took place from the residence of her son, Joseph, lot 3, con. 3, to St. Joseph's church and cemetery. Rev. J. Garvey, of Lakefield, son of deceased, was celebrant of the solemn requiem mass, with Rev. J. J. O'Brien, Peterborough, deacon, and Rev. McAuley, Ennismore, sub-deacon, and Rev. P. Lynch, Peterborough, master of ceremonies. Also present in the sanctuary were His Lordship Bishop O'Brien, Rev. Father Carroll, Rev. Father Costello, Rev. Dean O'Sullivan, all of Peterborough, Rev. J. McGuire Hastings, and Rev. M. J. McGuire and Rev. Father Leonard, of Douro.

His Lordship Bishop O'Brien gave a short sermon. He spoke of the blessed Christmas season which has three great feasts of the church, namely, the Nativity or Christmas, the Circumcision and Epiphany. The Christmas season is a time for winning grace for ourselves. Next His Lordship spoke of the death of Mrs. Garvey. There is a natural sorrow for our departed which is implanted in our hearts by God himself. But there is also the feeling on the death of one who has lived a good life that death is a triumph as it is the entrance to life verlasting. When a parent dies who has given some of his or her children to the church, he does not go empty-handed before the throne of God. Deceased had given a son and two daughters to serve in religious service. A duty is laid on the relatives, friends and neighbors to pray for the soul of the deceased.

The pallbearers were Messrs. Arthur Carveth, Maurice O'Leary, Timothy Garvey, Francis O'Connor, Richard Sheehan and Frederick Walsh.

Mrs. Patrick Farley of Otonabee, is a sister, not Mrs. Patrick Hurley, as formerly stated.

Those from a distance who attended were: Mr. Edward Corkery and son Martin of Ennismore, Mrs. Dennis Garvey, son Leo and daughters Laura and Martha; Mr. and Mrs. Johnson and Mr. Wilfrid Pluard, all of Lakefield, Mr. and Mrs. David Garvey, Mr. and Mrs. Michael Heffernan and Mrs. Richard Heffernan, all of Norwood, Mrs. Bridget O'Leary of Peterborough, Mr. Joseph Fitzgerald, Mr. Timothy Garvey, son Gerald and daughter Irene, Mr. Edward Fitzgerald and daughter Anastasia, all of Otonabee, and others.

Internal Pains Ended

"About six years ago my wife suggested a trial of Kruschen Salts—for nearly 20 years before then I had regularly suffered from internal pains at more or less frequent intervals, and various names had been given to my trouble by different doctors. Since using your very valuable production I have not had a single attack of my old trouble, and having made such an extended test I think it only fair to add my testimony to that of others who have benefited by the regular use of Kruschen." The damage was confined to the complete stripping of insulation on all wires and electric cables extending throught the elevator shaft from the fifty-fifth to the fifty-seventh floors.

Officials of the building said they believed a short-circuit ignited the inculation on the wires and caused the fire.

Rev. D. A. Thomson, D.D., was able to resume his work last Sunday, after an enforced vacation due to his accident of several weeks ago. His many friends are glad to see him out again.

Bethseda United Church Holds Annual Re-organization Service—Reports Read.

COOKSTON, Jan. 12.—(Examiner Correspondence).—The annual re-organization service of the Bethesda United Church took place on Thursday evening, January 10, at the church. The pastor, Rev. J. N. Lovelace, as chairman opened the service with devotional exercises. Ernest Holland acted as secretary pro tem. Reports were received and adopted of the secretary treasurer of the church, the Ladies' Aid, the Maintenance and Extension and the White Lake Cemetery Board. Following this the officers and stewards for the ensuing year were elected. A vote of thanks was tendered the secretaries for the work of the past year. From this followed the re-organization of the Sunday School. H. M. Wood was re-elected superintendent, and coming to the platform he thanked the members for their renewed expression of confidence in placing him again in the position which he had held for so long a time. He then proceeded with the election of Secretary-treasurer, organist, heads of departments and teachers of the school.

The attendance was not large, but a feeling of earnestness was felt in the welfare of the work of the church in all its branches.

Hawks Battle To 1-1 Tie With Pirates in Overtime Hockey.

MONTREAL, Que., Jan. 14 (Canadian Press).—With Albert "Battleship" Leduc, relief defencemen, acting in the hero role, Canadiens won a 3 to 1 victory over their local rivals, the Maroons, in a spirited National Hockey League battle at the Forum Saturday night before 12,500 persons. The game was fast and open throughout, and evenly fought until Leduce forced the break with a goal about midway through the second period. This counter which resulted from a comparatively easy shoe from the Maroon blue line, gave the Canucks added incentive, and before the period ended, they held a 2 to 0 lead. Patterson scored Canadiens' second goal, but it was Leduc who made the play for this counter, which came from a perfect bit of combination work at the Maroon defence.

Scores in Third

Half way through the third period, Mantha made it 3 to 0 for the ultimate victors, when he skirted the left side of the opposing defence, and slipped the disc through a pace of about two inches between Benedict's pads and the post. The Maroons avoided a shutout when Phillips circled the Canuck net and slapped the puck past Hainsworth during a belated rally staged by the losers in the dying moments of the game. The Maroons' last minute rally, however, nearly proved more effective, but good work by Hainsworth in the final sixty seconds of play, kept the onrushing Maroons at bay. Twice after Phillips had scored, Dave Trottier, Maroon sub left winger, got right in on top of the Canuck net, but each time was turned back by Hainsworth.

The teams:

Canadiens.—Goal, Hainsworth; defence, Mantha and Burke; centre, Leduc; wings, Gagne and Joliat; subs., Leduce, Patterson, Mondou, Morenz, Lalonde and Carson.

Maroons.—Goal, Benedict; defence, Dutton and Siebert; centre, Smith; wings, Ward and Stewart; subs, Boyle, Phillips, Lamb, and Trottier.

Officials: Bobby Hewitson and Lou Marsh.

Battle to 1-1 Tie.

CHICAGO, Ills., Jan. 14 (Canadian Press).—The Chicago Black Hawks outscored the Pittsburgh Pirates 2 to 0 last night, yet the fourth National League hockey tussle between the two sextets ended in a 1 to 1 tie after 70 minutes of mediocre hockey.

The Hawks counted the first goal early in the second period, but the tally went to the credit of the Pirates, as Chuck Gardner, Black Hawks' goalie, shoved the puck into his own goal. Frank Frederickson, the giant Pittsburgh centre, was given the goal because it was his drive that Gardner attempted to stop while lying prone on the ice. The Chicago goalie, in an attempt to shove the rubber out of danger, sent it twisting into the net.

Americans Blank Leafs.

TORONTO, Jan. 14.—One of the biggest mysteries of the current National Hockey League campaign has been practically solved. Another capacity house witnessed the Maple Leafs and the New York Americans meet at the Arena Gardens on Saturday night and the spectators were considerably enlightened as to why the Star-Spangled crew tops the standing in the Canadian section of the group and has defeated a number of teams who, on paper, appear to be considerably stronger. The Americans defeated the Leafs for the third time this season, the score being 1 to 0 after ten minutes' overtime, although the locals had the best of the territorial play, had more chances to score and forced the pace most of the way. Incidentally all four games between the two teams have been shut-outs.

Freak Goal Wins Game.

NEW YORK, N.Y., Jan. 14 (Canadian Press).—A freak goal when Bernard Brophy, Detroit forward, scored against his own team gave the Rangers a 1 to 0 victory over the Cougars in a speedy National Hockey League game here last night. Detroit had a slight advantage, sending 50 shots at Roach, while Dolson stopped only 36.

PROVIDENCE DEFEATS NEWARK.

PROVIDENCE, R.I., Jan. 14.—(Canadian Press.) — The Providence Reds scored two goals in the final period to defeat the Newark Bulldogs, 2 to 0, in a Canadian-American League hockey game here Saturday night, thereby gaining undisputed possession of second place in the league standing.

LINDSAY HERE TO-NIGHT FOR JUNIOR BATTLE

Visitors Count On Their Speed To Win On Bigger Ice Surface.

IT MEANS A LOT.

Result of Game With St. John's Will Have Important Bearing.

With good ice assured for to-night's important Junior O.H.A. game between Lindsay and the local St. John's team Peterborough fans should see one of the smartest exhibitions of the year.

Make no mistake about these Lindsay youngsters. They have all kinds of speed and the fact that they are playing on a laregr ice surface to-night is right to their liking. They figure they have more foot than the Saints and that the latter were better on the small Lindsay rink than they will be at home. At any rate Gerster, Forbert and the other Lindsay speed artists are confident of skating the Peterborough kids into the ground to-night and getting back what they lost on Friday.

With a double schedule this group will not be decided without a bird of a race, but the Saints have started well and are hopeful of increasing their lead by another win over Lindsay to-night. The group standing is as follows:

	W.	L.	Goals F.	A.
St. John's	2	0	7	4
Bobcaygeon	1	1	6	6
Lindsay	0	2	4	7

Each game has been a keen battle and there should be plenty more before the section honors are finally decided.

To-night's fixture looms up as one of the best of the schedule; inasmuch as it will have a very important bearing upon the final outcome.

Both teams are in good shape and there should be no dull moments.

The battle will start at 8.30 o'clock.

OLYMPICS TAME PANTHERS 6-0

WEAK BACK-CHECKING.

OLYMPIC ARENA, Detroit, Mich., Jan. 14.—Bert Corbeaus London Panthers were tamed by the league-leaders, Detroit Olympics, here Sunday night by a score of 6-0 in a game that was as one-sided as the final figures would indicate. The Olympics came through with two goals in each chapter, outplayed the visitors from the net out and won as they pleased. At no time in the struggle did the Panthers loom dangerous.

Despite the lop-sided score, the blame for the whitewashing cannot be placed at Joe Ironstone's door, that individual had one of the busiest nights of his professional hockey career and the count might have been much larger had he not been on the job.

Weak back-checking and careless defence playing played a big part in the poor showing of the London Club and permitted the Olympics to sail in on Ironstone at will. The puck was in London territotry three quarters of the game and when the visitors did manage to break through the close-checking Detroiters, they were unable to make headway against Herb Stuart.

Gene Sarazen Wins Miami Beach Tourney

MIAMI BEACH, Fla., Jan. 14.—(Canadian Press).—Gene Sarasen in a "garrison finish" climaxed by a 30 foot putt for an eagle three on the 72nd hole Saturday with a gross of 286 won the Miami Beach open golf tournament, adding another title to the string he has acquired in Miami and Miami Beach events. He barely nosed out George Chryst, Davenport, Fla., and Rochester, N.Y., pro, who won second money with 287.

Johnny Farrell, National open champ, George Veight, Douglaston, N.Y., amateur, and Willie Klein, La Gorce pro, tied for third place with 293 each.

CAMPBELLFORD WINS BY GOAL

Trent Valley League Teams Battle Through Two Overtime Periods.

FINAL SCORE 3-2.

CAMPBELLFORD, Jan. 14. —(Examiner Staff Correspondence). —Hockey that was fast and clean was what the fans saw at Davidson's Arena on Friday night when Marmora visited the local team in a Trent Valley League fixture. The victory remained at home and was won only after a desperate struggle that went two periods of overtime, and with a close score of three to two. The game was one of the cleanest exhibitions ever played here. There were only two penalties and they were of but one minute each William Green, Belleville, kept the boys in their places and favored neither one side nor the other. His motto seemed to be to keep the players on the ice and to make them play, fast, clean hockey His warning finger on several occasions did much to show his authority.

The game began fast and furious with clever, fast combinations featuring the efforts of both teams. Marmora was the first to substitute when they relieved Ibey whose knee, injured in a previous game, was giving him trouble. The deft checking on the part of the visitors worried the local boys considerably for a while till "Darky" Runions scored the initial goal on a pass from Pollock. With six minutes of the period gone, the players increased their efforts. Runions' snappy checking and the long shot which followed won him the cheers of the crowd. Pollock kept the Marmora forwards pretty well worried for a few minutes till he was subbed by Hunter. Marmora began to press for a goal to even the score and a dangerous moment in front of the local goal was relieved only when Blue broke away. Marmora retaliated with two tries at the local net but failed to score. Campbellford might have had a goal but their combination broke up when they missed their pass only a few feet from the Marmora net. Then the play returned to their own end and the local boys had to depend more than a little on Sanders, to save the day. Ibey did some excellent work in his checking and general manouvers. Three and one half minutes from the end of the period, George Scott, Marmora defense evened the score. Then the visitors got going strong for the goal that would give them the lead, but they couldn't fool the local goalie twice in the same period. The gong sounded with the game at the Campbellford blue line.

In the second period, there were fourteen shots on the home net against nine on the Marmora goal. There were fifteen offsides and no penalties. Score: Marmora 1; Campbellford 1.

The third stanza began a little slower than the game itself had begun. The ice was getting a little sticky, and the players seemed to be feeling each other out, and waiting for a break. Runions was the first to get up his speed and just as two minutes of the period were up, Bill Blue scored on a solo rush. His counter put the home team in the lead again. The referee warned Flint for rough checking, Buck, Marmora left wing, worked a tough passage all the way up the ice but didn't manage to score. Some good combination by the local team failed to get them anywhere, but served to speed up the game. Green found it necessary to warn Shannon about some of his methods. Pollock got in some desperate checking right in the visitors home ground but it was McArthur who broke up the dangerous Marmora combination that was getting under way. Both sides subbed for the first time during the period. A minute later Huck McArthur drew a one-minute rest for tripping. Left alone on the defense, Fred Ingram got up speed and did some threatening one man rush. Runions followed the example. Auger got a warning for slugging and Bill Blue was pulled off asolo rush that was spectacular but he missed his shot. Marmora's combination lost some of its deadliness. A local combination got a shot on the local goal, but Flint missed the rebound and the period ended at the visitors' blue line.

In the first period there were seven shots on the local goal and ten on the Marmora goal. Four offsides were charged to the visitors and six to the home team. The single penalty of the period went to Campbellford. Score at the end of the period, Marmora 1; Campbellford 2.

The second period began as the game had, with a rush. Marmora went out to get the goal they needed to tie the score and the home team used their efforts to increase their lead to a safer margin. Fast combination featured play on both sides. Marmora reverted to long shots at the local net whenever the puck got into their territory and managed to keep the major portion of the action in the Campbellford defense area. In a dangerous moment, McArthur broke away and came to the front alone. Sanders had a bad few minutes when he stopped a shot from about ten feet and managed to save all the tries from a contest right in front of his net The visitors were pressing hard till Shannon was injured when he got bodied. Then Ingram broke away for one of his famous solos and after managing to thread his way through the Marmora defense, could not beat the goalie. In a minute or two, Campbellford began to slow up and the visitors brought more pressure to bear. They got a warning from the referee. There was a tight squeeze in front of the Campbellford net but McArthur managed to break away. Again Marmora pressed the local goal area and this time Buck got through the defense and took an open shot from about ten feet. It fooled Sanders and the score was tied, with 3 minutes to theend of the game. The visiting fans cheered the man who was the hero of the moment. Campbellford strove mightily to get into the lead again. Blue drew a minute in the penalty box for slugging and Marmora got one try at the net whfle Campbellford was one man short. Both teams substituted but the game ended with the score even. Overtime was necessary to decide a winner.

In the third period, there were ten shots on the Marmora goal, the same number on the Campbellford goal. Five offsides were charged to the visitors and four to the home team. The single penalty sent out to Campbellford. Score, Marmora 2, Campbellford 2.

The tide seemed to turn in the first overtime period and Campbellford kept the play well into the visitors territory but the period ended with no score. There were five shots on the Marmora goal and only one to the Campbellford goal. Six offsides went to the visitors and only one to the local team. There were no penalties.

The second period of overtime was played more in the centre of the ice.

With one minute of the precious time gone, Fred Ingram took the bit in his teeth and achieved what had seemed impossible. Taking the puck back of his own blue line he executed a solo rush, beat the Marmora defense and scored. The fans were wild with delight. Marmora got two tries at the local net but failed to tally. Campbellford got one other shot but without scoring. There were two offsides by Marmora, and none by the home team.

FAMOUS HOCKEY GAMES OF PETERBOROUGH TEAMS

By F. D. C.

Peterborough had teams in all three series of the O.H.A. in 1913 and although no championships were won local fans saw a lot of sparkling hockey.

The Peterborough seniors in the major ranks for the first time in years found themselves in mighty fast company for they were grouped with the crack St. Michael's team, Toronto University and the Kingston Frontenacs.

The Petes, by drafting Dwyer from the junior squad and adding such sterling players as Pete Spratt, the ex-St. Michael's and Lindsay star and Art Armstrong, the smart Trenton player, rounded out a nice team and in spite of mild weather early in the season, interfering with practice they made a good showing.

Their first game was in Toronto against the famous St. Michael's outfit and as the Petes had to go on the ice without any practice while the Saints had been working out for weeks they were badly beaten.

The return game here was a sensational battle, one of the greatest local fixtures of all time. The Saints won again, this time by 7 to 4, but owed their success chiefly to a wonderful exhibition of goalkeeping by their crack net guardian, Gordon Bricker, who withstood a terrific bombardment in the second half and almost single-handed beat the homesters.

St. Michael's, with the famous duo, Frank Rankin and Jerry Laflamme, one of the best centre ice combination in the history of the game, were a great drawing card. They brought many supporters down from Toronto and fans from all over the district swarmed into Peterborough for the battle.

The game was a thriller. The pace never slackened. The Saints got away to an early lead when Murphy scored on a side shot and Rankin took a Laflamme pass from the face-off and added a second goal in 15 seconds.

Then Maurice Park scored for Peterborough after a rush by Coughlin and Kelly. Murphy batted in a rebound to make it 3 to 1 for St. Mike's and Park retaliated by scoring after a great rush by Coughlin.

Back came St. Mike's and Laflamme netted his own rebound to put his team ahead 4 to 2. Then the Petes staged a rally that sent the crowd into a frenzy, Armstrong scoring on a side shot and Armstrong going through alone to tie the score.

For fifteen minutes in the second period the Petes rained shots at Bricker but could not beat him. The St. Mike's goalie handled dozens of hard drives and beat them all and finally after all this excitement Gordon and Rankin slipped down for two fast St. Michael's goals and put the game out of the Petes' reach.

St. Michael's—Goal, Bricker; point, Gordon; cover, Dissette; rover, Rankin; centre, Laflamme; right wing, Murphy; left wing, Richardson.

Referee—Lawson Whitehead, Toronto.

BRUINS WIN FROM COUGARS

Boston Tie With Detroit For Second Place in League Standings.

SIXTH WIN FOR BRUINS.

BOSTON, Mass., Jan. 14 (Canadian Press).—The Boston Bruins ran their string of consecutive victories up to six here Saturday night by defeating the Detroit Cougars, 3 to 2. The win placed the Bruins in a tie with Detroit for second place in the National League standing.

Cooney Welland, the Bruins' spare centre, was the brightest star of the exciting contest. He caged two of the Bruins' tallies and had an assist on the third, which Mackey netted after taking a pass on a face-off.

Bill Brydge appeared to be the ablest stickman in the Detroit lineup. He scored the Cougars' first goal and was so strong on the defense that he checked several threatening rallies. Hay netted the visitors' second goal later in the final period.

With two minutes to go, Detroit tried to put the game into overtime by playing five men inside the Bruins' blue line. The Ross men, however, were able to hold them off until the final bell, even with a man shy.

The line-up:

Boston.—Goal, Thompson, defense, Owen and Shore; centre, Gainor; wings, Green and Oliver. Spares, Mackey, Welland, Clapper, Galbraith, Hitchman.

Wife Of American League Swat King Burned To Death When House Destroyed

WATERTOWN, Mass., January 14 (Canadian Press). — Mrs. George Herman Ruth, wife of "Babe" Ruth, the home run king, was burned to death in a fire which destroyed a house at which she was visiting here on Friday night, it was learned yesterday when relatives identified the body.

The body until yesterday was believed to be that of Mrs. Helen Kinder, wife of Dr. Edward H. Kinder, a dentist, at whose home Mrs. Ruth was visiting. Two sisters, Catherine and Nora Woodford, of South Boston, identified it at a local undertaking establishment as that of Mrs. Ruth.

District Attorney Robert T. Bushnell, of Middlesex County, assigned State detectives to investigate the case, and ordered an autopsy on the body. Neither the family of Mrs. Ruth nor the authorities were able last night to explain the delay in identification.

SENATORS DEFEAT PITTSBURGH 2-1

Game Roughest Ever Played On Pirates' Home Ice—Many Penalties.

PITTSBURG, Pa., Jan. 14 (Canadien Press).—The Ottawa Senators defeated the Pittsburgh Pirates here last night in one of the roughest hockey games ever played on Pittsburgh ice. The score was 2 to 1. Cotton and Godin became involved in a fisticuff late in the third period and each drew down major penalties, Kilrea started the scoring in the very first period when Finnigan passed to him in front of the Pirate net. This market was tied a few minutes later when Holway got a nice pass from Frederickson and felled Connell with his drive. But the Senators would not be denied, and after A. Smith had sent a tough one into Miller for the lead in the second period, the visitors went on the defensive and prevented further Pirate thrusts.

Clancy and Finnegan started a furious pace for the Senators and battled with Frederickson and Darragh for offensive supremacy. The game was fast from the opening face-off and only excellent goal-keeping prevented early scoring. The Pirates were trying a new defense combination in Holway and McCaffrey, McKinnon and R. Smith being the secondary reserves. At the six-minute mark the Pirates changed forward lines, and Cotton pressed hard, coming to grief at the blue line. Just at this point Kilrea and Finnegan started down the ice and on a fine Finnegan pass Kilrea dented the Pirate cords. Eight minutes later Frederickson got away and with Holway tied the score.

Miller opened the second period by saving two beautiful drives. Skating was as fast as ever, and individual sorties predominated. Touhey got past the entire Pirate line, but Miller saved. Johnny McKinnon came on the ice and made a furious solo but a mix-up at the Senator blue line saved Connell trouble. Clancy was playing a whale of a game for the visitors and his shoes shook Miller. A. Smith scored the second Senator goal late in the second period, after going through the entire Pirate team, and Miller had no chance. Just as the bell rang, McCaffry got one past Connell for the tieing score—but it didn't count.

Connell was lucky at the very opening of the third period. Darragh and Milks were lined in front of the Ottawa net and shot three hard ones in, the third clearing, but Mallison's whistle saved the score the second loss the Pirates had suffered. But if Connell was lucky, Miller was doubly so. Clancy took the puck down to the Pirate net and had a clear shot, but lost his stick, and Miller was saved the trouble of having another marker checked up against him. The Senators reverted to a five man defense with only Clancy playing a roving game. Godin and Cotton each were put off the ice for fighting. It took the entire Ottawa and Pirate teams to separate the men. Each drew down a major penalty. Nothing happened during the belligerants' servitude and each regained the ice in time for further activity. But the Ottawa defense could not be penetrated and the game ended with the Senators on the long end of the two-one count.

HAMILTON ADDS TO LIST

HAMILTON, Ont., Jan. 12—(Canadian Press).—Winning games at home is getting to be quite a habit with the Hamilton Canpros and they added another to their string of local victories here last night when they earned a 1 to 0 decision over the Niagara Falls Cataracts, in as strenuous a game as has been played here this winter.

About the Theme.

"Mother Knows Best" is the story of a child of the stage who was guided to the heights by her mother and her own talent. A mother with a driving force of character which symbolized her point of view on life and a mother who would let nothing halt the daughter's career even when the one romance of her life came into being and she came to a realization that there was something real in life after all.

TOOL MAKERS DEFEAT WIRE DEPARTMENT 5-1

Victors Display Clever Exhibition of Combination Work and Good Shooting.

ENGINEERS IN TIE.

Tool Room No. 2 Team Blanks Meter Makers 5 To 0.

The Tool Room Hockey Team who carried off local hockey honors last year but who up till Saturday were apparently having a hard time finding themselves have at last shook the jink. Their decisive victory over the Wire Department in the C. G. E. Shop Hockey League on Saturday was a rare exhibition of team-work and clever gunning.

The first period was very speedy both teams checking and shooting with a determination that seemed to promise a close score Micky Williams gave the Tool Makers their first tally four minutes after the initial face-off, when he whipped in a long hot drive from outside the blue line which Wilson missed. The winners continued to swarm around the Wire Department citadel and Wilson was thrice called on to block close-in shots resulting from a three-man combination play. Ed. Williams evened the count soon after when he broke away through centre, zigzagging his way through the whole team to pass the rubber over to Calladine who found the net. Corkery drew a pass for a minute but came out in time to rush in and score the second goal which Mickey Williams lifted into the air from the left boards with a backhand shot. Swanger made it three in a lone rush, batting in the disc during a scramble in front of the net.

During the second and third periods the fast pace was maintained, the Tool Room breaking often in good formation while the Wire Department forwards seemed to have trouble working their passes, although Ed. Williams and Dyer were very brilliant individually. Hatton chalked up the fourth goal with a waist high drive from the blue line which rolled off Wilson into the goal, while the last marker was secured as a result of a neat combination play, Epps to Mickey Williams.

Battle To Tie.

The Engineers and Drafting Room, last year's rivals, battled to a 1-1 tie in a strenuous battle that was as replete with clever plays as a professional fixture. Both teams were evenly matched in the first stanza, Hayes throwing the first scare into the Drafting Room crew with a whistling shot that just missed the top of the net.

Killoran scored the only tally for the Engineers when he took a back-hand swing at the rubber which bulged the twine. Grant Palmer evened up the count a few minutes after when he worked through centre whipping a shot from outside the blue line which passed between Cameron's legs. The Engineers had a slight edge on the play in the last period due to combination plays but were unable to score on Jackson and the final gong found both sides in a deadlock.

The teams:

Engineers: Goal, Cameron; Defence, Doddridge and J. Ault; centre, Hall; Wings, Killoran and Hayes. Subs: Wickwire, J Ault and Archambault.

Machinists in Tie.

Machine Shop and Fractional Motors Dept. battled to a 1-1 decision, in a very strenuous battle that netted both teams a flock of penalties. Ashmore on defence for the Machinists was the mainstay of his team while Clair McGillen, net minder for the same team also did his part when he rushed out of the net two minutes before the final gong to block O'Brien who had worked through alone. Given wonderful support by Griffin, their star goalie, the Motor Makers, uncovered several nice combination plays but failed to pierce the Machine Shop defence.

P.C.I. OLD BOYS DEFEAT COLLEGIATE

Graduates Win Opening Game of Basketball Season 29-16.

In a fast, well-fought-out game filled with many thrills, the Collegiate Old Boys basketball team defeated the local Collegiate team, 29 to 16, Saturday in the Collegiate gym. The Old Boys played better combination throughout, but at times the P.C.I. team showed the value of several practises to break through and score. The Old Boys shortly after the start broke into the scoring column, to gain an early lead, which they maintained throughout the game. They were, however, pressed at times and had to set a fast pace to keep ahead. McLeish, for the winners, was a tower of strength at centre, outjumping his opponent, while "Bim" Sturgeon, the P.C.I. star of several years ago, was strong on the scoring column, getting most of his team's points and teaming up well with Harold Dormer. The Old Boys' defense, McLeod and Hamilton, played a sterling game, checking their opponents at every point.

For the Collegiate team the game was largely a tryout. Wilf Preston and Wilf Warde alternated at centre. Each played good basketball. Zimel Levine and Keith Copping were good on the forward line. Levine played snappy combination, passing well and checking neatly. Copping was good on the scoring column for the losers. Vickers and MacDonald alternated with the forwards, and at times showed some of their last year's form. On the defensive, Pat Hall and Dick Green were the best. These boys and played well. The Collegiates' first condition ought to be a hard defensive to beat. Art Goheen and Hedley Vickers alternated on the defensive and played well. The Collegiates' game is with Cobourg, in Cobourg, next Saturday, and the boys are looking for a win.

The line-ups were:

Collegiate Old Boys.—Centre, Chas. McLeish; forwards, Robert Sturgeon and Harold Dormer; defensive, Hector McLeod and Newton Hamilton.

P. C. I.—Centre, Wilfred Preston; forwards, Zimel Levine and Keith Copping; defense, J. Douglas Hall and Richard Green. Substitutes, Howard MacDonald, Wilfred Ward, Art Goheen and Hedley Vickers.

VIEWS ON SPORTS

The St. John's team stack up against the old enemy the Lindsay Midgets at the Brock tonight.

The Peterborough Hockey Club's juniors have a hard battle on their hands when they invade Bowmanville this evening. If they get the old team work running smoothly they should down them right in their own igloo because individually they are smarter.

Several young hockey players are playing on two clubs in the City League Junior and Senior. This is strictly against the rules of the league, since the basic principle of the league is to get as many players playing in organized hockey as possible. When one man plays on two clubs he is just naturally robbing some other coming player a chance to perform. Those in future who play on two clubs will be su spended, and the respective club managers had better arrange this between themselves before Wednesday night.

The Toronto Star states:—"Queen's College Journal declares that Queen's is the birth place of hockey. In the eighties of the last century the first game of ice hockey was played in Kingston by Queen's students. Since that day the growth of the game has been phenomenal. It has become Canada's national pastime, a game that is distinctly Canadian, despite the fact that the past few years have seen it grow to great popularity wherever natural or artificial ice is available in the United States. It has been placed in the realm of big business sports by the American promotors, and has found a position on the program of the Olympic games. The Ontario Hockey Association, of which Queen's won the first championship, is now the largest amateur organization in the world. How little did those first hockey players realize what great consequences were to follow upon their pastime

Since Tex Rickard's death a rift has occurred in his last project, the bout between Jack Sharkey and "Young" Stribling because Tex' successors desire to cut the purses guaranteed by him. Stribling is quite willing to take whatever he is offered, but Sharkey is holding for the $100,000 guarantee promised by Rickard. Conferences are to be held in Boston with the sailorman.

The Tool Room, champions of the Shop League and the City League last year, came to life on Saturday, after a poor start in the first game, and working tip-top combination play took an early lead on the Wire Department beating them 5 to 1.

The Maple Leafs in sustaining the 1 to 0 defeat from the league Americans on Saturday night, the second in succession, lost a golden opportunity to improve their position. The Leafs although they supplied most of the dash to the game lacked the scoring punch. Babe Dye gave an exhibition of his oldtime form with his hot shots giving Chabot anything but a comfortable evening.

The Ottawa Senators won their first game in over a month by defeating the Pittsburg Pirates 2-1 at the Smoky City in the roughest hockey session ever witnessed in that city.

The Central Ontario Hockey League was drawn up on Saturday and the P.C.I. team will soon be busy playing in this group. The Garnet and Gray should have a splendid team, although they will be without the services of the laconic Carl Wood; the rest of last year's team will be complete.

BROCK ST. TIGERS DEFEAT GROVE 4-1

Youthful Hockeyists Play Good Hockey at Lakefield Rink.

W. Murphy's Brock Street Tigers journeyed to Lakefield on Friday night and handed the Grove School Juveniles the small end of a 4 to 1 score. The Tigers had the edge on the play during most of the game, exhibiting speed and combination that was very creditable. The line-up of the Tigers:

Referee—Northey.

Dick Hoblitzell, formally signed a contract as manager of the Charlotte team of the South Atlantic League last week. He managed the team in 1922 and '23, winning a pennant the latter year. Hoblitzell can still play a lively game at first and promises to be a playing pilot.

The Yankees played to 1,261,000 fans at the Stadium, according to unofficial figures published in New York last week. On the road 870,000 watched Ruth and his playmates perform. The Giants did 860,000 home business and proved a better drawing club on the road, drawing 1,200,000

MUSIC PUPILS GIVE RECITAL

Program Is Given Under the Auspices of All Saints' Women's Guild.

HALL WAS FILLED.

A very beautiful and entertaining costume recital, given by the pupils of Mrs. W. Greenslade was put on Friday evening, in All Saints' Parish Hall, under the auspices of All Saints' Women's Guild. Despite the inclement weather the hall was filled with an appreciative audience.

When the curtain was drawn back by the two pages, Miss Sadie Olin and Marion Deyell, in black and white costumes, it revealed a very appropriate stage setting; the walls hung with chintz which was sprinkled with old fashioned lavender and pink nosegays.

The first item on the program was a piano duet, "La Chasse de le Gazelle," beautifully rendered by Jack Cuff and Ashton Fife.

The first portion of the program was a sort of pantomime, depicting the seasons, the idea being developed by Mrs. Greenslade from the cantata, "The Crowning of Christmas," and a contest of the holidays followed.

Miss Alma Beavis, in a white herald's costume, sang very sweetly, "Come All Ye Holidays," and the herald, Miss Helen Banks, in an orange costume, with shepherd's crook, announced New Year's; Miss Evelyn Miller and her attendants, Miss Dorothy Whatley as "Winter"; Miss Annie Burns, as "Spring"; Miss Marion Armstrong as "Summer," and Miss Geraldine Campbell as "Autumn."

This was a very beautiful scene, with New Year's in white, with glittering tinsel, crowned as Queen of 1929, who in recitation called her attendants, the seasons, beckoning them to come forth and proclaim their merits for the prize. This part was exceedingly well done by Miss Miller. Winter coming in with jingling bells, snow an dicicles, with a rollicking sleigh song, which Miss Whatley acted to perfection.

Miss Annie Burns, as Spring, in a beautiful costume of white with wreaths of pink apple-blossoms and spring flowers, sang a Spring song with its trills and clear birdlike notes, very beautifully, and Miss Marion Armstrong, as Summer, looked very charming, in her summery dress with arm bouquet of roses, and wide-brimmed hat. Her voice was heard to good advantage in her bright summer song.

The song to Autumn, which was composed by Mrs. W. A. Greenslade, was beautifull sung by Miss Geraldine Campbell, in an appropriate garb of brown, with autumn leaves and basket of luscious fruit.

Boys' Chorus

The junior boys, in their First of July Chorus, came marching in with beating of drums, waving flags and blowing horns, and sang a song to Dominion Day and other patriotic airs. They were accompanied by Donnie Ross at the piano, while the following composed the chorus: Stewart Currie, Jack Ferguson, Harold Fife, Griffin Young, and Brian Roberts.

Thanksgiving Day was represented by the Misses Genevieve Price, Dorris Skinner and Margaret Skitch in old-fashioned house dresses, with Margaret Skitch at the piano. In dialogue and chorus, they beat their cake-batter and chopped their mincemeat.

Christmas Day, as the last holiday, received great applause, when Ashton Fife, dressed as Santa Clause, appeared, followed by the Tiny Tots: Viola Price, Mildred Henthorne, Peggy Edmonds, Isobel Skitch, Marion Harvey, Sophia Yeotes, Doris Ferguson appeared, and sang, "We Are the Tiny Tots," with a very small girl, Margaret Pitchford at the piano. While Santa Claus was receiving his medal from the judges, Mrs. Roberts, Marion Ringer, and Miss Theobald, as "the prize winners in the contests, the Tiny Tots" carried the toys from his pack. As a grand finale all the Holidays returned to the stage and sang a chorus.

Second Act

When the curtain rose for Part II of the program, a beautiful court scene was depicted with ladies in panniered gowns and courtly gentlemen with powdered wigs, lace fichus and knee breeches, with their buckled shoes and courtly manners, singing old-time songs, and music of older days. The prim, courtly manners and stately courtesties were admirably enacted.

The opening number was a piano duet by Dorothy Whatley and Nancy Hopwood, followed by a delightful vocal solo, "Just a Song at Twilight," by Miss Rene Howarth.

A vocal duet, "The Keys of Heaven," by Miss Viola and Orville Martin, was admirably sung and was a great favorite.

A piano solo, "The Flower Song," by Miss Ruby Jackson won much applause.

A vocal duet, "Silver Threads Among the Gold," by Miss Alma Beavis and H. Stanley was also a great favorite.

"The Last Rose of Summer" was sweetly sung by Miss Edith Haw.

Mrs. Brown was heard in her usual good voice, when she sang "Linden Lee.

Piano solos, "Happiness," by Miss Dorothy Finnie and "The Robin's Return," by Miss Dorothy Whatley, were followed by vocal solos by Miss Eileen Rose in "Come Dance at Our Wedding." Mr. Clark, in "Believe Me if All These Endearing Young Charms" and Orville Martin in "Loch Lomond," are deserving of special mention.

The concluding number on the program was a beutifully rendered duet by Mrs. Brown and Mr. Clark, who are well-known favorites.

Mrs. W. A. Greenslade acted as accompanist and before the conclusion of the program was presented by little Marion Harvey with a beautiful bouquet of carnations and narcissus on behalf of her pupils.

Little Viola Price, the youngest pupil, won the prize for selling the most tickets donated by All Saints' Women's Guild.

The furniture for the second part of the program was kindly loaned by Comstock's.

Many requests have come from different individuals to have the program repeated in some of the other churches, and it will probably be put on again in the near future.

Lunch was served to those assisting in the program by the Ladies of All Saints' Guild, assisted by some of the pupils.

TRIPLE DEATH PACT IS FOUND

Man Tells Friend He and Two Women Are Ending Their Lives.

RESCUERS ARRIVE

LOS ANGELES, January 14. — Satisfied that life held nothing more for them, two women and a man early the other morning planned a gay "death party" in one of the strangest suicide pacts in the history of the city.

That they are alive to-day—and will live—is due to the man's sense of humor, which led him, at regular intervals, to 'phone his friends and tell them that he was "committing suicide."

The trio that sought death so wholely, fear it now. All want to live. And they will. They are:

Unida Hill, 21, who was formerly an actress in motion picture comedies, and had lost her desire for life because of illness; Mrs. Lucille Meyers, 22, who had separated from her husband; and William Kelly, Jr., wealthy retired builder, who "didn't want to see the girls 'go out' alone."

Morbid Conversation.

It was at Kelly's suggestion, he told police, that the three made their strange pact against life.

Quite by chance, he said, he had dropped in upon Miss Hill, his sweetheart, and found Mrs. Meyers there. All had the "blues," and the conversation took a morbid turn. Just what followed after that Kelly said he couldn't remember, but he went to a drug store and bought five bottles of a sleeping potion.

When he returned to the apartment both girls were in tears, but still determined to end their lives. Each took a heavy draught of the sleeping compound, and then Kelly's sense of humor asserted itself.

He called Percy Ryan, said to be his guardian, and told him of the pact. Later he called again. Ryan began a desperate hunt.

Not finding the sleeping potion sufficiently quick in effect, the trio drained the entire five bottles and then turned on the gas in a heater.

The Story Unfolded.

All were unconscious when Mrs. B. B. Burke, the mother of Miss Hill, happened to come to the apartment. Ryan located the place a few moments later.

It was at the Georgia Street Receiving Hospital, where police made a desperate and successful battle for the three lives, that the weird story was unfolded.

And there, too, it was that Mrs. Meyer's estranged husband, Victor Meyers, a salesman, came back to her. Meyers, police say, declared, after talking to his wife a moment, that a reconciliation will be effected.

Kelly, according to police records, has attempted suicide before, and has been in several institutions. They say he told them that he did not want to see the girls "go out alone."

He and Miss Hill, Kelly said, had planned to be married, but the girl's serious illness had prevented it.

All three were taken to the psychopathic ward of the General Hospital and later in the day released to private hospitals anod sanitariums.

SOME PROGRESS NOTED IN KING

Good News Comes From Both Royal Patients in Buckingham Palace.

PRINCE GEORGE ILL.

LONDON, January 14. —(Canadian Press). —Good news came from both royal patients at Buckingham Palace this morning.

After an interval of several days in which King George's condition was officially reported as stationary today's medical bulletin brought the gratifying news that he was making progress. It was indicated that the advance was slow. But this was expected as all predictions have been that gains in strength were bound to be achieved only by gradual stages.

Queen Mary, it was authoritatively stated, was getting the better of her cold. It was evidently thought advisable, however, that she remain quietly in her rooms as a precaution.

The Queen has been under a heavy strain because of her husband's illness and it was thought advisable to have timely advice. Therefore, Dr. Geodfrey Hett, a throat specialist who has done considerable research in sinus diseases, was called to the palace.

It was stated that The Queen would be confined to her rooms for several days.

Satisfaction was expressed at Buckingham Palace that nothing had happened to retard the slow progress being made by the King, who entered the fifty-fifth day of his illness today.

The customary Sunday morning services in the Palace Chapel were cancelled because of the Queen's illness.

To-day's bulletin on the King was ragarded with satisfaction in Palace circles. It was stated, however, that the progress was very slow and that too much significance should not be attached to the fact that no bulletin will be issued until tomorrow night. This was neither a good nor a bad sign, it was said, but merely an indication that the doctors did not anticipate any great change in the interval. It was pointed out that the peroid of anxiety regarding His Majesty was not yet passed.

King George's physicians this morning issued this bulletin:

"His Majesty is making slow progress. The next bulletin will be issued to-morrow evening.

Prince George Ill.

Another patient was added to the list at Buckingham Palace this afternoon when it was announced that Prince George, youngest son of the King, had a slight cold and was keeping to his room.

"MOTHER KNOWS BEST" SCENARIST TAKES HER HONORS MODESTLY

With characteristic modesty Marion Orth never lays claim to being one of the most successful scenarists, but those who are qualified to judge insist that she rightfully belongs in that class.

When a picture is acclaimed as one of the greatest pictures that ever has come to the screen, the scenarist would seem to be rightfully entitled to a bit of the honors. Marion Orth wrote the scenario of "Street Angel," Frank Borzage's tremendous success for Fox Films, with Charles Farrell and Janet Gaynor co-featured.

Prior to that she had written the scenarios of "Come to My House," "Sharp Shooters," and "Hangmen's House," which, based on the successes of the pictures mentioned, would seem to entitle her to much fame.

Her current bit of writing, the scenario for Edna Ferber's "Mother Knows Best," featuring Madge Bellamy, Louise Dresser and Barry Norton, has been acclaimed her finest work to date. John Blystone directed. The picture opens an engagement of three days at the Capitol Theatre to-day.

Brilliant photography marks the screen play "Mother Knows Best," Fox Film featuring Madge Bellamy, Louise Dresser and Barry Norton, from the story by Edna Ferber. Gilbert Warrenton, ace cameraman is responsible for the success, cinematically, of the picture.

AT THE GRAND.

When Maurice Colbourne presents Fanny's First Play at the Grand Theatre next Satuday night he will wisely omit the induction and the epilogue. But it was not without a struggle that Bernard Shaw allowed him to do this. Last Summer when Mr. Colbourne was in London Shaw maintained that the critics who form the induction and the epilogue were, to use his own words, as "funny as comic green-grocers and mothers-in-law." However, Mr. Colbourne won and indeed these critics have largely lost their savour because their originals (all real London newspapermen) are to-day either unrecognizable or dead. Mr. Colbourne felt that by leaving these critics in their obscurity or their graves, and by putting that delicious bit of impertinence "The Dark Lady of the Sonnets" in their place, he would be giving theatre patrons more of a dramatic feast for their money. Also it was felt that the production of this one-act master trifle was extraordinarily opportune this Season, seeing that the Stratford-upon-Avon Festival Company are this year paying their first visit to this side of the water. The connection between the two is obvious when it is remembered that the character of "The Dark Lady" consist of a Beefeater, the Dark Lady, Queen Elizabeth and Will Shakespeare himself.

Mr. Maurice Colbourne, incidentally a Shakespearean star of international renown, will play the part of Shakespeare; and in "Fanny's First Play" Miss Phillis Coghlan one of the loveliest members of Mr. Colbourne's Company will make her bow in one of the most farcical and amusing of all Shavian parts, that of "Darling Dora" while Mr. Colbourne will play 'Juggins", the inscrutable foot-man, with a past and a future.

1,200 ACRES OF LAND TO BE RE-FORESTED

Counties of Russell and Prescott Plan Big Reforestration Scheme.

OTTAWA, Ont., Jan. 14.— (Canadian Press.)—A reforestration scheme, involving 1,200 acres of land in the township of Cumberland, has been undertaken by the Councils of Russell and Prescott, in co-operation with the Ontario government.

In accordance with an arrangement between the three parties, the land is provided by the two councils, while the Government will be responsible for planting and care. If the counties so desire, the land and timber reverts to the municipalities upon payment to the government of the cost of maintenance of the reserve at the end of 30 years.

Does Constipation Steal your Charm?

Your complexion is more than skin deep. It mirrors the state of your health. Often a sallow or blotchy complexion is due to chronic constipation.

Faulty elimination of the body's waste "backs up" poisons into the system. Headaches and indigestion follow. Brain and body become sluggish. Vitality is lowered.

Yet constipation is a curse you need not suffer!

Eat Tillson's natural Bran. Its bulk gives exercise to the internal organs and makes them strong. It stimulates the intestinal muscles to rid the body of waste regularly and completely, in Nature's way.

Muffins made with Tillson's natural Bran are delicious. You will like one or two at every meal. Simple recipes are found in every package.

A CANADIAN FAMILY PHYSICIAN SAYS:

"Modern food refinements are the main cause of constipation. Drugs alone are worthless as curative agents. Diet is the rational form of treatment, and Tillson's natural Bran fulfils an important role."

British Columbia Lady Praise Dodd's Kidney Pills

"I was suffering terribly with my back," writes Mrs. W. N. Chapman, who resides at Telkwa, B.C. "I went to the druggist and got some Dodd's Kidney Pills. After a few doses the pain instantly left my back. Since that time I always keep all Dodd's Remedies in the house."

The road to good health lies through the Kidneys. If they are kept strong and well, all the impurities are strained out of the blood. Spooner No. 2. — Will start drilling to-day with diamond.

Illinois No. 2.—Obstruction in casing 120 feet from bottom, expected will be straightened out shortly.

Mayland—Drilling about four feet a day in very hard formation. Important results looked for shortly, now 4,797 feet.

McLeod No. 4.—Is 4,110 feet and drilling.

Ranchmens—Some fair showings in the last two or three feet drilled. Depth a little over 2,000 feet.

Devenish—At 1,730 feet, wonderful progress. Should be completed within a month.

Test at Eagle Butte well Thursday established flow of gas at 20,000,000 cubic feet of dry gas, free of sulphur.

KOOTENAY FLORENCE.

According to official information on Saturday, the drift along the fissure vein at Kootenay Florence was in 135 feet and still going strong. The west face still showed a width of seven feet while in east drift has already been opened up for a width of 18 feet with the hanging wall not yet located. Present indications point to considerably richer ore at this level than that previously mined in the upper levels.

VIPOND.

Recent accumulation of Vipond following upon very favorable results at the property has placed the shares of this issue in a very strong technical position. This was borne out on Saturday from the sharp advance in comparatively light turnover. Development work is proceeding on six levels at the property, all work being directed towards the new vein discovered some time ago, and results to date have been most satisfactory. Present indications point to Vipond showing better earnings during the current year than ever before in its history.

PETERSON COBALT.

Development at Peterson Cobalt is said to have reached a stage where important results may be expected. Work is now being directed towards a very large undeveloped area similar to that which has been productive for O'Brien mine adjoining for many years.

ARNO.

According to official information, important results have been found since the dewatering of the old shaft at Arno's Coxheath property. An examination of the old workings by the now resident engineer shows that No. 1 vein averages 10 feet wide and will grade from 15 to 25 per cent. in copper The second stope was examined for a length of 100 feet and shows commercial ore over that distance of a width of from nine to 18 feet, which should grade about five per cent. copper. Further important results may be expected as work proceeds.

VIPOND.

According to well informed sources, a considerable amount of ore is being opened up in the development of the No. 9 vein on the 60 foot horizon. Drifting continues in ore of No. 12 grade across widths of from 10 to 12 feet.

WEEKLY TRADE REPORT

WINNIPEG, Man., Jan. 14 (Canadian Press).—The weekly trade report of the Canadian Credit Men's Trust Association, Limited, for week ending January 12, 1929, is as follows:

Halifax—Wholesale trade continues satisfactory. Retail trade good except in districts specializing in potatoes. This also applies to collections. Manufacturers are generally well employed; coal mines recently working at about 75 per cent will be somewhat further reduced now that the St. Lawrence is closed.

St. John.—Wholesale trade normal. Retail trade good. Collections fair.

Quebec City.—A very fair volume is reported in wholesale groceries, boots and shoes satisfactory. Retail trade is normal.

Montreal.—There is quite a falling off in sales of wholesale groceries, dry goods, boots and shoes, clothing, ladies' wear and sundries. Volume is, however, quite normal for the season. Hardware continues busy. Both city and country retail merchants have been less busy than during the past two weeks, but business compares very favorably with the corresponding week of last year. Collections inclined to be slow.

Toronto.—The wholesale trade is quiet as is to be expected at this time of the year, but can be considered normal. Retail trade, has of course, dropped off considerably in volume but continues fairly good. The special sales put on by the larger stores keeps business fairly active in most of the general lines. Collections can still be considered very fair.

Winnipeg—The volume of business transacted at this time of the year is naturally considerably lower than other months, but from reports received, the total sales compare very favorably with the same period in other years. The cold weather prevailing has greatly handicapped outdoor construction, most of which, however, has been completed and builders are making good progress in completing the interior work. A certain amount of unemployment is evident, but not as serious as other years. Collections inclined to be slow.

Regina.—An improvement is reported in sales of wholesale groceries and they may be considered good. Dry goods very quiet; boots and shoes quiet. Hardware fair. Retail trade is somewhat quiet, which is normal for this season. Collections fair.

Saskatoon.—Sales of wholesale groceries and hardware are falling off a little; dry goods quiet; fruit and confectionery good; boots and shoes quiet. Retail trade normal. Collections rather slow.

Calgary.—Business generally of satisfactory nature throughout the southern part of the province, except in coal mining district where conditions are good. Most wholesale and retail businesses continue to report very satisfactory volume, particularly building supply trade. Collections as usual at this time of the year, are difficult to make.

Edmonton.—Extremely mild weather has caused a lull in business generally. Collections fair.

Vancouver.—The usual condition for this time of the year prevails in all lines of trade and the amount of business done at the present time is rather small. This is only temporary, of course, and it is expected that in the near future things will pick up again. Collections are just fair. The wholesalers report that it is fully expected that a substantial increase over the year 1927 will be shown for the year 1928.

NICKEL GAINS ON STANDARD

High Priced Issues Rise To Higher Levels in Light Trading.

FEATURELESS SESSION.

TORONTO, Ont., Jan. 14 (Canadian Press).—International Nickel advanced sharply to $54 in a rather featureless session of the Standard Stock and Mining Exchange to-day, for a net increase of 90c. More of the higher-priced issues followed its leadership and in light trading rose to higher levels. McIntyre was up 45 to 23.00. Hollinger 5 to 3.95, Noranda $1.00 to 62.50, and Pend Oreille 50 to 11.50.

The Western issues came in for a goodly portion of the trading and with the exception of Central Manitoba, which was 2 points higher at 70, weakened towards noon and eased to slightly lower territories. Big Missouri, after falling to 1.40, rapidly regained itself at noon and closed with a loss of 10 at 1.50. Hudson Bay eased to 30.20 for a loss of 40, Kootenay Florence firmed at 28, and Sherritt-Gordon dropped 10 to 6.90.

Amulet weakened under heavy trading and suffered a further loss of 8 points to 3.27, and Falconbridge Nickel at 6.50, was 10 cents lower. Malartic and Wright Hargreaves were in constant demand; the former advancing five points to 95, but the latter failed to retain its hold and slid off 20c to 1.60.

Nipissing became weak under pressure and dropped 20 points to 3.50, and Sudbury Basin eased to 8.70 for a loss of 10 cents.

New York Issues Soar After Irregular Opening

NEW YORK, N.Y., Jan. 14 (Canadian Press).—Strong rallying tendencies developed in to-day's stock market after an early period of irregularity. Many of the early declines of 1 to 5 points were cut down, or wiped out, and by early afternoon scores of issues were selling 1 to 7 points above last week's final quotations. Trading was moderately heavy in volume.

There was nothing in the day's news to explain the change in speculative sentiment, considerable uneasiness still was apparent ove rtho credit situation, with call loans renewing at 7 per cent, as against 6 last Friday, and with continued firmness in time money rates.

Motors, which had been heavily sold since the first of the year on reports that the Middle West was bearish on those issues because of the severe competition in the industry, snapped back in rather impressive fashion on wheat appeared to be short covering. General Motors ran up 3½ points and Hupmobile, Packard, Chrysler, Nash and Pierce Arrow sold a point or more higher. Studebaker sold above 69 for the first time in several years.

FOREIGN EXCHANGE.

NEW YORK, N. Y., January 14. — (Canadian Press) — Foreign exchange steady, demand rates (in cents), Great Britain 484 11-16, Canadian Dollars at 1-4 of one per cent. Discount.

TORONTO CURB VALUES HIGHER

Market Becomes Firmer After Irregular Trading in Early Session.

BRAZILIAN ISSUES ADVANCE.

TORONTO, Ont., January 14. — (Canadian Press) — Following a short period of irregular trading, the market on the Toronto Stock Exchange later assumed a firm tone and prices on the majority of issues climbed to high ground. Although trading was not unusually active it was steady and fairly well distributed throughout the list. Canadian Dredging continued to seek higher ground and claimed an additional 1 7-8 points to 73 1-2. Both Brazilian issues were heavily dealt in and remained firm. The common at 76 1-2 and the rights at $5.00.

The Beveridge section proved a bright spot on the market with Canada Dry advancing one point while Carlings, Seagrams and Honey-Dew were fractionally higher.

Massey-Harris and Cochshutt Plow in the industrial section each gained 1-4 to 91 and 44 respetively and Waterloo at 34 1-2 was one point higher. Canadian Bronze in light trading soared 8 1-4 points to 91 3-4, while Page-Hersey was 70 1-4 to 132.

McKinnon Industries at 73 1-2, Riverside at 33, Kelvinator at 12, Durant at 19, Northern Bakeries at 39 and Tamblyn at 55 were all one point higher.

Corn and Wheat Market Reaches New High Mark

CHICAGO, Ills., Jan. 14. —(Canadian Press). — Corn and wheat to-day both outdid highest prices heretofore touched this season. Reports were current that owing to drought, the prospect of a bumper crop of new corn in Argentine is definitely gone. The fact that for the first time of late, European markets were reflecting full advances scored on this side of the Atlantic had also a noticeable bullish influence. Corn started at 1-2c off to 1-2c up, and subsequently established sharp gains all round. Wheat opening 1-8c and 3-4c higher advanced further, but gains failed to hold well. Oats were firmer. Provisions tended to sag.

Cattle Prices Higher At Toronto—Trade Lax

TORONTO, Ont., Jan. 14. —(Canadian Press). — Trade opened slow on the Toronto Livestock Exchange on a moderate run with asking prices a shade higher. A few handy weight steers sold from $8.50 to $10.50.

Good cows brought $7.50 to $8.50.

Calves were selling strong at $15.00 to $17.00 for choice.

Hogs unsettled with packers biding $9.25 f.o.b. for selects or $10.50 off-car.

Lambs were selling firm at $14.00 to $1450 for the best.

Good light sheep sold up to $7.50 per cwt.

Cattle receipts 3062.

C.P.R. DIRECTORS HOLD MEETING

Reply To Sir Henry Thornton is Expected From E. W. Beatty Some Time To-day.

CONTEST EXPECTED.

MONTREAL, Que., Jan. 14 (Canadian Press).—Directors of the Canadian Pacific Railway, headed by E. W. Beatty, the President, were in session Saturday at the head office of the road, and Saturday night it was anticipated that some time to-day Mr. Beatty will reply to Sir Henry Thornton's statement of Friday on Western branch lines.

The unexpected situation that has developed in the last forty-eight hours is widely regarded here as the bursting into flame of fires that have been smoldering for a long time, and if differences between the roads have not come into the open earlier, Hon. C. A. Dunning, Minister of Railways, is said to have been responsible.

WINNIPEG, Man., January 14 (Canadian Press). — Differences between the transcontinental railways over northern branch line extensions are likely to be satisfactorily ironed out, it was stated by Hon. Dr. J. H. King, Minister of Pensions and National Health, here last night. He was on his way to British Columbia, where he will attend a provincial convention of the Liberal Party.

Other than stating that the announcements of branch line intentions indicated the faith the railway authorities had in ehe northern areas, Dr. King did not wish to comment.

Speaking, however, of prospects for a Pacific Coast outlet from the Peace River country, he stated that it was unlikely for the immediate future, for the reason that the railways have such large expenditures on terminals at Vancouver.

SHIP OF THE DESERT.

BERLIN, January 14.—An invention of Dr. Bischoff, German engineer if proven practical, will eventually supplant the camel as a means of conveyance across the Sahara desert. The new method of locomotion is a gigantic "desert liner," 130 feet long, 42 feet high and 26 feet wide, propelled on four wheels driven by two Diesel motors of 450 horse-power. There are four decks in the ship, and 12,000 miles can be covered without taking on fresh stores.

MARSHAL FERDINAND FOCH IS REPORTED SERIOUSLY ILL

SETTLED INTO BRONCHITIS.

Three Doctors Are Summoned Into Consultation—Suffers Heart Attack.

PARIS, Jan. 14.—(Canadian Press).—Marshall Ferdinand Foch, Generalissimo of the Allied Armies in the Great War, was taken seriously ill to-day, with heart trouble.

The Marshall caught a very bad cold at the Armistice Day celebration. It settled into bronchitis and interfered with his breathing.

Apparently he had recovered fully from that affection but the strain of the illness told on him and he suffered a severe heart attack.

Three doctors were called into consultation to-day. It was said that bulletin would be issued late this afternoon.

Marshall Foch, who is 77 years old, has not been in the best of health in recent months.

The Marshall, who played so prominent a part in the Great War, has been living in retirement for some time, only occasionally appearing in the news.

News of the Marshall's illness created consternation at his head-quarters in the Invalides Building. His aides and members of his staff were deeply affected and their manner told more plainly than words how serious they believed was the condition of their chief.

Major L'Hopital, the Marshall's favorite aide-de-camp, spoke with a voice that was choking with emotion while tears welled in his eyes.

"You will understand that I am in no condition to speak about my beloved chief just now," he said.

MOUNT PLEASANT, Jan. 14. — (Examiner Correspondence)— Death removed one of Mount Pleasant's oldest residents in the person of Miss Margaret Ann Courtney on Sunday January 7th, 1929 at the residence of Henry Hope, London, Ont., to where she had gone on December 17, 1928 to visit.

The late Miss Courtney was born in Hamilton and came to Mount Pleasant with her parents sixty-three years ago where her father, the late Edward Courtney conducted a tanning business until the time of his death and which was later conducted by his son, Charles, now deceased twelve years. Left to mourn are one sister, Mrs. S. J. Dent, Lapeer, Michigan, and one brother, J. W. Courtney, Newburg, Ont., and Mrs. Henry Hope, London, Ont., Mrs. M. Libby, Toronto is a cousin and also J. A. Kilpatrick of Toronto and Judge Kilpatrick, of Detroit, are cousins.

The funeral was held on Wednesday, January 9th, from her late residence in Mount Pleasant, with the Rev. F. Carpenter of the United Church, conducting the services and proceeded to Shield's Cemetery for burial. The pall-bearers were, Messrs. Joseph Fee, Garnet Shield, Richard Graham, Clew Morden, William Greigg and Thos. Jamieson.

MRS. HENRY CHAMBERS.

A death that came as a sudden and terrible shock to her family and to those who knew her took place at a little after midnight at Nicholls Hospital, when Mrs. Henry Chambers of Detroit (formerly Miss Verna Fell of this city) passed away, after a brief illness with complications to which an attack of influenza brought the fatal ending.

The deceased, who was a bride of only three months, having been married on October 15th, came from her home in Detroit at Christmas with her husband, to visit relatives here. She had a slight cold then, but was not considered to be in a serious condition, and was only removed to the hospital on Saturday. A sad circumstance was the fact that her husband, who returned to his work in Detroit after the Christmas holidays, only reached the city at two o'clock this morning, after his wife had passed away.

The late Mrs. Chambers was a member of the office staff of The Examiner for four years prior to her marriage. "Verna," as she was known to her associates, was a general favorite. She had a cheerful, sunny disposition, and her infectious, ready laughter helped to smooth over many of the troublesome situations in daily business life. She was warm hearted in the extreme, friendly at all times, and her energetic interest in her work made her a valuable addition to the office staff. It was with real regret that her companions bade her farewell on the occasion of her marriage, but it is a more widespread feeling of sorrow that reacts to the news of her sudden passing at the early age of twenty-four years.

She was also a general favorite in domestic and church life, being an active member of St. James' United Church, where she conducted a Sunday School class and was a member of the choir and other church organizations.

Survivors are her sorrowing husband, her parents, Mr. and Mrs. William Fell, of 235 Princess Street; one brother, Victor Fell, of Burks Falls, and one sister, Mrs. Roy Greer, of Bailieboro.

The funeral will take place at two o'clock on Wednesday from the residence of her parents at 235 Princess Street, to the Little Lake Cemetery.

WILLIAM A. LEWIS.

The death occurred suddenly on Friday, January 11, of William A. Lewis, in his 58th year, at his home, 253 Benson Avenue, Toronto. Mr. Lewis was a resident of this city until about five years ago, and was an employe of The Examiner. He was actively interested in the Oddfellows, being a member of the Otonabee Lodge and he made many friends here.

He leaves to mourn his loss his wife, Ada Macdonald, and two sons.

The funeral was held from the family residence to-day to Prospect cemetery.

MRS. ANNA DUNN.

The funeral of the late Mrs. Anna Dunn, one of the oldest of the city's residents, took place this morning from her late residence at 165 Charlotte Street to St. Peter's Cathedral, thence to St. Peter's Cemetery for interment.

At the Cathedral, where a large number of friends of the deceased gathered to pay their respects to one who had seen nearly a century of life ebb and flow in this city, Pontifical High Mass was celebrated by His Lordship, Bishop O'Brien, assisted by the Rev. Dean F. O'Sullivan, the Rev. J. J. O'Brien, the Rev. V. McFadden and Rev. J. Finn.

A very eloquent sermon was preached by the Rev. P. Costello, who dwelt at length on the good qualities of this "gentle lady." Taking his text from the Scriptural words: "I was hungry and you gave me to eat, I was naked and you clothed me, I was sick and you visited me," and quoting the text: "Even as you have done it for the least of these my little ones, you have done it unto me." the Reverend speaker elaborated on the manner in which the late Mrs. Dunn had thought always of the poor and had given to them without stint.

The deceased organized many years ago, the Ladies Sewing Society at St. Peter's Cathedral. In the times, half a century back, when it had its inception, she was a moving figure in the meetings, first at the Convent, then at the old Murray Street School, later at the old T. A. S. Rooms and then at the Holy Name Rooms on Simcoe Street. She was president of this society for many years, she belonged to the Board of Management of the Children's Aid Society and was one of the first vice-presidents of the Local Council of Women, and she organized the annual garden party held at St. Vincent's Orphanage and the Tag Day in March, which adds so much to the funds for that institution.

Besides being one of the oldest residents of the city, Mrs. Dunn was the oldest parishioner at the Cathedral, where she sang in the choir as a little girl, took a great interest in the establishment of the organ and also was a constant contributor towards the upkeep of the altar.

Up until five years ago, when she was too feeble for the effort, she never missed a High Mass or Vesper service on Sunday.

Gentle and unassuming in her ways, always the gentle, sweet and charitable lady, she is mourned in her passing. "But we must not mourn too much for this dear old saint," said Father Costello, "because we know that she has gone to God and that her grand and noble character in life has left a lesson behind for many of us."

Pall-bearers for the funeral this morning were Frank Shannon, senior, James Simons, Joseph White, James Lynch, Geoffrey O'Brien and G. White.

got from home the more of them you encountered. This was not because they did not love their native country, but because the wanderlust was in their veins, and they had to seek fortune at the other side of the world.

The speaker was introduced by Rotarian Alex Mowat, who referred to Dr. Roberts as the dean of Canadian letters, and a vote of thanks was proposed by Rotarian S. R. Armstrong, who urged the speaker, should the wanderlust again affect him, to come down to Peterborough to live.

Rotarian John H. Seels announced that Judge H. S. Mott of Toronto, would address the club at next Monday's luncheon and in the evening would speak to the boys of Peterborough and their parents in the Collegiate Assembly Hall. The evening address will be prefaced by a banquet at the Y.M.C.A. for the boys who were at the 1928 Rotary Camp.

Fifteen Below Zero On Sunday Morning

Yesterday was the coldest day so far this winter. Saturday evening the temperature began to drop and it continued to fall until at eight o'clock yesterday morning it reached fifteen below zero. At five o'clock in the afternoon it had risen to six below, but again it began to fall until it reached ten below at twelve o'clock last night. Again it rose upward but has continued at around zero all day.

It is reported authentically that this morning at six o'clock there was the sound of thundering, the noise being exactly that of a midsummer thunder storm.

ficient service and economy must be kept in view, and I know that this will be the aim of every member of the council.

"The prospects for a good year for the city are bright, and by united effort and active co-operation of all of us we should have a harmonious year in administering the affairs of the city and a most successful one, and that is my earnest desire."

Mayor Denne also suggested that the Parks Committee consider first the bathing beach at Inverlea Park and in order to clean up the beach and keep men at work place several hundred loads of sand on the beach. He said that if there was sufficient money it should be spent in placing sanitary dressing rooms at the park.

The minutes were adopted as read and then the important business of appointing someone to succeed Alderman Ackerman came up. It was moved by Alderman McIntyre, seconded by Alderman Hamilton that a by-law be passed appointing Stanley A. Lowe to the vacancy. This received the unanimous support of the whole council.

EXTREME COLD SWEEPS NORTH

Large Section of Ontario Is Plunged Into Mid-Winter Weather Conditions.

44 BELOW AT WHITE RIVER.

TORONTO, Ont., Jan. 14.—(Canadian Press.)—Extreme cold and blizzards plunged a large section of Ontario into mid-winter conditions over the week end. At Sault Ste Marie the river practically froze over and ferry service was suspended for the winter. Thermometers reached 20 below zero. White River reported 44 degrees below zero, a record for the province over the week end, and North Bay experienced 31 below zero weather with a snow storm. Roads were blocked by a blizzard at Ingersoll and Cobalt and Cochrane reported extreme cold. Timmins experienced a drop in temperature that carried thermometers to 33 below zero and similar weather was prevalent at South Porcupine.

Firemen at Timmins were tested when fire broke out yesterday in the St. Ange Block, a three-story structure containing stores and apartments. Tenants were forced to flee. Damage to the building was estimated at $4,500.

SOVIET GENERAL IS ASSASSINATED

Slayer Claims He Committed Crime To Avenge Death of Brother.

MOSCOW, Jan. 14. — (Canadian Press.)—Tass, the Soviet News Agency, said to-day that a Russian named Kolkenberg, aged 24, had been held for the murder of General Jacob Alexandrovitch Salschoff, a high officer in the Soviet War Commissary, yesterday.

Police announced that the man had confessed, saying that he killed the General to avenge his brother, who was executed by Nickolaiev by the General's orders in 1920. Kolenberg, who was only 15 years old at the date of the execution, witnessed the gruesome scene and swore vengeance personally.

CAPTAIN CASEY HEADS MISSION

Church Army Is Conducting a Mission in All Saints' Church.

20 YEARS IN WORK.

Captain Casey, head of the Church Army in Canada, is in the city this week conducting a Church Army mission at All Saints' Church.

Captain Casey, C.A., who has become well known throughout Eastern Canada by his work as leader of the Church Army Crusaders, has a remarkable fund of stories from real life, incidents which have happened in his twenty years' work in the Church Army, much of which has been spent in conducting missions and visiting in His Majesty's Prisons.

One of the most striking is as follows: In the first parish to which he was attached in England, he was accustomed to visit the public houses, seeking to get in touch with some of the young lads who frequent these places.

One lad whom he met in this way, named Wallace Hartley, was attracted to his mission hall, and being a violinist, formed a small orchestra, which played at the services.

In time Hartley secured a position as bandsman with the White Star Line, still maintaining his connection with the Church.

One day Captain Casey had a letter saying he had been appointed bandmaster of their newest liner, the Titanic, and it was Wallace Hartley who led his band in that immortal hymn, "Nearer, My God, to Thee," as the vessel sank, carrying over 1,000 passengers with her. His body was found and brought back and Captain Casey assisted in the funeral service after thousands had passed by the casket.

TRAINMAN INJURED.

Conductor On Toronto-Timmins Train Falls Between Moving Cars.

COBALT, Ont., January 14 (Canadian Press). — Condustor Al. Reesor, North Bay, in charge of the Toronto to Timmins train, was painfully hurt when he fell between moving cars and the platform at Porquois Junction Station yesterday afternoon. The train was backing up at the time, and the conductor apparently slipped while on the steps of a car. No bones were broken, according to the report received here this morning.

There were five small fires over the week end. On Saturday at 7.15 p.m. a call was received to 199 Hunter west to a chimney fire and at 11.25 p.m. to a chimney fire at 50 McDonnel street.

Sunday there were two chimney fires, 244 Lansdowne street, and at 384 Rogers street, and also a call was sent out from 164 Charlotte street, where the pipes were overheated.

HIGH COUNCIL RECEIVES GENERAL'S REPLY

Generalissimo Holds His Own

BRANCH LINES DISPUTE LEFT TO PARLIAMENT

E. W. Beatty Answers Statement By Sir Henry Thornton.

ROOM FOR BOTH.

Program of Canadian National Will Be Made Public This Week.

MONTREAL, Que., Jan. 15 (Canadian Press).—The Canadian Pacific Railway has based its branch line program upon the traffic necessities and the future prospects of the country. If the proposals conflict with plans, conceived in the remote past or very recently, by the Canadian National Railways, the Canadian Pacific believes that Parliament is the proper tribunal to make the final decision as to conflicting claims for the right to build, says a statement issued yesterday by E. W. Beatty, K.C., President of the Canadian Pacific Railway.

The statement followed a pronouncement made last week by Sir Henry Thornton, President and Chairman of the National lines, who suggested that the Canadian Pacific threatened certain territories in the north country which the Canadian National considered should be reserved for itself.

Mr. Beatty stated that the program of his railway "constitutes no challenge to any other railway company, having been framed by our officers after careful examination of territory not now possessed of railway communication, and after proper appraisal of the areas affected. With respect to certain areas, in connection with which difference of opinion has arisen, no disposition to build was ever displayed by other railway companies until our plans became public property."

Aberdeen-Melfort Line

Sir Henry Thornton's statement was issued last Friday. It outlined the points in which the two lines were likely to be in conflict when their branch line programs were taken up in Parliament, mentioning particularly the Aberdeen-Melfort line which the Canadian National had announced its intention to build "and which the Canadian Pacific has now announced its intention to reach by the construction of substantially an identical line, notwithstanding the fact that the Canadian National has more than twenty miles of its route between Aberdeen and Melfort already graded.

Both presidents deprecated duplication of lines.

OTTAWA, Ont., Jan. 15 (Canadian Press).—The Canadian National Railways branch lines program will be made public probably this week and will call for the construction of five or six hundred miles of new trackage at an estimated cost of twenty-five or thirty million dollars. The exact locations are not divulged for the present, but it is known several of the projected lines are in the Province of Saskatchewan, north of Prince Albert, a territory which the Canadian Pacific is also proposing to invade.

Trial of Strength

Discussion in political circles foreshadows an interesting trial of strength when Parliament meets, as it is believed the Canadian Pacific Railway has gone too far in the broadcasting of its program to retreat.

President E. W. Beatty in his statement last night accepted Sir Henry Thornton's challenge to let Parliament decide the contentious branch line programs of the two great railways systems. Even though the ultimatum has been issued and accepted it does not seem possible that every effort has yet been made to secure a compromise.

The Government does not want this dangerous issue before Parliament and still hopes for a compromise. There are still three weeks or even more to accomplish this, and ministerial efforts will be directed toward this end. It would be very embarrasing for the government to have to rearrange the branch line program of the Canadian Pacific as this would not be accomplished either in the Cabinet or its parliamentary party without friction and possibly dissension.

Will Make No Statement

Hon. C. A. Dunning, Minister of Railways and Canals, declined this morning to comment on the statement of E. W. Beatty, President of the Canadian Pacific Railway with respect to branch lines in Western Canada. The Minister remarked that he had indicated to the heads of both great Canadian railways the wisdom of getting together and trying to adjust their differences by conference. He was not aware that these conferences had concluded and he preferred to say nothing at present.

The difference between the Canadian Pacific and Canadian National Railways is one which, apparently, only the parliament of Canada can

Foch Puts Up Big Fight

Slight Improvement Is Noticed in Condition of Generalissimo of Allied Armies.

SIX PHYSICIANS ATTEND.

Aged Warrior Had Intermittent Sinking Spells Yesterday—Second Attack Feared.

PARIS, Jan. 15. — (Associated Press).—Marshal Ferdinand Foch was somewhat better to-day after a fairly restful night but his condition remained one justifying anxiety.

Only two of the six physicians who visited the generalissimo of the Allies yesterday returned to his bedside this morning. They left a few minutes after issuing a bulletin to the effect that there had been a melioration in their patient's condition.

Marshal Ferdinand Foch continued his courageous fight for life with his condition apparently a little easier. During the night there was no change in the 77 year old soldier's condition and this morning it was stated that he was no worse and if anything a little better.

While medical opinion now did not regard the case as hopeless it was acknowledged that it was one of great gravity. Judgement as to the outcome was reserved because of the age of the Marshal whose sturdy frame has been worn by the manifold activities into which he has thrown himself since the convulsion of the great war.

Suffered Cheerfully

Marshal Foch bore the suffering which followed a heart attack with great cheerfulness and courage. He had the will to live, being not at all downhearted. He did not want to have the doctors called but now that they had been summoned he submitted to their ministrations with the best possible grace and even exchanged witticisms with them.

There were intermittent sinking spells yesterday when the illness appeared at times about to conquer the aged warrior. Six doctors attended him and at one stage his two daughters were called to his bedside with their mother and it was feared that the end was near.

The probability of another attack was regarded with the gravest forebodings.

Whole World Waits

When it was generally learned how ill Foch was it appeared that the whole world's attention was focused on the sickroom of the marshal and in his mansion in the aristocratic Faubourg St. Germain. Le Petit Parisien said today there were several telephone calls from New York asking about the latest news. His headquarters were deluged with telegrams and cables from all parts of the world expressing sympathy.

There was an endless stream of automobiles bringing distinguished members of the official and diplomatic worlds to his home. Several personal friends even called during the night and knocked on the wicket of the janitor's lodge where they were given the latest information. A visitors' book, placed in the hall, was soon covered with signatures beginning with Foreign Minister

LOYAL FORCES ARE DEFEATED; KING ABDICATES

Ruler of Afghanistan Quits the Throne in Favor of His Elder Brother.

REBELS CAPTURE KABUL.

Former King and Queen Will Likely Seek Refuge in Europe.

NEW DELHI, India, Jan. 15.—(Canadian Press). — Abdication of Amanullah as King of Afghanistan occurred at Kabul at mid-day yesterday. His elder brother Prince Inayatullam was immediately crowned King in his place.

Details of the final events leading to Amanullah's abdication show that on Sunday his troops were forced to evacuate the Kohedman valley under heavy pressure from the rebels. During the night, the rebel leader Bachai Sakao entered the Kabul valley where he surrounded the important village of Deh Kopeh about three miles West of Kabul.

This village was the local headquarters of the King's troops and with its large garrison and guns fell into Bachai Sakao's hands on Sunday night.

Yesterday, the rebels continued their advance on Kabul and after a bombardment with the guns they had captured they gained certain hills overlooking the outskirts of the capital. The decision of Amanullah to abdicate followed and his brother who is four years older than Amanullah, was duly crowned.

While these events were taking place within Kabul, a party of Mullahs and other religious leaders proceeded from the city to the hills and got in touch with the rebel leaders with whom it appears an armistice was concluded.

The new King, Inayatullah Khan, aged 40, was formerly the right hand man of his father, Habibullah Khan who was assassinated in 1919 and is married to a sister of former Queen Souriya. His hobbies are shooting, photography and tennis.

After his younger brother Amanullah succeeded to the throne, Inayatullah was kept in close confinment for three years. During Amanullah's reign he led the life of a private citizen and did not participate in governmental affairs. It is understood that he possesses the confidence of the Mullahs.

The Afghan Consul General in Delhi states that Amanullah abdicated willingly and introduced Inayatullah as the King. He said that the relations between the two brothers was continuing friendly.

LONDON, Jan. 15. — (Canadian Press). — Amanullah and Souriya, fallen rulers of Afghanistan, were believed to-day to be likely to seek political refuge in Europe.

The present position of the former rulers was uncertain but they were supposed to be in Kandahar, Afghanistan. It was thought unlikely that they would stay long since they would enjoy little security in their own country after their loss of power.

Amanullah was supplanted by his elder brother, Prince Inayatullah whom he supplanted with the help of the army after his father's murder in 1919.

While there was nothing novel in a King having to vacate the unstable throne of Afghanistan, it was pointed out that Amanklah was the first Afghan sovereign to quit for attempt to introduce the western ideas of civilization among the fiery Moslems.

One writer rescribed the overturn as due to the former Queen's desire to wear western frocks in public, which was in opposition to the oriental habit of concealing women in the home or harem.

SPORTS WRITER BURNED TO DEATH

Fred A. Hayner Loses Life in Fire at Chicago Home.

CHICAGO, Ills., Jan. 15.—(Canadian Press).—Fred A. Hayner, 52, nationally known sporting writer, was burned to death last night in a mysterious fire that destroyed his home in Lake Forest, North Shore suburb.

Hayner, on the staff of the Daily News of which he once was sporting editor, went to the basement of his home to adjust the oil-burning heater.

He was trapped by a sudden flare of fire that a moment later swept up through the first floor.

Hayner and their sons, Francis, 14, and James 12, escaped.

Hayner, besides being an authority on sports, at one time was well known as a football referee.

Large Meteor Is Seen To Cross Sky Lighting Up Earth For Miles Around

What might have been the cause of the sound of thunder, heard by many Peterborough residents yesterday morning, came to the attention of The Examiner to-day. A resident who resides a few miles west of the city, while coming in to work about 6.30, tells of seeing a large meteor which passed through the sky from north to south-west. The meteor seemed to be flying very low — perhaps two or three miles up in the sky, and left a streak of fire behind it about thirty feet in length.

While it was passing over Peterborough, it illumined the earth with a red hue for miles around. When the light was first noticed, it was thought to be a car coming down the road, but upon closer examination, the large meteor was seen.

PUBLIC HEARING OPENED INTO BEAUHARNOIS POWER SCHEME BEFORE MINISTER IN OTTAWA

RIGHTS PROTECTED.

Already a Charter Has Been Granted by the Quebec Legislature.

OTTAWA, Ont., Jan. 15 (Canadian Press).—Rival power companies and steamship concerns clashed sharply to-day on the $65,000,000 power and navigation canal scheme of the Beauharnois Light, heat and Power company. For three solid hours, interests supporting and opposing the application for the project on the St. Lawrence River from Lakes St. Francis to St. Louis were heard by Hon. J. C. Elliott, Minister of Public Works; Hon. P. J. A. Cardin, Minister of Marine and Fisheries, and Hon. Charles Stewart, Minister of Interior. The hearing continues this afternoon.

Arrayed in opposition the application of the Beauharnois Company for approval of its plans by the Dominion Government were representatives of Soulanges Power Company, Great Lakes and Atlantic Power and Canal Company, Cedar Rapids Power Company, Dominion Marine Association, Canada Steamship Lines, Shipping Federation of Canada, Cater Woods Lines, and Matthews Steamship Lines.

Captain from many of the steamship companies crowded the office of the Minister of Public Works, where the sitting was held.

Up to Parliament

"Parliament should deal with so serious a matter as this and not only Parliament, but also the International Joint Commission," said Francis King, K.C., counsel for the Dominion Marine Association in combatting the application. The appeal, he considered, was bound to detrimentally affect the St. Lawrence Waterway Development scheme.

The serious damage to the tourist traffic of the Canada Steamship Lines along the St. Lawrence, which would result from the diversion, was emphasized of officials of the Canada Steamship Lines. Captain Joseph Ouelette, after relating his experiences piloting boats through the Rapids of the St. Lawrence, declared the diversion would "kill tourist traffic." R. B. Thompson, secretary of the concern, followed by declaring that if the Rapids could not be used "it would break the chain in the middle from Niagara to the sea," in respect to the company's tourist trade.

Representatives of the various power companies and marine interests crowded the office of Hon. C. Elliott, Minister of Public Works this morning, at the opening of the public hearing on the Beauharnois Power and Navigation Canal Scheme. Counsel and representatives were present for the Beauharnois Light, Heat and Power Company, Cedar Rapids Power Company, Soulanges Power Company, Canada Steamship Lines and Dominion Marine Association.

Opening th hearing Aime Geoffrion, counsel for the Beauharnois Company said there had evidently been great misconception of the application of his company which proposed to build a large power project on the St. Lawrence River at Lake St. Louis and St. Francis. Already a charter, Mr. Geoffrion continued, had been obtained by the company from the Quebec Legislature.

Great Misunderstanding.

"There is a great misunderstanding of the interests of the company, Mr. Geoffrion pursued. "This application is under the Navigable Water Act and the only point that is to be decided is whether the proposal interferes with navigation or not."

No private rights would be affected, Mr. Geoffrion declared. The Beauharnois Company desired to divert 40,000 cubic feet per second, he continued and this diversion would not hamper navigation in the least.

Briefly referring to the opposition to the proposal Mr. Geoffrion said that the Cedar Rapids and Soulange Power Company had their existing rights adequately protected under the laws of the Province of Quebec.

"The real owners—the Province of

News Of Old Home Week Is To Be Broadcast

Encouraging information reaching the Old Home Week committee is that the Canadian General Electric Company will broadcast news about Peterborough County's Old Home Week, thus giving international publicity to that event.

It is understood that other local plants whose head offices operate broadcasting stations, will take similar action.

Another way in which news of the Old Home Week will be carried to the ends of the earth is through the printing on stationery of local firms a line in red announcing the dates. The line will be printed on hundreds of thousands of letter heads and envelopes.

PARKS ESCAPES ACROSS BORDER

Car Stolen in Aylmer Is Found Near Sarnia, Chief Newhall Reports.

HAS MADE REPORT.

If the stack of correspondence on the matter, almost two inches in thickness, may be taken as a criterion, then Chief of Police S. Newhall has been decidedly busy in tracing the movements of John Parks, alias Bernard, alias McWilliams, Peterboro' jail breaker. The chief, in conversation with an Examiner reporter this morning, was decidedly reluctant to discuss in any detail, the search now being carried on for Parks, but intimated that the escaped man had probably crossed the border since the Star sedan which he had stolen at Aylmer Ontario, had been found near Sarnia. Near the point at which the car was recovered, rum runners are believed to operate as it is a narrow part of the St. Clair River, so that Parks would be likely to encounter assistance from that quarter.

Questioned as to what steps had been taken to recapture Parks, the chief stated that he had made his report to the Attorney-General's department and that therefore, the next move would probably be made from Toronto. However, he was confident that the jail breaker would be apprehended within the near future.

FORCES CLASH IN NICARAGUA

U. S. Medical Officer is Wounded and Two Guardsmen Are Killed.

SEVERE ENGAGEMENT.

MANAGUA, Nicaragua, January 15 (Canadian Press). — A sudden flaring of bandit activity in the northern jungles has resulted in the wounding of a United States medical officer and the killing of two guardsmen.

Lieutenant William H. Smith, medical officer, received two slight wounds in what was the most severe engagement in many months. Three members of the Guardia Nacional (the American officered National Guard) were wounded. It was believed that several of the outlaws had been killed.

The clash occurred in the vicinity of San Juan De Telpaneca, in the Province of Nueva Segovia, near the Honduran border.

General Booth Is Believed to Have Refused to Retire

Wife of Commander-in-Chief of Salvation Army Delivers General's Reply To High Council's Note Suggesting His Retiring Early This Morning.

MEMBERS ARE CONSIDERING THE NOTE; NO OFFICIAL STATEMENT HAS BEEN MADE

Reporters and Photographers Are Admitted To Grounds Of Sunbury Court, Where Members Have Their Pictures Taken —Booth Suffers Relapse.

SUNBURY-ON-THAMES, January 15 (Canadian Press). — The High Council of the Salvation Army late to-day was considering the reply of General Bramwell Booth to its request that he retire, and a vote on the Council's resolution adjudicating the case was expected during the evening session.

The Council received the General's reply from the hands of Mrs. Bramwell Booth this morning. A brief adjournment was taken at five o'clock and an official statement was then given out. This said:

"The High Council has received General Booth's reply, and is now considering it. At five o'clock there was a brief adjournment and the Council on resuming are proceeding with the adjudicating resolution."

It was stated in well-informed circles this afternoon that General Bramwell Booth's reply to the High Council of the Salvation Army was a refusal to retire.

The Council, which had assembled this morning to learn of the General's attitude then adjourned until this afternoon and it was stated that it was not likely any official communique would be issued before late this evening.

Mrs. Bramwell Booth was not present when the morning session opened since she had remained at her husband's bedside until the last moment.

After the morning session, reporters and photographers were admitted to the grounds for the first time and a group photograph of the Council was taken. It was noted that the only absentees were Mrs. Bramwell Booth, Catherine and Mary Booth, and Mrs. Booth-Heilberg, the General's youngest sister, the only member of the family in the group, being Evangeline.

Draw Own Conclusion.

Commissioner Lamb, Press Committee Chairman, when asked if any significance was attached to the absence of the Booths, replied: "You must draw your own conclusions."

Commissioner Lamb later said that the Council would meet this afternoon.

"We shall then consider General Booth's reply probably at considrable length and shall issue a bulletin during the evening but at what hour I cannot say."

There was an air of suppressed excitement as the High Council of the Salvation Army met to receive General Bramwell Booth's reply to its ultimatum for his retirement.

There was a full attendance when Commissioner Hay as the Council's presiding officer took the chair. What promised to be a memorable session of the Army's supreme body opened with the customary devotional exercises.

Suffers Relapse.

SOUTHWOLD, Eng., Jan. 15. — (Canadian Press). — The strain of the past few days is reported to have affected the condition of General Bramwell Booth adversely and he has suffered a minor relapse which is leaving him a decidedly sick man at the present time.

Mrs Bramwell Booth left Southwold by automobile at an early hour this morning in a blinding snowstorm this drive to Sunbury, leaving behind an anxious household watching at the General's bedside. Anxious not only because of the strain on the General but because of to-day's fateful developments at Sunbury which bear so importantly on the Army's future and the connection of the Booth familly with the organization.

It is understood that the terms of the General's reply to the suggestion that he retire were the subject of protracted consultations. Although it was said last night that the General's communication to the Council was ready for delivery late yesterday, it was understood this morning that there had been over night consideration of its terms and that the final draft was placed in Mrs. Bramwell Booth's hands for delivery to-day.

Messages Received.

When the Council resumed its sessions at 3 p.m., a number of telegrams had already been received at Sunbury Court urging the body to support the alternative leadership scheme recently suggested by General Booth. Some members of the Council said that the messages appeared as if in answer to a request from Edward Higgins, chief of Staff. He, however, denied that he had circulated any such request.

A formal statement was issued from Sunbury Court respecting the telegrams. This statement said:

"An anonymous communication from some quarter has been made to many Salvation Army officers in Britain and elsewhere asking that wired [illegible] should be sent in reply to [illegible] Commissioner E. J. Higgins, the communication asked that officers should communicate with the

EX-WARDENS DIE SUDDENLY

W. T. Curtis, of Havelock, and Robert Shaw, of Harvey, Have Long Municipal Experience.

WIDELY KNOWN.

Peterborough County loses two of its grand men in the deaths yesterday of W. T. Curtis and Robert Shaw. Both were ex-wardens of the county and both gave long years of service to the county serving on its council. Their years of the service on the council taken together total thirty eight. Both were men of keen insight, who looked into the future and saw the trend of affairs for their [illegible] and governed their actions in wise accordance. Both were Canadian born and bred coming of hardy ancestors, who hewed homes for themselves and families out of the virgin forest.

Robert Shaw died yesterday at his home in Harvey Township at the age of seventy-four. He was born in Otonabee Township but early in life moved with his family to Harvey. He soon began to take and active interest in municipal affairs and won the respect and admiration of his neighbors for his business like ideas. He was elected to the County Council representing his township and for thirty years held his seat in the council being recognized by all for his able administration. He was warden of the council for two terms, the first in 1894 and the second twenty years later in 1914.

W. T. Curtis died in this city last night about midnight at the age of seventy-two years. He was born in Northumberland County but while still a young man moved to Havelock. He soon won recognition as a man of sterling force of character and broad views and was elected to the County Council to manage his municipalities' business. He labored on the council for eight years. He was first on the council in 1903 and was returned in 1904 his good work being appreciated by his neighbors. He sat again on the council in 1921 and was returned in 1924 successfully holding his seat for five years consecutively until 1928. In 1826 he won the distinction of being warden of the County.

Both men, according to those who knew them, had those qualities of character and integrity that causes the admiration and respect of their fellows and both became the trusted representatives of their municipalities for many years. There work on the council is written deep in the history and progress of Peterborough County.

OIL COMPANY SEEKS PERMIT FOR STATION

Arthur Blade Promises to Call a Meeting of the War Veterans.

BY-LAW IS SUBMITTED

Mayor Denne Entertains the Aldermen to Dinner Before Session.

Further application was made last night at the first meeting of the City Council by Arthur Blade, district manager of the Imperial Oil Company, to erect a service station on George Street in front of Confederation Square. Mr. Blade maintained, through a letter written by Hon. G. N. Gordon, K.C., that as the man who had moved the motion against the building of a service station in front of the park at the meeting of the War Veterans, had given his consent to withdrawing it, there was nothing to withhold the granting of the permit. Hon. Mr. Gordon was out of the city on business and unable to be present, so the Council felt that as he had promised in December to call a meeting of the Veterans and was not present, that the matter could stand over for another month. In the meantime, Mr. Blade is going to call a meeting of the Veterans.

Mayor Denne entertained the members of the City Council and the heads of the departments at a dinner in Hooper's Palm Parlor before the Council held its meeting. It was a real get together dinner, when several speakers spoke well of last year's City Council and hoped that this city would make rapid progress in 1929. A motion of thanks, moved by Alderman Phelan and seconded by Alderman McIntyre to Mayor Denne for the dinner was carried unanimously.

Those at last night's Council meeting were Mayor R. Denne, Alderman C. H. Huffman, J. A. McNabb, George Macdonald, James Hamilton, Malcolm McIntyre, Daniel Holland, Walter Stocker, Robert S. Cotton and Nagle Phelan.

Seeks Grant.

James Dutton, vice-president of the Male Voice Choir, asked for the sum of $1,000 towards financing the choir's trip to New York on the 24th of May. The matter was referred to the Finance Committee.

Dr. W. T. Holloway was re-appointed a member of the Public Library Board, and the necessary by-law was passed authorizing his appointment.

Alderman Nagle Phelan was re-appointed to administer the charitable funds of the Foley Estate.

J. J. Turner, Alderman Nagle Phelan and Alderman Malcolm McIntyre were appointed to the Board of Health.

W. H. Young, president of the Horticultural Society, was present, and in a short address signed all the members of the Council up as members of the Society.

The usual grant of $400 was made to the Trent Waterway Development Association and interim grants of $20,000 was made to the Board of Education and $4,000 to the Separate School Board so that those bodies might be able to continue their work until the estimates are struck.

Mayor Denne was authorized to send deputations out of the city when necessary, and their expenses be paid on his certificate. The Board of Education was asked for a detailed statement on the amount of money collected and the number of outside pupils attending the Peterborough schools.

Prohibit Gas Stations

The by-law to prohibit the erection of gasoline or oil-filling stations on certain streets of the city was introduced by Alderman Macdonald, but after a short discussion it was held over until the February meeting of the council. Alderman Hamilton in speaking to the by-law, thought that it should be held over, so that the council might give all the streets in the city very careful consideration. "This by-law does not mean in particular the Imperial Oil Company, it means that we will have certain areas in this city where no oil company can erect service stations," he declared.

Alderman Huffman maintained that the by-law should cover every section of the city. "I think this is small town stuff stopping the Imperial Oil Company on this particular property. If this thing is going to be done right it will take more than one evening.

Alderman Phelan thought that the matter ought to be referred to the Board of Works, and he moved that the committee rise and report progress.

The matter came up again when the letter from Hon. G. N. Gordon, who has been acting for the Imperial Oil Company in the matter, was read. Mr. Gordon asked in his letter that the permit be granted, as he had consulted with members of the Legion's executive, who claimed that as far as they were concerned they had nothing to do in the matter as the motion was put at a meeting of the war veterans of the city and not at a meeting [illegible]

FOUR VISITING CLUBS JOIN IN WELCOMING CAMPBELLFORD INTO ROTARY INTERNATIONAL

"Baby" Club of District Is Presented With Charter Number 3,020.

EXCELLENT PROGRAM.

Governor S. McMichael Delivers Inspiring Address On Principles of Rotary.

CAMPBELLFORD, Jan. 15 (By a Staff Reporter). — With Rotarians present representing the Belleville, Trenton, Kingston and Toronto clubs, the charter meeting of Campbellford's newly-formed Rotary club was held here last night. Charter Number 3,020 being presented on behalf of Rotary International, and the Governor of District 27, by S. McMichael, of Toronto. Taking the form of a dinner meeting in Christ Church Parish hall, beginning at 7.00 p.m., the gathering meant much as an impetus to the "baby" club, bringing to Campbellford, as it did, Presidents, Past Presidents, and a large number of members of the visiting clubs, as well as a wealth of particularly able musical and oratorical talent all tending to enhance in the minds of the new club members, the principles and spirit of Rotary International.

In company with the presentation of the charter to President Dr. Bruce Longmore of the local club were the presentations by the Toronto and Belleville clubs of a beautiful Rotary shield and Rotary gavel and gong, respectively, while the main addresses were delivered by Rotarian McMichael, who is chairman of the Canadian Advisory Committee, and President Charles Buchanan of the Toronto club.

The Campbellford Club

Organized some two months ago under the supervision of the Belleville Rotary club, the local organization has proved itself worthy of the charter presented last night, for already it has begun its work of service to the community under an able executive comprising the following:

President—Dr. Bruce Longmore.
Vice President—Alex. McColl.
Secretary-Treasurer—E. Dolman.
Directors—Elie Brunelle and H. M. Carr.

The membership includes Arthur Armour, A. D. Bennett, J. C. Birmingham, C. H. Davidson, D. W. Douglas, E. H. Greig, Albert Hazell, W. Henson, G. A. Kingston, H. C. Lapp, J. A. McColl, N. A. McLaren, Charles Nadoo, R. W. Scott, C. K. Stephens and the Rev. R. C. Tait.

Excellent Musical Program

Presided over by Mackenzie Robertson, president of the Belleville Rotary club, the dinner meeting proved a most enjoyable one, from the appetizing supper provided by the ladies of the Willing Workers of Christ Church, to the final chorus of community singing with which it was dismissed. With the Toronto deputation had come Frank Oldfield, popular radio baritone; while from Belleville way had come Leo Riggs, pianist, and Rotarians J. Thompson and A. Stillman, of the Radio 4, all of whom contributed most generously to the musical program which punctuated addresses and other events of the evening. Mr. Riggs proved an unusually accomplished accompanist and instrumentalist; his companions were heard in splendid voice, while Mr. Oldfield was in such demand as to threaten his repertoire, if not his good nature. All lent able assistance to the community singing, which was enjoyed during the early part of the meeting. In addition, there were numerous stunts that added to the enjoyment of the occasion.

Presentations Made.

In his opening remarks, thanking all those who had come from so far away as Toronto, Kingston and other places, Chairman Robertson spoke briefly at the outset, going on to the manner in which it had carried on during its infancy. He regretted that road and weather conditions had interfered with a larger attendance at this, the charter night of the Campbellford Rotary Club, and, in passing, paid tribute to the worth of the late president of the Napanee club, George Gibbard, who had recently passed away. During the meeting, it was proposed that the secretary of the local club convey the sympathy of the meeting to the bereaved ones.

Chairman Robertson then called upon the Campbellford president, and on behalf of the Belleville Rotarians, presented to him the gong and gavel with the wish that it might be heard regularly at the club's meetings throughout the years to come. For the Campbellford club and its officers and members he bespoke a future of service and satisfaction in the spirit of Rotary International, and urged them to continue in the way that they had begun.

Vice-President Thomas Rogers, of the Toronto club, made the second presentation, that of the shield, and in so doing, he too, enlarged upon the many benefits to be derived frm Rotary. From the design of the shield itself he took his text, pointing to the spokes which signified that every

CHICAGO MUST STOP PRACTICE AT EARLY DATE

Diversion of Water Cannot Be Authorized As a Way of Disposing Sewage.

PERMIT JUSTIFIED.

One Community Cannot Take Water From Another Rules Supreme Court.

WASHINGTON, D.C., Jan. 15 (Canadian Press).—Diversion of water from Lake Michigan into the Chicago River cannot be authorized as a method of disposing of sewage, and the practice must be stopped at the earliest possible date. This is the effect of a unanimous decision of the Supreme Court of the United States brought down yesterday by Chief Justice William Howard Taft, in which the court finds that the late Secretary of War Weeks had the right to permit the diversion of water from the Great Lakes watershed to the Mississippi River only as an emergency measure to make navigation possible in Chicago harbor and that the permit was conditioned on the bona-fide intention of Chicago to construct sewage disposal works which would make the diversion unnecessary. All other considerations are brushed aside in the voluminous opinion brought down yesterday. The necessity for sewage disposal water power development or the improvement in the Mississippi River levels do not justify the appropriation by one community of water which would normally flow into the territory of another community, the court's decision says in effect.

Ice Bridge Forms Below Niagara Falls

NIAGARA FALLS, Ont., Jan. 15.—(Canadian Press.)— According to old-timers the ice bridge now solidly crossing the Niagara below the Falls has formed earlier than ever. Great masses of ice are passing into the lower river and causing a jam there. Reports yesterday stated that damage to [illegible] property [illegible] on both sides of the river. Great ice floes are slowly being carried down the upper river and over the falls.

The little electric train shown in this picture is controlled entirely by sounds of the voice. Mr. W. W. Jones of the General Electric Company is demonstrating the new toy. One only has to say "Back up" and the train will start in reverse. "Stop" brings the engine to a halt, and some such phrase as "Get along there" will start it forward. The secret lies in a one-two-three relay coupled to the microphone. It will understand any language if spoken clearly.

CAMPBELLFORD TOWN COUNCIL ORGANIZES FOR YEAR 1929

Mayor Davidson Delivers Inaugural Address Urging Economy.

COMMITTEES APPOINTED.

Automatic Electric Stop and Go Traffic Signals Are Discussed.

CAMPBELLFORD, Jan. 15.— (Examiner Staff Correspondence).—Owing to the fact that at the last moment, the Rev. R. C. Tait was unable to be present to start the 1929 council of the town of Campbellford on their path of duty with a word of prayer and the customary address, the business of the meeting was proceeded with as usual. Councillors Wiggins and Abernethy were unable to be present. All but Councillor Abernethy have taken the official oath of office. At the present time, Abernethy is ill. It was decided that the town would purchase the colored lights which light the business section of the town. Stop and go, electric signs were laid over till the next meeting.

Mayor Davidson

In Mayor Davidson's address to the new council after ascending to the mayor's chair, he expressed his regret at the absence of the Rev. Mr. Tait and also that of Councillors Wiggins and Abernethy. He was pleased to see several of the old members of the council present at the table for another year and thought that the strictest economy should be practised during 1929 since the past year had called for such an outlay of funds. The street maintenance question had been made considerably less urgent, he thought, on account of the four miles of pavement laid during 1928.

Chairmen Named

Mayor Davidson, at the pleasure of the council, named the head of the various committees. These, in turn, selected their committees. Councillor Wiggins, head of the Inquiry and Industry committee and Councillor Abernethy, head of the Fire Committee, being absent, their committees were not named. For the present year, Deputy Reeve Stone and councillors Wiggins, Cole and MacDonald will form the Finance Committee; Reeve Bygott and councillors O'Sullivan, Wilkinson and Cole will constitute the Road and Bridges committee; Charity will be dealt with by Councillors O'Sullivan, MacDonad and Cole and Deputy Reeve Stone. Councillors MacDonald, Abernethy and O'Sullivan compose the police committee. The band committee will be Councillors Cole and Wilkinson and Deputy Reeve Stone. There were two new committees added to the regular list, the Parks committee and the Fire Committee. The former will be Wilkinson, Bygott and Cole.

A telegram was received from the Trent Waterways Development Association asking for a grant of $65 as the municipalitie's share of the expense of the National Motor boat show to be held in New York City. On motion of Bygott and Cole, the grant was made.

The stove and pipes in the weigh scales house at the C.N.R. station were brought into the line light when the council was asked by letter to adjust the matter of ownership and sale price. The matter was left over till the next meeting. The Carnegie Public Library's request for the usual annual grant of $1550 was granted for 1929. An advertisement in Ackerman's Sportsmen's Guide was taken for another year. The clerk was ordered to send subscriptions for each member of the council to theM unicipal World as usual.

Councillor Wilkinson brought up the matter of automatic electric stop and go traffic signals. His motion to purchase two of them was seconded by Councillor Cole. But after some discussion, most of it unfavourable to the motion, the matter was left over till the next meeting. Councillor O'Sullivan brought up the matter of advertising the town and was in favor of hiring an advertising agent on a salary plus commission basis for a term of several months. This plan had been adopted by other municipalities, he claimed. The annual fee of fifteen dollars to the Good Roads Association, was ordered paid, and a deputation of three named to attend the convention. The delegates will be Reeve Bygott and councillors O'Sullivan and Cole.

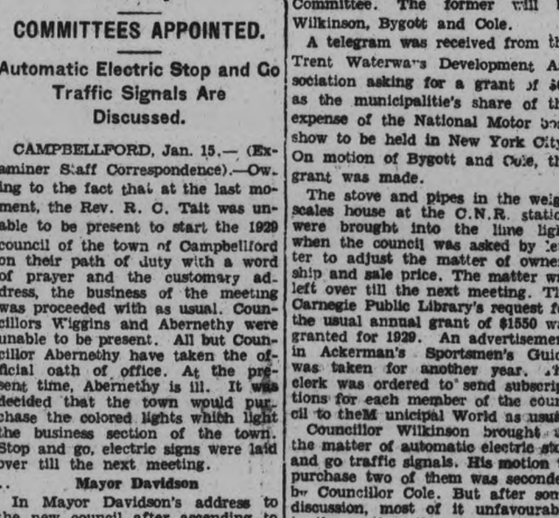
Charles Benor was appointed high school trustees for the years 1929 and 1930. R. J. Allan and R. S. Bell cil to the Municipal World as usual. the town for 1928. The two names inserted in the by-law were the names of the only two to make application. The Rev. Father Phelan was re-appointed to the Public Library Board. John Gay was appointed to the Board of Health for another term. The by-law presented by the Reeve provided for a loan of $25,000 by the Mayor and treasurer of the town to be negotiated with the Canadian Bank of Commerce with the rate of interest at six percent. The amount was to meet the current expenses of the town.

Robert Lowery was appointed assessor.



Next June, an airplane carrying provincial and dominion officials will enter the last unceded Indian territory in the whole Dominion of Canada, to negotiate a treaty for its purchase from the Indians by Ontario. The area consists of 130,000 square miles from the [illegible] river north to the Manitoba [illegible], as shown on this map. The airplane will carry at least $25,000, and perhaps as much as $40,000, to be used in payment to the Indians. The party will consist of an Ontario commissioner, probably Walter C. Cain, deputy minister of lands and forests, a Dominion commissioner, two pilots, an air engineer, a movie cameraman and a physician.

NO CONTEST IN WEST LAMBTON

Ross W. Gray Is Elected To Federal Seat By Acclamation.

LIBERAL IN POLITICS.

SARNIA, Ont., Jan. 15 (Canadian Press).—Ross W. Gray, lawyer, prominent in sports circles, will take his seat in the House of Commons as Liberal member for West Lambton, when the House convenes February 7. Mr. Gray's election to the House will swell the ranks of the youthful members. He is but 32 years of age and without previous experience in Dominion politics. He is a graduate of Osgoode Hall and took a post-graduate course at Harvard University Law School, following which he has practiced here. He has had experience in civic politics serving from 1924 to 1927 on the Local Board of Education. Mr. Gray has been active in rugby and tennis.

MAN IS FOUND BURIED IN SNOW

Midlander Loses Way Home On Saturday Night, Spends Day in Blizzard.

HANDS AND FEET FROZEN.

MIDLAND, Ont., Jan. 15 (Canadian Press).—Wallie McIntyre, of Midland, owes his life to a snow drift, which, although nearly smothering him, saved him from freezing to death after two nights and a day wandering about in a blinding blizzard. When found yesterday McIntyre was burried under a bank of snow with both hands and feet frozen.

From late Saturday night until this morning McIntyre was exposed to the full rigors of one of the coldest spells this winter, which sent the thermometer down to 10 below zero. Worn out with his wanderings, McIntyre sought shelter in a bush early Sunday morning and remained there ever since until found.

McIntyre left here by horse and sled for Penetang, three miles away, Saturday night, and after staying there for two hours, left to return home, but lost his way in the storm. Sunday morning the horse broke away from him and came home alone. Search parties immediately set out looking for McIntyre. He was conscious when found by Clyde Cook, who had accompanied him to Penetang, but who returned home earlier in the evening.

He is now resting comfortably in the hospital here, while doctors are doing their best to save his feet and hands from amputation.

member of the club must bear his share of the burden; to the cogs on the outside of the wheel, symbolical of the fact that the Rotary club must function in co-operation with the community and that there was a load to be pulled if the progress of the community were to be furthered.

Frank Oldfield here contributed "The Company Sergeant-Major' and "The Cornish Floral Dance" in splendid voice, while Frank Coates, of the Kingston club, passed on greetings and best wishes from his organization, regretting that more of its number had found it impossible to be present. Vice-President Kelly of the same club, was also present. President E. Simms, of the Trenton club, also extended felicitations from his club as one which, seven years ago, had sprung up, fostered by the Belleville Rotarians, as was the Campbellford club.

Attributing the splendid community spirit existant in his home city to the spirit of good will fostered by the Rotary and Kiwanis clubs, there, Bernard Collins, president of the Belleville Kiwanis club spoke briefly as a guest of the evening. He was pleased to see a sister service club beginning in Campbellford, and wished for it the best of success. A Stillman followed him with a well-rendered vocal number, accompanied by Mr. Riggs.

Toronto President Speaks.

Stressing the importance of well-timed, snappy meetings as a means of sustaining interest in Rotary, President Charles Buchanan, of the Toronto club spoke to the meeting and in so doing revealed many bits of good advice for the baby club to act upon. His was the largest club in the British Empire and important in its functions, as in these of the smallest club, was the careful timing of speeches and other phases of the meetings. Passing to the more serious part of his message, President Buchanan declared that "it is impossible to define Rotary, you must live it to know it." He went on to illustrate how his club meetings were conducted so as to adhere to a rigid time for all phases of them, and extended an invitation to all outside Rotarians to visit with the Toronto club or at its table in the Board of Trade. In conclusion, the speaker introduced the chairman of the Canadian Advisory Board, Mr. McMichael, who had come as the representative of District Governor R. Turnbull, who was unavoidably absent.

Presenting a review of the growth and progress of Rotary, from its humble beginning in the city of Chicago in 1905 to an International movement, unique in its non-political, non-religious and non-racial scope, located in 46 countries of the civilized world, S. McMichael was heard with a great deal of interest in his address which preceded his presentation to the Campbellford Club, of its charter.

In fancy he carried his auditors back to those first years when after five years, sixteen clubs held the first convention; he showed them the growth of Rotary in the United States, Mexico, Bermuda, Cuba, Porto Rico, Central and Southern America, Hawii, the Phillipines, Siam the Dutch East Indies, China, Japan, Manchuria, nearly every country in Europe, the British Isles and in Canada, showing what an immense factor it has become in the promotion of world peace.

In conclusion, he pointed to the features which had made Rotary so unique, listing the facts that it is the only organization that is free from Commercial, Religious and Political phases, that speaks in a language of sympathy and is, thereby, propogating a philosophy of life from its motto, "He Profits Most Who Serves Best."

"And Now, president Bruce, I present to you Charter 3020, from Rotary International; you and your fellow members have been received into the family of Rotary because, by head, heart and hand, you have proved worthy of it. I would point out that since the beginning of the organization, only two charters have been recalled or withdrawn, and I trust that God will keep you and guide you in the years that shall be yours."

President Longmore's response was one of appreciation for all who had made possible the establishment of a club in Campbellford, touching on the part and presentation of the Toronto, and the Belleville clubs. Other speakers included Past President Charles Dolan of the Belleville club, and J. Ford, of Toronto, who proposed the vote of thanks to the ladies. In all, it was a most profitable and interesting evening for visitors and Campbellford folk alike, and the existence of a service organization here promises much for the future.

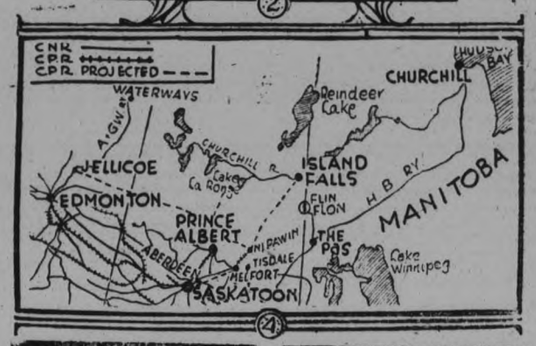
RAILWAYS LAUNCH CONSTRUCTION WAR



Announcement of a large branch line building program of the C.P.R nad C.N.R., totalling nearly $90,000,000, has launched a strenuous "steel" conflict for the whiphand, with western cities supporting the former and the rural districts the latter. ABOVE are shown: 1. Sir Henry Thornton, president of the C.N.R.; 2. Hon. Charles A. Dunning, minister of railways and canals; 3. E. W. CATTLE, GRAIN, PRODUCE

MONTREAL GRAIN AND PRODUCE.

MONTREAL, Que., January 15 (Canadian Press). — The export trade in Canadian grain here yesterday was decidedly dull owing to the fact that foreign buyers failed to respond to the prices asked by local exporters.

A feature of the domestic cash grain trade was the stronger feeling that developed in American corn and Manitoba feed barley and values were marked up one cent per bushel. Other lines were firmly maintained. The trade was quiet. American No. 4 yellow corn sold at $1.11, cool, sweet corn at $1.09 per bushel ex-store, Montreal, and Manitoba feed barley at 79c.

The flour market was without any special feature to note, prices for spring and winter wheat grades being well maintained under a fair demand.

The demand from local and united States buyers for all lines of mill-feed was good, and prices were unchanged. A good trade was done in standard grades of rolled oats at firm prices.

The trade in all grades of eggs was only fair and the undertone to the market continued easy. Receipts were 805 cases.

An active business was done in potatoes and the tone of the market was firm. Prince Edward Island Whites sold at 85c, and Green Mountains at 90c per 90 pounds, in bags; while New Brunswick Green Mountains were offered at 65c per 90 pounds, in bulk.

Owing to the scarcity of supplies and the good demand a stronger feeling developed in the Canadian bean market and values were advanced ten cents per bushel to $5.50.

There was no change in the butter situation, prices being generally steady, but the volume of business was small. Receipts were 20,265 packages.

Extreme dullness marked the cheese trade, but values were firm. Receipts were 29 boxes.

CHICAGO, Jan. 15. — (Canadian Press.)—Flickering out of chances of a bumper corn crop in Argentina sent corn, wheat and oats yesterday to new high price records for the season. Increased buying accompanied the upturns, but enormous profit taking sales afterward wiped out much of the day's gains.

Closing quotations on corn were unsettled, 3-4 and 7-8c. to 1 1-8 net higher. Wheat finished 1-8c. to 5-8c. up, oats 1-8c. to 3-8c. advance, and provisions varying from 5c. decline to a rise of 2c.

All deliveries of corn and oats surpassed yesterday the peak quotations in the seasons trading heretofore. For wheat, the new top record established yesterday was for the July delivery alone, but other months attained the highest point yet on the present upward movement of values. Throughout most of the day, attention focused on Buenos Aires advices to leading houses here that prospects of a big new crop of Argentine corn this year had finally been cancelled by drought which has prevailed in the greater part of Argentina. Showers which fell yesterday over Buenos Aires province were inadequate, the reports said, and the outlook is now for a considerably smaller corn crop in Argentina than last year.

Another outstanding feature in the corn pit yesterday was the fact that corn export business from the United States by way of the Gulf of Mexico was under way at increased premiums as compared with the market for future deliveries. Meanwhile, country offerings of corn to some here were of liberal volume, but were smaller than had generally been looked for in view of the recent sharp advance in prices.

About as expected, the domestic corn visible supply yesterday showed an increase of 1,329,000 bushels for the week, and is now 20,182,000 bushels against 8,570,000 bushels a year ago. Oats followed corn.

Falling off of 3,743,000 bushels in the United States wheat visible supply total for the week, together with late European wheat markets were the fact that for the first time of fully reflecting advances scored on this side of the Atlantic, gave a stimulus yesterday to wheat buyers here. A good deal of an offset, though, was increased spread trading in which wheat was sold against purchases of corn. On the other hand, severe cold weather domestic winter wheat territory was a bullish influence despite heavy snowfalls over much of the belt.

For the most part, the provision list was firm as a result of corn strength and notwithstanding lower quotations on hogs.

TORONTO, Jan. 15. — Week-end declines in wholesale egg prices revealed a decidedly weak market situation in Toronto.

Efforts to move incoming supplies of fresh eggs at last week's decline were not successful and a further cut in prices at the week-end left the market at a general range of 36 to 37 cents for fresh extras, delivered in Toronto. Prices to the retail trade were also reduced 2 cents a dozen on extras, while storage quotations were also shaded a cent.

Although the usual dullness of the week's opening market was in evidence yesterday, the further sharp decline in prices stimulating buying interest on the part of retailers, and wholesale dealers reported an improvement in outgoing storage trade. Meanwhile, fresh eggs continued to arrive in liberal volume, but the price readjustment is expected to provide incentive ments at recent levels, and prospects to buyers who have withheld commitpoint to a better distributive demand for the coming week.

Closing prices in the Toronto wholesale market yesterday were on a basis of 36 to 37 cents a dozen for fresh extras, delivered in Toronto, cases returned, with firsts at 32 and 33 cents and seconds at 25 cents. Transactions at these levels represented declines of as much as 6 cents a dozen from last week, while quotations to the retail trade were 3 cents lower at 45 to 47 cents for fresh extras, in cartons, with firsts 1 to 2 cents off, at 38 to 39 cents Storage eggs were quoted to the retail trade at 34 to 36 cents a dozen for extras in cartons ,firsts ruling at 30 to 32 cents.

Butter Values are Unchanged.

Butter values were unchanged in dull trading, and quotations on New Zealand supplies continued at approximately the same level as those for domestic butter. Reports were current that the steamship Turakina is unloading 80,000 pounds of New Zealand butter at Halifax, but New Zealand spot quotations were seemingly unaffected, and remained generally at 40 cents.

Finest No. 1 domestic creamery, delivered in Toronto, remained at 40 to 40½ cents a pound, but the bulk of trading took place in No. 2 grade at a range of 39 to 39½ cents delivered. Quotations to the retail trade showed no change at 44 to 45 cents for No. 1 creamery prints, while No. 2 prints ruled at 42 and 43 cents. The undertone of the market was moderately firm, owing chiefly to the fact that incoming supplies of New Zealand are likely to be absorbed in wholesale requirements without materially affecting the market as a whole.

Cheese Market Dull.

Cheese quotations were entirely nominal, owing to extremely dull market conditions. Dealers asked 20 to 20½ cents a pound for new large cheese, wanted. No. 1 Government graded, delivered in Toronto.

The poultry market showed no change in quiet trading.

THE COUNCIL COMPLETE.

In selecting Stanley Lowe, highest of the defeated candidates at the recent election, to complete the term of ex-Alderman Ackerman, who resigned last month, the members of the City Council were doubtless actuated by the fact that Mr. Lowe had been a member of last year's Council and the experience thus gained would be of service to him.

For another reason, too, the choice was justified as Old Home Week is to be celebrated in Peterborough this year and it is therefore fitting that Alderman Lowe, who sponsored the event through last year's Council, should be a member of the 1929 Council.

This whole matter of appointing aldermen, however, is one that might receive some consideration.

There is no rule to govern the Council in making appointments—they can choose anybody they like—and the question naturally arises as to whether or not it could be made possible, when a vacancy in Council occurs as the result of a resignation just before the municipal election, for the electors to be given a chance to fill the gap.

This, of course, could be accomplished by making it obligatory upon Council to do what has been done in this case, that is to appoint the candidate among the unsuccessful aspirants who receives the most votes.

OPTIMISM IS SHOWN.

The speeches and reports which featured the annual meeting of the Royal Bank of Canada were brimful of enthusiasm over the prosperous condition of Canada and over the splendid growth and progress registered by the bank itself during the past year.

As to Canadian prosperity the officers of the Royal Bank were most emphatic in their statements.

Sir Herbert Holt, president of the institution, declared that there is no other part of the world more prosperous than this country, while C. E. Neill, the general manager, pointed out that almost all indices of Canadian production have shown a spectacular rise in the past four years.

The review of conditions during the year made by these two outstanding financiers was such as to give Canadians new faith in their country and fresh ground for thankfulness that they are citizens of a Dominion with such magnificent prospects.

Of the operations of the Royal Bank, Mr. Neill was able to report the best year in the history of the institution, the bank's business during 1928 having shown a remarkable growth and expansion.

The addresses of Sir Herbert Holt and of Mr. Neill and the reports of the progress made by the Royal Bank make a resume of the annual meeting of the institution a most interesting topic for discussion among the people of Canada.

THE CANADA LIFE.

The annual report of the Canada Life Assurance Company, appearing in this issue, should be full of interest to Examiner readers.

The people of this city and district take more than a passing interest in the success of Canada's oldest life assurance company, probably because of the fact that Hon. George A. Cox, one of the city's best known citizens of several decades ago, was prominently connected with the company.

During his regime a large volume of business was written in this district, and the company has many satisfied policyholders in this country.

The annual report shows the Canada Life Assurance Company to have had a most successful year, and it is a distinct achievement to have over $881,000,000 worth of business on its books, every single case of which has been passed upon by the company's own medical department.

It will doubtless be a matter of satisfaction to the friends of the Canada Life in this district that it has again come into its own here and is securing at least a fair share of the life assurance protection applied for by our citizens.

The billion dollar mark is the present goal of the company, and the total business may reach that level before long.

IN FOR A BUSY YEAR.

Mayor Denne's inaugural address yesterday indicates that the members of the City Council will have much to keep them busy during the year.

His Worship pointed out that the purchase of the gas plant must be completed, the question of an addition to the sewage disposal plant taken care of, and a paving program drawn up and completed.

In addition, of course, there is to be an active campaign for new industries, the usual large amount of routine business has to be disposed of, and the Mayor outlined another work that might well be undertaken in the improvement of the bathing facilities at Inverlea Park.

With these and other matters to occupy their attention, the city fathers are apparently in for a busy year, and it is matter for satisfaction that most of the committees are headed by aldermen well schooled in their duties.

Thus Ald. Phelan becomes for the ninth time chairman of the city's Finance Committee; Ald. Malcolm McIntyre is again chairman of the Manufacturers' Committee, and Ald. Robert Cotton is commencing his third term as chairman of the Fire, Water and Light Committee. Ald. James Hamilton, who finished the year as chairman of the Board of Works, will carry on with that portfolio, while Ald. Walter Stocker's long connection with the Horticultural Society and experience in municipal affairs, should make him a successful chairman of the Railways and Parks Committee.

The only new chairman, therefore, is Ald. Harry Huffman, who will preside over the meetings of the Property Committee.

When youth calls to youth it makes a lot of extra business for the telephone company.—Stratford Beacon-Herald.

OUR U. S. RELATIONS.

Whenever Sir Herbert S. Holt speaks publicly, he has something important to say. His address at the annual meeting of the shareholders of the Royal Bank this week was no exception to the rule, it was especially significant for those who are willing to read between the lines.

That section of his remark dealing with national policies was one of the most startling speeches which has been made in many a day by any Canadian business leader. His remarks will have a decided bearing on the attitude which business men generally in Canada will and should adopt in future, particularly with regard to the Dominion's trade with the United States.

The president of the Royal Bank indicated that the balance of the trade between the Dominion and the United States was decidedly not in the best interests of Canada. The dollar value of U. S. imports into this country is almost twice as great as Canadian exports to the States.

That these exports are largely raw materials, while Canada's imports are largely manufactured products, is another unsatisfactory feature of the situation; especially as the increase in wages in recent years has increased the cost of the manufactured products as compared with prices of raw materials.

* * * *

After making these points, Sir Herbert does not raise the old cry for higher tariffs all around, but suggests—or rather hints at—means which can be taken to effect a betterment in a situation which is distinctly disadvantageous to Canadian business generally.

First, though, he points out that steadily the United States has followed a tariff policy for the last fifty years which has handicapped Canadian producers. Now Canadian production and manufacturing is on a basis where it can compete in world markets and is dependent in no way upon the tariff policies of any single foreign nation. Thus, the Dominion is in a better bargaining position.

Although the United States wants us to purchase her goods, she refuses to in turn purchase an equal volume of goods from Canada, and at the same time is again considering tariff measures which will further handicap Canadian industry—apparently not realizing that any decline in the volume of trade in Canada must mean a decrease in purchasing power here for U. S. goods. Continuing, Sir Herbert indicated that further tariff action along these lines by the United States would be something of an unfriendly action and certainly not in the best interests of international good-will.

This is the situation as Sir Herbert Holt sees it—and as anyone else must see it upon reflection and an examination of the facts. The remedy for this situation, particularly if the United States again raises its tariff walls, will be for Canada to enter into trade agreements elsewhere. In effect, Sir Herbert Holt says that if the United States refuses to trade with Canada on an equal basis, Canada is in a position to, and should, seek other trade relationships in which she can participate on a more satisfactory basis.

He goes so far as to say that it may be necessary to meet the situation by larger tariffs against United States goods, coupled with a greater preference to British goods and goods of some of the other nations.

* * * *

His remarks were sane, thoughtful and constructive. It is to be hoped that they will be read and inwardly digested by every Canadian business man and by Federal politicians who, from a proper knowledge of the situation, should be ready and willing to alter Canadian trade politics quickly following any more unfriendly tariff acts by the United States.

Sir Herbert Holt knows well enough that Canada cannot sell where she does not buy—an economic proposition which has not yet been recognized by business men in the United States. Therefore, he makes the point that Canadian Trade Commissioners should be just as earnest in seeking inward as well as outward trade for Canada. He points in particular to the Orient and to the great possibilities of developing trade on the Pacific. Here the United States has been particularly anxious to sell goods—but persistently refuses to buy anything.

Although Sir Herbert Holt does not say so, the inference from his remarks is that all this places Canada in a particularly happy position to trade elsewhere than with the United States. Our raw materials are an essential for the great manufacturing industries of that country and our forest resources are particularly essential, not only to manufacturers, but to the great publishing industry there.

* * * *

All these thoughts the president of the Royal Bank does not actually put into words, the inferences of his remarks are plain to the thoughtful reader. In a nutshell, they can be summarized. Canada is now fortunately in a position in which it is not solely dependent on the United States trade. It is in a good bargaining position; it can develop other fields, and is in a position to do so very successfully.

The fact that remarks along these lines emanate from the president of the largest bank in the Dominion is a feature which undoubtedly will have some effect on those responsible for the fiscal policies of the United States who, should they further increase business antagonism here by increased tariffs, will later meet declining markets for United States goods in Canada, coupled with a greater competition with the Dominion in overseas trade.

It is fortunate also that Sir Herbert Holt's remarks have been so thoughtfully conceived and so well expressed. His views are those of one with international business experience who realizes that over the long trend, exports and imports can never do aught but balance one another. He takes the same view that the expansion in Canada's exports must also be followed by an expansion in imports.—Financial Post.

EDITORIAL NOTES AND COMMENT.

We are being forced to the opinion that this winter is not so open after all.

The attempt to disqualify W. A. Summerville as a member of the Toronto Board of Control may be justified from a technical standpoint, but is not exactly cricket.

The demand for more hockey goals promises to shift from New York to Toronto.

According to reports, the Quebec Government in establishing a broadcasting station does not propose to pay any attention to Ottawa or Washington. It is to be hoped this example is not followed by other Provinces and States or radio enthusiasts might as well give their sets away.

Peterborough's jail-breaking auto enthusiast seems to be losing his grip. There have been no reports for a week of his stealing a car.

A Thought

HABITS.

Because habit is all-powerful, it is of the utmost importance to form right habits early. A close observer declares that nine-tenths of our daily acts are the result of habit rather than reason. For example, he affirms that if you are in the habit of putting on the right shoe first, you will carry your left all about the room even if it is inconvenient rather than put it on first.

If you are in the habit of putting your right hand in your garment first, you will do that every time unless you specifically determine to do otherwise. While such things, of course, are trifles, they indicate conclusively how very largely the matter of habit determines the events of our whole course of life.

If this be true, we cannot be too greatly concerned about the habits we form, nor can we begin to manifest this concern too early. It is a wise and helpful thing to break away from a weak habit just as soon as we discover it. But there is something better than this. Cultivate right habits. Every right act repeated makes right living easier for all future time.

HOROSCOPE

The Stars Incline, But Do Not Compel

WEDNESDAY, JANUARY 16, 1929

(Copyright, McClure Newspaper Syn.)

This should be a fairly fortunate day, according to astrology. A benefic aspect dominates strongly, while less forceful influences for good are apparent.

All the signs seem to encourage effort toward placing oneself favorably for the new year. It is a lucky day for seeking employment.

Under this rule, persons who hold public responsibilities should benefit. It is a favorable direction of the stars for governors, mayors and heads of business organizations.

Congress is subject to a planetary government that seems to promise important legislation. Women lawmakers have the prospect of making special fame for themselves.

While this is held to be a forbidding aspect under which to ask favors of banks, it is auspicious for new business ventures.

Both men and women who begin any business or professional venture while this configuration prevails have the promise of success.

It is read as not an opportune time to make acquaintances, and much better for depending on old friends where business or pleasure is concerned.

Aviation is to benefit marvelously through a new invention that will be exhibited before many weeks have passed, the seers prophesy.

Women who must ask their husbands for money should defer any financial conferences until better aspects rule. There is likely to be a tendency toward economy owing to the appearance of holiday-time bills.

Rest and recreation that restore nervous persons should be sought. Both men and women should relax so that they may be in first-rate health for the remaining weeks of the winter, which will be eventful for most persons.

Mars and Neptune now exert great power over affairs in the national capital where certain policies are to awaken bitter opposition.

Both the army and the navy will be subjects of frequent discussion, and warships will focus interest, owing to a world event.

Persons whose birthdate it is are likely to encounter many changes in the coming year. There may be danger of nursing ambitions too high to be realized. The wise will not be hasty in giving up certainties for wild hazards.

Children born on this day probably will have marvelous opportunities offered all through their lives. The subjects of this sign of Capricorn generally have much vision and imagination. Many are enthusiastic travelers and fond of adventure.

Lyrics of Life

By Douglas Malloch

ASHAMED OF TEARS.

Ashamed of tears? This world of ours
Might be as well ashamed of flow'rs,
Skies of their stars when night appears,
As mortals be ashamed of tears.
For then if ever, when we weep,
We waken who have been asleep,
And let the flood of feeling roll
Across the desert of the soul.

We live so much the drab, drab days,
We walk so much life's treadmill ways,
With heart so dumb, with mind so mute,
We're little better than the brute.
And then some day there comes some grief
That only tears can give relief,
And then the beauty floods our eyes
That God has put in rain-washed skies.

Ashamed of tears, when even He Knelt weeping in Gethsemene?
We never see God quite so clear
As through the prism of a tear;
If purity we ever know,
It is our tears that make us so;
And only they need blush with shame
To whom emotion never came.

THE LUCKIEST LADY

— By —

Ruby M. Ayres

XXXII.—FORTY POUNDS

The Little Flapper was desperate. In her weak state she exaggerated the importance of everything Dolly had said. She only knew that Marna's happiness was threatened, and it was more than she could bear.

"Oh, don't be angry with me, darling!" she implored again.

Marna took her hand, holding it gently.

"Biddy, have you fallen in love with anyone?" she asked with an effort. The dread had been in her mind ever since the night when George had remarked upon Hugh and the Little Flapper dancing together.

George had said in his blunt way:

"Make a good-lookin' pair, eh, don't they? Of course, he's too old for her, but she might do worse. He'd be kind to her, at any rate."

So many times since Marna had recalled those words, and wondered. The Little Flapper was romantic, she knew, and she had always looked particularly happy when Hugh Hubbard was anywhere about.

"Marna!"

With an effort Marna turned and went back to the Little Flapper.

"Of course I'm not in love," Biddy said chokingly. "Who is there to be in love with except John Blair, and he's only a boy, and I don't like boys."

"She doesn't say that she doesn't like men," Marna thought jealously, then pushed the thought from her, ashamed.

"I was only chaffing, dear," she said gently. "You see, if you haven't fallen in love, I can't think of anything else that can be troubling you. Love and money seem to be the only two great troubles in the world," she added cynically.

There was a little silence, then Biddy said:

"It's money."

"Money!" Marna looked amazed. "What do you mean, Biddy?"

"I can't explain." The Little Flapper's blue eyes were tragic. "I told you I couldn't. I told you——"

"Do you mean that you owe somebody some money?" Marna asked.

"Yes."

"Can you tell me what it is for?"

"No."

"How much is it, Biddy?"

"Oh, a dreadful lot—I'm afraid to tell you!"

Marna felt as if she were dreaming; she could not imagine that Biddy could owe money to anyone. Everything was always paid for her, and she had never once exceeded her pocket-money. With an effort she controlled herself.

"Is it five pounds, Biddy?" she asked.

"It's more."

"Ten, then?"

No answer, but the Little Flapper's head sank lower till her face was hidden.

"Twenty, Biddy?" But even though she asked the question, Marna could have laughed. What could Biddy want with twenty pounds? To whom could she possibly owe such a sum?

"It's forty," the Little Flapper whispered.

There was a blank silence, then Marna said faintly:

"Forty pounds! Oh, Biddy, what have you been doing?"

"I can't tell you."

Marna pushed the hair back from her forehead with a little bewildered gesture.

Forty pounds! She sought in vain for some likely explanation of the mystery.

Could it be clothes? But Biddy had everything she wanted in that way—everything she wanted in every other way as well. Then suddenly, out of the far-away past, Marna visualized the ill-tempered, much made-up woman who had been the Little Flapper's mother.

Could it be some relative who had discovered where the child was, and who was worrying her for money?

But the idea seemed absurd; besides, Biddy would have told her; Biddy was neither secretive nor deceitful.

The Little Flapper was sobbing again.

"I knew you'd be angry. I knew you'd think I'd done something dreadful."

"I don't think anything of the sort, Biddy darling," Marna said rather painfully. She felt hurt. Biddy's love was almost more to her than anything in the world, and this seemed to have built a sort of barricade between them, to have spoilt the happy understanding that had always existed.

"I don't think anything of the sort," she said again. "If you feel you can't tell me, I'm content to trust you and not ask. But if you cry so you'll be ill again. Biddy, stop crying."

"I wish I could be ill. I wish I could die!" Biddy sobbed. She was upset and almost hysterical, and it was only with great difficulty that Marna succeeded in soothing her.

"And you love me just the same? It hasn't altered anything?" Biddy implored over and over again.

"Of course not. It's just the same—everything!" Marna promised.

And at last the Little Flapper fell asleep, her face all flushed and wet with tears.

Marna sat with her for some time, her thoughts troubled, her heart full of dismay.

What could have happened? What could be the explanation?

"I haven't brought her up as I ought to have done," she upbraided herself. "I've been selfish. I've left her too much; I've thought too much of myself. After all, she's young; she's got all her life before her, and mine—what does mine matter, after all?"

She heard her husband's voice downstairs, and she tip-toed out of the room, closing the door softly behind her.

It was quite dusk, and the sunset had faded.

Paget stood at the foot of the staircase, his handsome face all smiles.

"So there you are! Thought you'd run away and left me," he said cheerily. "Been callin'! Didn't you hear me?"

"No. I was with Biddy. George, I don't think she's so well today."

"Pooh! Your imagination. Let me see her."

"She's asleep."

Marna went down to him, and he put an arm round her.

"She's in trouble about something, George."

Paget did not take it seriously.

"In love," he said lightly. "That won't hurt her. She'll be in love dozens of times before she finds the right chap—eh, what?"

Marna's heart contracted.

"There's nobody she can be in love with," she said rather breathlessly.

Her husband laughed.

"There's Hugh," he said. "I've always had my own ideas, don'tcher-know!" He drew his wife into the drawing-room. "Don't you worry your little head about it, anyway," he said fondly.

"But I must. She belongs to me. Of course I must worry."

Paget frowned. There were still times when he was acutely jealous of the Little Flapper.

"Well, we can't bring Hubbard back," he said rather shortly.

"No." There was a little catch in Marna's voice. Bring him back! If only such a miracle were possible!

"And you're as thin as a shadow," George went on. "You've done too much for Biddy since she's been ill. Ought to have had a nurse. You'll be ill next. Mrs. Blair was only sayin' last night——"

Marna interrupted impatiently.

"Mrs. Blair imagines things. I'm quite all right."

"Mrs. Blair's a jolly sensible woman," Paget declared. He bent and kissed his wife. "Love me?" he asked.

"Of course." But Marna's voice was absent, and he sighed.

Voice of the People

THE ROUYN SMOKE STACK.

Editor Examiner:

Your issue of the 12th instant contained an article in which it was stated that two observers in an air plane 5000 feet high when flying from Port Hope to Peterborough saw a smoke stack at Rouyn, Quebec, 340 miles distant. Either the seeing was imaginary or the figures given are incorrect as for two reasons it would be quite impossible from an elevation of 5000 feet to see any such object at a distance of 340 miles.

The first reason is because of the curve of the earth's surface. Altitudes are usually measured from sea level. The sea level surface of the earth may, for all practical purposes, be taken as the surface of a sphere of 4000 miles radius. This plane was said to have been 5000 feet high. To keep figures in even miles, instead of the more cumbersome feet, give the plane the benefit of an extra 280 feet of height thus making it one mile above sea level or 4001 miles from the centre of the earth. Now from the relations of the sides of right angle triangles it is quite simple to calculate that the top of any object 340 miles distant would have to be about 7.8 miles above sea level in order to be seen from plane provided that the earth's surface between the plane and the object where the line of sight is tangent to it be at sea level. Now, of course, this surface is not at sea level but some hundreds of feet higher. Therefore the object would have to be considerably higher than the calculated 7.8 miles above sea level to allow of its being seen from the plane. Now I have not at present available the exact elevation of Rouyn above sea level but the Dominion Geological Survey Maps show all that district as being between 100 and 1000 feet above sea level. Even Mount Everest, the highest point on the earth's surface is barely 5½ miles above sea level. Hence, even if Rouyn were as high as Mount Everest a chimney to be seen from a plane one mile high at a distance of 340 miles would have to be 2½ miles or more in height. Owing to the varying density of the air as one rises above the earth's surface refraction of light would tend to make a distant object show enough difference to allow of the object being seen in the case under discussion. Hence under the conditions given it was clearly impossible to see the smoke stack as it was miles below the horizon.

The second reason why the smoke stack could not be seen at the distance given is that, even if the curvature of the earth did not interfere, the object is far too small to be seen by the unaided human eye at such a distance. The diameter of a long narrow object such as a smoke stack must substend an angle at the eye of at least 10 seconds of arc in order to be seen under the most favorable conditions. This means that the diameter must be at least the distance divided by 20622. Hence for a distance of 340 miles the diameter of the smoke stack must be at least 89 feet in order that it may be seen under the best conditions by the naked eye. No smoke stack is anything like such a size and hence under the conditions given the one at Rouyn could not possibly be seen.

Clearly there is something wrong, somewhere, with your story.

I am, Yours truly,

AN ENGINEER.

Why We Do What We Do.

WHY SUGGESTION IS EFFECTIVE.

(By Mehran K. Thomson, Ph.D.)

Here is an interesting experiment that has been repeated successfully a number of times. Five or six people conspire to make a friend sick by pure suggestion. The first man who meets the unsuspecting victim says "Hello Jim," and adds with a slightly surprised expression, "What is the trouble? You don't look well to-day." Jim laughs this one off. But when the second and third and fourth and fifth persons he meets throw out some hint about his looking pale and sickly the idea takes full possession of him and before he realizes it he acts as if he were sick. In one of these experiments the victim actually went to bed and sent for a doctor.

A physician reports that while he was getting ready to administer gas to a patient, somehow the patient got the idea that the gas was already applied and lost consciousness. As a matter of fact the doctor had administered nothing but suggestion.

The power of suggestion is well known. All advertising makes practical use of it and turns it into money. The secret is simple. Present an idea as attractively as possible and the activity of this idea in the mind will do the rest.

Sometimes a single idea will get lodged so firmly in the mind that nothing will turn it out and the patient is taken to an insane asylum suffering from an obsession. We have milder forms of it occasionally when a silly rhyme or a joke keeps running through our minds and we can't shake it for the longest time—it may be for days.

Parents and teachers often do a great deal of harm by suggesting to a boy that he is bad, that he is hopelessly inferior. The boy is likely to accept this as a true estimate of his character and act up to expectations because his mind is occupied with the suggested idea. The wise teacher and parent will make the opposite suggestion.

Uncle Wiggily

A Bed-Time Story by Howard R. Garis

UNCLE WIGGILY AND POKEY HOKEY.

(Copyright, 1929, by McClure Newspaper Syndicate.)

Do you remember how I told you, in the story last night, about Uncle Wiggily bringing home to his bungalow what he thought was a cold, black stone that wanted to get warm? Yes, of course, you remember. And when Uncle Wiggily left the stone where Nurse Jane was baking a clover pie, all of a sudden the muskrat lady housekeeper called the rabbit gentleman to come and look at the stone crawling around her kitchen.

"I don't see how a stone could come to life," said Uncle Wiggily to himself as he hopped to the kitchen. He saw Nurse Jane pointing with one paw toward a corner and there, surely enough was something moving.

"What is it?" asked the rabbit gentleman.

"Can't you see?" cried Nurse Jane. "It's that cold stone you brought home to get warm. Look at it!"

"I can't see very well without my glasses," spoke Uncle Wiggily.

"I'll get your Sunday glasses up in your room," offered Miss Fuzzy Wuzzy, and when she had brought them and when Uncle Wiggily had put them on, he could see better. For you know he had sneezed and broken his weekday glasses when he found the cold stone, as he thought it was.

"Why, it's a mud turtle!" shouted Uncle Wiggily.

"Now can you see it crawling around; can't you?" asked Nurse Jane.

"Surely," answered Mr. Longears, hopping closer. "But this is the first time I ever saw a stone come to life."

"And it's the first time I ever heard one talk!" squeaked Nurse Jane, for just before that, the round, black thing had said: "Oh, dear! How cold I was out in the snow!"

"It is a very queer stone!" said Miss Fuzzy Wuzzy.

"Ho! I'm not a stone!" suddenly said the voice of the round, black crawling object.

"Who are you, then?" asked the rabbit.

"I am Pokey Hokey!" was the answer.

"What in the world is a Pokey Hokey?" exclaimed Nurse Jane.

"Why, it's a mud turtle!" shouted Uncle Wiggily who, having by this time put on his Sunday glasses, could see more plainly. And he saw what he had thought was a round, black stone was the rough, upper shell of the turtle. And since the turtle had his legs and tail drawn in between his upper and lower shells and since he was all cuddled up, he looked just like a stone.

"Dear me!" squeaked Nurse Jane. "Why did you pretend to be a stone and why do you call yourself Pokey Hokey, Mr. Turtle?"

"I didn't say I was a stone," slowly spoke the turtle. "I just said: 'Oh, dear! How cold I am!' It was Uncle Wiggily who thought I was a stone."

"That's right," said the rabbit, "so I did, without my glasses on."

"You see," said Pokey Hokey, "I should have done as the other turtles did when cold weather came—I should have buried myself in the deep mud in the bottom of a pond. But I was foolish, so I stayed up on top and then, when winter came, the mud was so frozen I couldn't wiggle myself into it. I have been crawling about ever since, trying to find a warm place to stay for the winter. It was then Uncle Wiggily found me and I am very glad."

"I am very glad, too," said the rabbit gentleman, "and you are welcome to stay in my bungalow all winter, under the stove."

"Of course," said Nurse Jane. "But I certainly was surprised, as I baked the clover pie, to see that stone come to life and watch him crawl around. He crawled over my tail."

"I certainly beg your pardon," said Pokey Hokey slowly. "You see, when Uncle Wiggily first picked me up I was stiff with the cold and could not move any more than a stone. But the warm stove limbered me up and I began to crawl. Of course, I can't crawl very fast. In fact, like most turtles, I am very slow and pokey. That is why I am called Pokey Hokey. You see my last name is Hokey and my first name is Pokey."

"I think it's a very nice name," said Miss Fuzzy Wuzzy, and she gave Mr. Pokey Hokey a piece of clover pie.

"Oh, that is good!" said the turtle. "And may I stay in your bungalow all winter, Mr. Longears?"

"Why, surely!" answered the rabbit. "You will be more welcome!"

So that is what happened. Nurse Jane liked Mr. Pokey Hokey very much after she got used to seeing him crawl around, though often, when she had company, they would be surprised at seeing what they thought was a black stone coming to life. And once, when the Fox tried to get in the bungalow at night to catch Uncle Wiggily, Mr. Pokey Hokey bit the Bad Chap on his paw and made him jump back out of the window.

FENELLA, Jan. 14.— Mr. Martin Gearin, who suffered a stroke a few days ago and his sister, Miss Mary Ann Gearin, who has been an invalid for a number of years, were removed by ambulance to St. Joseph's Hospital, Peterborough, on Tuesday.

Mrs. Cephas Harper is in Plainville at the home of her daughter, Mrs. John Linton, who has been very ill with the flu.

BROADCASTING STATIONS IN ORDER OF WAVES

ANSWERING the demand of readers of The Examiner for more information regarding the new wave lengths of broadcasting stations now in effect, the Radio Department of this newspaper presents below a radio log listing principal American, Canadian, Cuban and Mexican stations, arranged in order of wave length in meters and frequency in kilocycles.

To-day's log will be found extremely convenient in calibrating the dials of your receiver, or, in other words, in learning how many kilocycles or meters the various points on your dials represent. After filling in the dial settings for the various local stations and strong distant ones on the dotted lines provided beneath their wave lengths, you will see that these settings proceed in a definite numerical order.

Now, say you find KYW-KFKX at 28, and KDKA, Pittsburgh, at 32. Stations with waves between those two stations' waves should come in on your receiver between 28 and 32. Carrying this scheme out, you will find it helpful in locating almost any station you desire to hear.

Another application is in identifying a distant station. You may hear the call letters faintly, but not clearly enough to be sure. Referring to your dial setting, find the wave that most closely corresponds. Look at the list under this wave and see if there is a call that checks with what you thought you heard. The log will be found to have many other useful applications.

LONG SLEEP MAKES BABY HAPPY AGAIN

"Our baby kept waking us several times a night, until we started giving him a little Castoria after his last nursing," says an Iowa mother. "He slept soundly from the first night and it made him look and feel worlds better." Baby specialists endorse Fletcher's Castoria; and millions of mothers know how this purely-vegetable, harmless preparation helps babies and children with colic, constipation, colds, diarrhea, etc. The Fletcher signature is always on the wrapper of genuine Castoria. Avoid imitations.

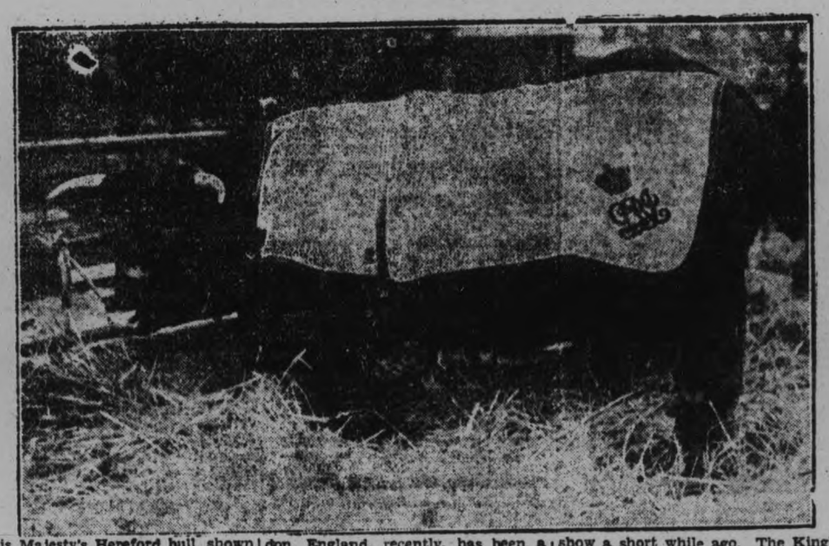
ROYAL PRIZE-WINNER



His Majesty's Hereford bull, shown at the great Smithfield cattle show, held in the Agricultural Hall, London, England, recently, has been a first prize winner in many exhibitions, including the Birmingham show a short while ago. The King's cattle were present in number at the Smithfield show, and as usual attracted much attention.

VEXED QUESTION IS BEING SOLVED

Settlement Is Now In Hands of the Pope and Premier of Italy.

ROME, January 15 (Canadian Press). — It appears that the vexed Roman question is really about to be solved. There is no doubt that negotiators, who worked with full knowledge of the Holy See and the Italian Government if without full authority, have reached an agreement on territorial as well as financial conditions. The question is now in the hands of the Pope and Premier to accept these conclusions and decide the time and means of carrying them out.

The agreement is based on the cession by Italy to the Holy See of a small extension of territory lying south-east of the Vatican Gardens, including the villas of Bamelsck and Doria-Pamphil with extra-territorial rights.

There would also be payment of an indemnity of one billion lira gold, which at the present rate of exchange amounts to about $52,631,60). This would compensate for church properties taken by the Italian Government in 1870 by annexation of the papal states.

Eighty-second Annual Meeting Canada Life Assurance Co.

Mr. Leighton McCarthy, President, Makes Annual Address

GENERAL BUSINESS REVIEW

Canada, speaking generally, records for 1928, in all branches of business another bountiful and prosperous year, and that business is on a sound foundation. Banks, Trust Companies, Loan Companies and the like, all appear to have had a most successful year, and to be in excellent condition. Deposits have again increased; the requirements of industry by way of commercial loans are larger; assets have grown substantially, and profits in due proportion have followed; all the result of increased activity in industry, manufacturing, agriculture and mineral development.

FOREIGN TRADE

The foreign trade of the Dominion has this year, for the first time, exceeded in value that of 1921, when prices were at their peak, and in quantity far exceeds any previous year. It is estimated that the total exports for the twelve months will be $1,878,000,000, which includes $23,000,000 worth of foreign goods re-exported, and our total imports, including those for re-export, $1,210,000,000; thus leaving a favorable balance of approximately $163,000,000.

HYDRO ELECTRIC DEVELOPMENT

Hydro Electric power continues to be increasingly developed, now amounting to between five and six million horsepower, constituting an investment of probably $1,000,000,000. If one reflects for a moment as to what would be the equivalent in ton of coal required per day to produce continuously 5,300,000 horsepower, he would have some idea of what our waterpower development means to us; yet there is still, we are informed by the Government Department, 30,000,000 horsepower awaiting development.

AGRICULTURE

The Agriculturist has again had most bountiful crops—the largest in the history of the country. Our farmers, particularly those in the Western Provinces, will reap a just and gratifying reward for their labours, and will continue to reduce their obligations. It is to be regretted that the grade has been reduced by reason of an early frost, which did considerable damage in many localities, but nevertheless, the money value of all field crops in Canada for the year 1928 is estimated to be $1,051,043,000.

The marketing of these tremendous crops has been, so far as the Western Provinces are concerned, greatly facilitated by what is known as the "Wheat Pool." The grain growers of the Prairie Provinces have entered the realm of Big Business. They have realized that greater efficiency is procured by merger and combine, and have thereby revolutionized the marketing of grain and stabilized that market. This year they have operated a line of about nine hundred and fifty elevators, with a joint capacity of about 33,000,000 bushels. In handling the 1928 crop, they have had upwards of thirteen hundred country elevators in operation. They have terminals at Fort William, Port Arthur, Vancouver, Prince Rupert and Buffalo, with a combined storage capacity of something like 33,000,000 bushels, and this year have done a business of approximately $1,000,000 a day turnover for each working day in the year. These facilities, created in addition to the already large plants owned and operated by the independent operators, have enabled Transportation Companies to market the enormous crops of this year with astounding rapidity, and with consequent material advantage to the grain growers of the country.

It is to be hoped that mixed farming will continue to grow, and that the dairy and poultry products will continue to increase, to the end that the farmer will have a more diversified source of income.

MINERAL DEVELOPMENT.

The output of our Mineral Development is an increasingly large item in Canada's trade, both foreign and domestic, and this year exceeds $270,000,000. Its permanence now seems reasonably well assured. Canada supplies 85 per cent. of the world's nickel and asbestos, and 55 per cent. of the world's cobalt, and stands third in the production of gold.

PULP AND PAPER INDUSTRY

It is to be regretted that over-production, with resultant competition and price cutting, has checked the prosperity of the newsprint industry, which had grown to be such a substantial portion of our export trade, having increased from $120 in 1890 to $133,122,000 in 1928. However, there is no occasion for surprise at a situation which always arises when supply outruns demand. The industry is apparently firmly established, and its permanence assured.

MOTOR INDUSTRY

The Motor Industry has reached large proportions. Some years ago a possible saturation point was suggested, but, having regard to the continued demand, such views would seem to need revision!

BUILDING

Building under construction and permits to build so far exceed the previous year as to ensure substantial employment of labour, as well as activity in the manufacture and sale of builders' supplies.

RAILWAYS

In 1923, the lines of Railway now under the National System had a net operating deficit of $32,000,000. In eleven months of 1928, they showed a net operating surplus of $53,549,291, which assures that they will pay the interest on all outstanding securities held by the public, and in addition leave a substantial surplus! The great private Railway Corporation tells the same story of increased earnings; in fact, the greatest in its history. It was but the other day that pessimists in high places declared that the National Railways would bankrupt the country!

STABILIZATION OF WESTERN PROVINCES

The Western Prairie Provinces have been markedly stabilized during recent months by our larger industrial and commercial enterprises establishing themselves at various strategic points throughout Manitoba, Saskatchewan and Alberta. This has resulted in large buildings and plants being erected and constructed in the cities and larger towns of those provinces, from which the business of these various enterprises will be carried on and goods, wares and merchandise manufactured or assembled and distributed. These provinces are also about to find a greatly increased industrial growth by reason of the mineral development which promises to be, more or less, a repetition of what Ontario and Quebec have experienced. All three of these provinces have that same Pre-Cambrian Shield, which has been so profitable to Ontario and Quebec. In addition, the Province of Alberta has her coal, salt and tar deposits. These features, taken with the stupendous production of cereals, have had a wonderfully stabilizing effect upon the business and the citizens of these provinces. Enthusiasm has returned; production has increased, and their obligations have been substantially decreased.

Further, The Hudson's Bay Railway is being eagerly anticipated as another outlet for their commerce, and the route via Vancouver is being more and more used.

British Columbia, potentially probably the most favored of our Federated Provinces, is full of enthusiasm and optimism, particularly with reference to the development of Vancouver's terminal and harbor facilities. Shipping has increased as the use of the Panama Canal develops, and as Japan and China take more of what we produce. It is hard to realize the dimensions to which this trade may grow.

IMMIGRATION AND COLONIZATION

Looking west from Winnipeg, it is not difficult to visualize in the near future a vaster and greater Canada than even the most optimistic of us could have anticipated. Its great need of the moment is men and women. Much has been done; much has been written and said with reference to immigration and colonization. This effort appears to be about to bear fruit, for it is my belief that the stream of emigration is headed for Canada, and that people of a most desirable kind will speedily seek our shores in numbers—as many as can be conveniently and effectively assimilated.

MAGNITUDE OF LIFE INSURANCE BUSINESS

With the magnificent advancement in all other businesses, Life Insurance has kept pace. It is estimated that the amount of Life Insurance in force on this continent has now reached the huge total of $90,000,000,000, there having been written in Canada and the United States in the year 1928 about $19,000,000,000, requiring premium payments of about $440,000,000. The amount held in reserve for these policyholders is approximately $14,500,000,000. These funds so held are used for the common weal, in that they find their way back, through investments in food production, transportation and in general public works everywhere. The Life Insurance business gains momentum each year, but is still far from the ultimate goal, as it is estimated that our people are still using less than 2½ per cent. of their annual income with which to purchase Life Insurance.

CANADA LIFE PROGRESS

For our own Company, the past year has been exceedingly satisfactory. Our associates in the field have, with enthusiastic zeal, unremitting energy and well-directed effort, exceeded the objective fixed by the General Manager, and have paid for $166,690,568 of new assurances. This exceeds the previous year by $20,198,587, and is an indication of the true worth, ability and energy of those who claim the confidence of the public as your representatives. The result of the year's work is to increase our business in force to the sum of $861,726,541, an increase for the year of $111,744,359! Beyond saying it is most gratifying and satisfactory, I leave it to the General Manager to speak more particularly with reference to the splendid contribution to our year's business, and our appreciation of the good work done by our Field Forces in Great Britain, Ireland, the United States, Hawaii and Canada.

We are again able to report a favorable mortality, indicating a wise selection of lives, and also satisfactory earnings from our carefully selected Investment Securities, resulting in an earned surplus of $5,605,772.05. This is the largest surplus earned in the Company's history, extending over eighty-one years, and not only insures the continuance of our bonuses and dividends to policyholders and shareholders upon the present scale, but enables us to place in reserve what is considered amply sufficient to meet any unforeseen contingency. It is worthy of most emphatic note that we have been able to achieve this remarkable surplus, while accepting $166,000,000 of new assurances. This experience is unique and must greatly increase the already strong confidence of the public in our Institution.

INVESTMENTS

One of the most important features in the success of a Life Insurance Company is the character of the securities in which its funds are placed, and the net rate of interest they yield. I am able to say, with confidence, that the investments of the Canada Life are second to those of no other Institution, and that combined with this great safety is a most gratifying interest return. These investments have been rigidly scrutinized by a thoroughly experienced committee of the Board, and are presented with confidence for your approval.

Mr. L. R. Young, who, on the resignation of Mr. Saunders, was promoted to the position of Treasurer, reports our Assets as now totalling the sum of $157,069,484.91, an increase of $16,488,807.29 for the year. The average rate of yield of 6.02 per cent. is gratifying.

As the yields upon Government and Municipal securities have declined, we have continued to extend our purchasing of bonds into the public utility and industrial field, showing a distinct preference for Power and Light securities, which industry is growing as previously referred to. We still continue to hold a very large proportion of Government, Government Guaranteed, Provincial and Municipal bonds, perhaps to an extent greater than is the practice of most of the larger Life Insurance Companies.

The enlarged investment powers granted to Life Insurance Companies licensed in the State of New York have opened up a source of investment in the form of preferred stocks of Companies whose earnings comply with the strict requirements of that State, and we have taken advantage of this by careful selection, with pleasing interest returns.

Our mortgage investments now total over $50,000,000, and through improved agricultural conditions are in a splendid state of liquidity, and contribute largely to the satisfactory earning power of our Company.

NEW HEAD OFFICE SITE

Our growth forced your Directors to consider the question of future accommodation for our ever-increasing Head Office staff. We have overflowed our present Head Office building, now occupying space in four other buildings, three of which we own. Your Directors believe that it is not economically wise or necessary for an Insurance Company to occupy such a valuable site and position as they believe this site to be. They therefore decided to procure another less expensive site, and yet one well adapted to all the requirements of a successful and growing Life Insurance Company. It is my pleasure to report that we have purchased a block of sufficient dimensions for our future requirements on the north side of Queen Street, bounded on the west by Simcoe Street and on the east by University Avenue, upon which we hope to erect a Head Office building as soon as it is practicable to do so.

During the year, your Directors were much distressed by the death of their colleagues, Mr. Kenneth Mackenzie, of Winnipeg, and Mr. Robert Bickerdike, of Montreal, both of whom had, for upwards of seventeen years, been most valuable and helpful members of the Board, and each of whose business connections and experience were of great value to us. The vacancy caused by Mr. Mackenzie's death was filled by the election of Mr. T. G. McConkey. His promotion came as a recognition of his splendid equipment and his place in insurance and in the belief that in this capacity he will be better able to serve the interests of the Company.

In June last, Mr. Herbert C. Cox, who ably presided over the destinies of this Company for the preceding fourteen most notable years of its existence, intimated that he desired to be relieved from the cares and responsibilities of office, and tendered his resignation, which was regretfully accepted by the Board. However, at the earnest solicitation of the Directors, I am delighted to report that Mr. Cox consented to continue to give us the benefit of his valuable experience and ability, and retain his connection with the Company as a Director, and became Chairman of the Board.

In accepting the responsible executive position to which your Directors did me the very great honor of electing me, I was and will continue to be deeply conscious of the high traditions which must be supported in the guidance of this great Institution. To perpetuate the time-honored policies of my distinguished predecessors will be my endeavor, at the same time realizing that a steadily developing Company demands a continually broadening vision. The tempering of conservatism with a sane and safe liberalism will, I am sure, compel general approval.

Since I became President, I have, accompanied by the General Manager, visited and met the Managers and producers of Great Britain and Ireland, Manitoba, North Alberta, South Alberta, North Saskatchewan, South Saskatchewan, British Columbia, London, Windsor, Central Ontario, Eastern Ontario, Toronto City, Quebec, West Pennsylvania, North Ohio, Detroit, East Michigan and West Michigan. It gives me much gratification and pleasure to report that we found at all these places enthusiasm and an esprit de corps and loyalty to this great Institution which have been among its most valued assets in the past, and the maintenance of which means so much for the future. It is my hope and my intention, as soon as it is practically possible, to visit the remaining branches of the Company.

Chicago Corn Soars After Early Downturns

CHICAGO, Ills., Jan. 15 (Canadian Press).—Fresh strength developed here in corn values to-day after early downturns. A wave of extreme heat intensifying drought damage was reported as sweeping over Argentina and Buenos Aires, quotations on corn were sharply higher. Opening unchanged to ½ off, Chicago corn prices later showed gains all around. Wheat, affected by Liverpool weakness, started ½ to 1c lower, and afterwards displayed but little power to rally. Oats also were easier, and provisions likewise inclined downward.

News From the Mines

Through Sollowsy, Mills & Company

PIONEER.

The new test mill being erected by Pioneer Mining Corporation at its Michipicoten property should be completed by the middle of February; it is being built for the purpose of testing their ore zone which is more than 80 feet wide. High grade gold ore shoots are found in different places However, the zone contains the entire width of commercial value, the enterprise will probably develop into a fairly large sized mine.

WRIGHT HARGREAVES.

According to advices yesterday morning, the directors of Wright-Hargreaves have decided to forgo the distribution of the dividend for the first quarter of this year. However, this has reference only to the disbursement usually made on February 1st, and does not necessarily imply that the remaining quarterly dividends will not be disbursed this year. The president states in part that owing to having encountered considerable low grade ore during a goodly portion of 1928, the company's earnings were not sufficient to meet the dividend, and the desirability of maintaining the present strong financial position of the company in order that it may pursue a vigorous development policy was the unanimous opinion of the directors.

MOND NICKEL.

Work at the 3,100 foot level of the Frood Extension continues to reveal enormous tonnages of ore. To date, close to three-quarters of a million tons have been put in sight at this horizon, which will give a total average value of $118 per ton. A corresponding situation is found at the 2,800 foot horizon.

INTERNATIONAL NICKEL.

Crosscutting at the 1,600 and 2,400 foot levels of the Frood is rapidly approaching the ore body encountered by diamond drilling. It was reported some time ago that these crosscuts had already intersected the ore, but it now transpires the favorable horizon has not yet been reached. However, some mineralization was penetrated a few days ago.

LAKE SHORE.

We are informed that one additional tube mill, one additional ball mill, and one classifer have arrvied at the Lake Shore Mines and are now awaiting installation. These new additions when completed should bring daily tonnage up to 1,500. The Lake Shore ore zone does not differ materially from that of Teck, only in so far as that it is more than 2,000 feet long. The new shaft is down to a depth of 1,700 feet.

TECK-HUGHES.

At the present time mill supply at Teck is coming from the 15th and 16th levels. Their main vein at the 15th level is 25 feet wide and over a length of 800 feet will grade $25 a ton. While the width on the 16th level is slightly less, the length and grade does not differ from the 15th. The 17th level now being opened up shows a lesser grade than the two above, but that on the 18th goes back to $25 again, and on the 19th, which is probably the best yet found in the mine, gives very high values over 50 feet. The mill is averaging 900 tons daily with heads averaging from $18 to $20.

STANDARD MINE MARKET FIRMER

Medium-Priced Issues Register Gains in Heavy Trading.

TORONTO, Ont., Jan. 15 (Canadian Press).—With trading confined to a fairly narrow list, the market on the Standard Stock and Mining Exchange this morning assumed a strong appearance. The medium-priced issues came in for their share of the transactions and help up well. Noranda recovered its loss of yesterday, and at 63.75 was 1.35 higher. Grandview continued its popularity and in heavy trading soared 13 points to 93.

Amulet was sold freely and weakened to 3.27 for a net loss of three points, while Malartic at 1.01 was nine cents lower. McIntyre was off 25 to 23.00, Teck Hughes 10 to 9.15, and Vipond 2 to 1.09.

There was good buying in Western Canadian issues Big Missouri held at the peak of 1.82 for a net gain of 22 cents, while Kootenay-Florence was unchanged at 28. Central Manitoba weakened two cents to 70. Hudson Bay at 20.25 was up 25, and Pend Oreille at 53.50, up 25, while Sherrit-Gordon was firm at 6.95.

INDUSTRIAL ISSUES SAG

Marking Up of Call Money Rate Checks Promising Rally.

NEW YORK MARKET BRISK.

NEW YORK, N.Y., Jan. 15.—Marking up of the call money rate from 7 to 8 per cent. checked a promising rally in to-day's stock market in which about a score of issues were elevated to new high levels. Early gains ran from 3 to 8 points but these were cut down in the wave of selling which swept over the market in the early afternoon, and several of the industrial favorites sagged 1 to 3 points below yesterday's final quotations.

With high grade securities yielding less than 5 per cent. in many cases, operators for the advance found it difficult to attract margin speculators who were willing to pay carrying charges of 3 per cent. or more above the income return in the hope of making it up through capital appreciation.

There was a fairly brisk demand for the communications share, with indications of investment trust buying. American Telephone, International Telephone, Pacific Telephone and Western Union sold 3 to 5½ points above yesterday's final quotations. Some of the other public utilities also received good support. Commonwealth Power running up to a new high record.

Among the many issues to sell at their best prices since 1927 or longer, were Air Reduction, White Motors and Chile Copper.

Wright Aeronautical extended its loss to 8 points, wiping out half of yesterday's gain, and Packard and American car each sold down 2 points or more.

SHUT-DOWN IS TEMPORARY

President of Paper Company Believes Mills Will Soon Be Operating Again.

DEPARTMENT ACTIVE

SUDBURY, Ontt., Jan. 15. —(Canadian Press). — The shut down of the Espanola and Sault Ste. Marie mills of the Abitibi Power and Paper Company announced Saturday will be only temporary. G. R. Gray, vice-president of the Company stated to-day, when interviewed by long distance telephone at Sault St. Marie.

The present situation would be remedied, and the mills would resume operations as soon as negotiations now in progress between the paper companies and the Governments of Ontario and Quebec to operate their plants at approximately 880 per cent. capacity were, concluded, Mr. Gray believed.

The Espanola mill is completely idle to-day, the last machine having been closed Saturday. At Sault Ste. Marie, one machine is running and two have suspended operations. At the Sturgeon Falls Mill production is being confined to one sulphate machine and one paper machine.

A shortage of orders for newsprint is the reason for the suspension.

Mr. Gray said he had heard nothing of a formal protest being made against the shut down by the papermakers' Union. He did not think there would be much more hardship among the workers than there had already been; as the mills would resume operations within a short time.

Besides the mill employees, workers on the Algoma Eastern Railway, which automatically loses 175 tons of freight daily are likely to be thrown out of work. Railway officials declined to say whether closing the mill will result in curtailment of the railway services.

Department Active.

TORONTO, Ont., Jan. 15. — Hon. William Finlayson, Minister of Lands and Forests, who has been inquiring into the cessation of operations at the at Espanola would be operating Espanola and Sault Ste. Marie mills of the Abitibi Power and Paper Company stated to-day he hoped the mill at Espanola would be operating again in a day or so.

It was pointed out the Espanola mill is in somewhat of a unique position as the town is a "Company town" whereas in any other muncipality the government would have control through the usual agreement between the municipality and Company, which generally provides for continuous operation. The agreement in the present case is indirect, the Minister stated. It iis difficult to determine the exact status of the situation at the moment. "You may be sure however, the Department will exercise every effort to keep the mill going," he said.

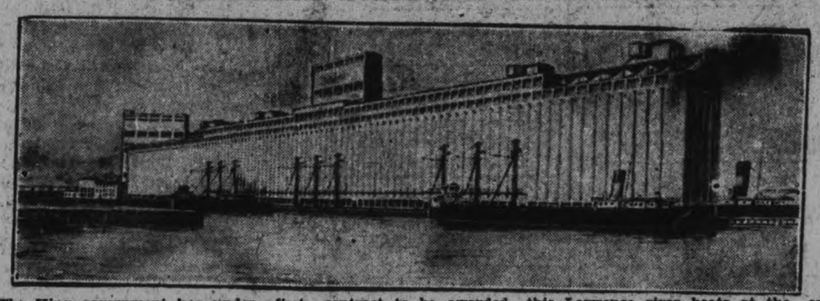
The fact that the mapority of leaders in the newsprint industry are at present conferring in New York makes it difficult for the Ontario Government to deal with the various companies. It is intimated that failure of the mill to resume operations within a few days will meet with vigorous action by the Department.

Kitchener Family Has Narrow Escape

KITCHENER, Ont., Jan. 15.—(Canadian Press).—When the chimney pipe parted during the night, filling the house with coal gas, five people in the home of H. Craddick, were nearly asphyxiated last night. Mr. Craddick was awakened by the children coughing. He staggered to the kitchen door and threw it open before collapsing. Later he revived and phoned for help.

His wife, brother and two children were all unconscious but will recover.

GOVERNMENT WILL ERECT GRAIN ELEVATOR



The King government has undertaken to erect a huge grain elevator two and one-half miles from Prescott. This structure will cost $4,000,000, the first contract to be awarded this month. The elevator will be able to unload up-lake vessels at the rate of 1,000,000 bushels daily and load St. Lawrence river boats at the same speed. In times of congestion, railway cars can be loaded on four tracks at the same time.

NICKEL LEADS ACTIVE SESSION

Prominent Issues Rise To Higher Levels On Toronto Exchange.

INDUSTRIALS SOAR.

TORONTO, Ont., Jan. 15 (Canadian Press).—The market on the Toronto Stock Exchange this morning assumed a bright aspect. The majority of the better-known issues enjoyed generous trading and prices on the whole sought higher levels. International Nickel occupied the spotlight in the trading and after reaching 56, dropped sharply at noon to 54¼ for a loss of ¼ point.

Tip-Top Tailors was an outstanding feature and in a busy session climbed 1½ points to 41, and Canadian Dredging continued to move into new territory advancing an additional 2¼ points to 75. Both Brazilian issues pushed ahead in heavy trading, the common soaring 2¼ points to 78¾, and the rights 10 cents to 5.10.

The industrial group which was well patronized, prospered under the heavy barrage of buying. Massey-Harris moved up 2 points to 94. Waterloo held firm at 39, while Cockshutt Plow which led the group from the point of activity climbed to 47 for a net increase of 1½. Page-Hersey, although not so prominent in activity, steadily continued to rise and at noon was 2 points higher at 134.

The oil section, on the whole, proved a bright, strong spot, with Imperial gaining 2 to 100, International Petroleum 1 to 57½, Sprucolite, 4 to 48, and British American ¾ to 54. Super-Test retained its advances of yesterday and firmed at 38, unchanged.

Jackson Park Creek Again Presents A Problem To City Engineer Parsons

Jackson Park Creek, running angle-wise through the main part of the city, again presents a problem to the City Engineer's Department, in that during the past week or more, the formation of anchor ice on the creek bed has been the cause of several ice blockades, the clearing of which required the exploding of at least one stick of dynamite near where the creek crosses Aylmer Street.

S. R. Parsons, City Engineer, in discussing the trouble this morning stated that unless the anchor ice disappears before spring, serious trouble might be expected, since at the present time the flow of water is not sufficient to keep the creek bed clear. Some of the present trouble, it is understood, is located on private property, so that the Engineer's Department has also to contend with trouble on this account.

FIVE SEATS ARE VACANT

By-election Contests in Old Country Are Being Stubbornly Contested.

WOMEN EXCEED MEN.

LONDON, Jan. 15 (By George Hambleton, Staff Correspondent of the Canadian Press).—In a London borough, two English county divisions, a county of Northern Ireland, and a Scottish county, political organizations are testing their strength in preparation for the coming general elections. By-elections are to take place in all five, though only in North Midlothian has the writ been actually issued so far. In all, five active campaigning is either under way or plans are being perfected. The so-called "flapper vote" adds new complexities. In English and Scottich constituencies women voters now exceed the men.

Two constituencies present unusual feature. In Bishop Auckland, Durham, where the late Ben Spoor, Labor Leader, was elected in 1924 by 15,786 votes to 12,868 for J. Baimbridge, Liberal, Mrs. Hugh Dalton is fighting in the Labor interests. If she is elected the House of Commons will for the first time witness a husband and wife as members together, for Hugh Dalton is already Labor member for Camberwell. Bishop Auckland is in the centre of the most distressed mining area in Great Britain. The percentage of unemployment there is not greater probably than in South Wales, but its poverty is more apparent. But H. Thompson, Conservative candidate, has already opened his campaign with the declaration thhat the great political issue to be fought in the by-election is that of private enterprise as against Socialism.

In North Midlothian, vacant through the death of Sir George Hutchison, Conservative, who was elected in 1924 with a majority of 2,147 over A. B. Clarke, Labor, the first candidate of the Scottish Nationalist party, Lewis Spence, continues to press his plea for a parliament for Scotland. The party he represents has had an almost meteoric rise in Scottish politics. Its candidate for Lord Rector of Glasgow University, R. D. Cunningham Grahame, was defeated by a narrow majority by Premier Stanley Baldwin. If Spence is elected in Midlothian, the movement will be given an impetus to make it a force to be reckoned with in the coming general elections. But the prevailing opinion seems to be the fight in Midlothian lies rather between the Government and Labor.

Other by-elections are pending in Wanabeck, Northumberland; Londonderry, Northern Ireland, and South Battersea, London.

SALE OF BEER BY GLASS URGED

Labor Organization Presents Pre-Session Brief of Legislation To Government.

FAVOR OLD AGE PENSIONS.

TORONTO, Ont., Jan. 15 (Canadian Press).—Sale of beer by the glass was requested by representatives of Labor organizations affiliated with the International Trade Union movement who waited on the Ontario Government to-day to submit their annual pre-session brief of suggested legislation. The delegates congratulated the Government on its decision to bring old-age pensions into effect in the Province, and presented a wide range of recommendations approved by the Labor movement from time to time.

William Varley, Toronto, said sale by the glass was the only method which brought beer within the reach of the working man, who could not afford to buy in large quantities. Farmers were finding barley a profitable crop, since the ravages of the corn borer had become serious, he pointed out. Greater consumption of beer would help the farmer

Complaint was made that some breweries paid very low wages, in some cases less than half those paid in others.

"Either the brewers, who have a standard price for their product, are robbing the public or they must admit that cheap labor does not cut down production costs," said Mr. Varley.

Old-age pensions legislation was one of the cardinal points in the brief, said Alderman Humphrey Mitchell of Hamilton, who commended the Government for their promise of action at the coming session.

Representing the fire-fighters, Daniel Lamb urged that superannuation schemes for firemen in Ontario be made compulsory. Only Toronto, Hamilton, Ottawa, Sault Ste. Marie and Stratford had pension plans, he said.

Experienced motion picture operators ought to be given first-class licenses, even though subject to reexamination, William Coulter advocated. He also suggested that infractions of regulations be tried before a judge rather than a Government inspector.

60TH ANNUAL MEETING OF THE ROYAL BANK OF CANADA

Sir Herbert Holt, President, Makes Striking Comment on the Prosperity of the Dominion—Points Out Necessity For More Equitable Trade Relations Between the United States and Canada—Urges Greater Expansion in Export Market—Most Pressing Internal Problem of Country is the Need For More Population.

C. E. Neill, General Manager, Dealing With Growth of the Bank, States That Total of Assets Constitutes a Record For Canadian Banking—Points Out Necessity For Wise Governmental and Industrial Leadership to Ensure Continuance of Present Prosperity.

That there is no other part of the world more prosperous than Canada, was the declaration made by Sir Herbert S. Holt in his address at the annual general meeting of shareholders of the Royal Bank of Canada.

Sir Herbert reviewed the progress being made by Canada and referred particularly to the necessity of more equitable trade relations between Canada and the United States There was urgent need to extend the export trade of the country, more especially in the direction of finding new markets. The Orient, he pointed out, was deserving of increased attention. In Canada the most pressing internal problem was the need for more population.

C. E. Neill, the general manager, in his address, dealt with the growth and expansion of the bank's business the past year having been the most successful in the bank's history.

Almost all indices of Canadian production have shown a spectacular rise during the past four years. So far, Mr. Neil stated, commerce and industry have their feet on the ground and, speaking generally, the publicly owned corporations have never been in a more sound or liquid position.

President's Address.

In dealing with general business condition in Canada, Sir Herbert said:

"The basis of the exceptional prosperity during the past few years has been the great development of natural resources. New areas have been opened up for cultivation, great mining fields have been discovered; forest resources have been effectively utilized and the large scale installation of plants for the development of water power has resulted in an increase in manufacturing activity in most parts of the country. In the newsprint industry however, there has been unjustified expansion, resulting in overproduction and a consequent decline in price, entailing a loss to the industry of at least $20,000,000 a year. It is imperative that measures be taken to remedy this situation so as to bring a fair profit to the industry and to permit adequate conservation and maintenance of the forests.

"The most pressing internal problem of the country is the need for more population. If the present good times are to continue, there is need for more farmers on the soil and more men in the mines and factories in order that we shall consume a larger proportion of our own products. Without a substantial increase in immigration, we cannot hope to maintain that balance in expansion which is essential to sound prosperity. I believe, however, that at the moment it is no exaggeration to summarize the general situation by saying that there is no other part of the world more prosperous than Canada."

Dealing at length with the question of trade relationship between Canada and the United States, Sir Herbert said:

"No country imports more goods from a single market than Canada imports from that country. The value of these imports during the twelve months ending September 30, 1928, aggregate 790 million dollars, a total more than 300 million dollars in excess of Canadian sales to that market during the same period. Such an unbalanced trade relationship is injurious to the national welfare of this country.

"There is another factor in this trade relationship that is as unsatisfactory as its lack of balance. Canadian exports are largely newsprint and raw materials essential to the industries of the United States, and Canada's imports are manufactured products which increase the activities of the factories of that country at the expense of factories in Canada and at the expense of factories in other countries which are more willing to import Canadian agricultural and other products. Moreover, the high wages since the war have disproportionately increased the cost of finished manufactured products in comparison with the relatively low prices obtained for raw materials and other items not requiring much skilled labor for their manufacture. This price relationship is distinctly disadvantageous to the country which buys finished products and sells raw materials.

"In spite of the fact that the present trade relationship between the two countries is disproportionately favorable to the United States, there is active discussion of further tariff increases that seem likely to shut out the few competitive items which Canadians now sell there. It would seem that those who propose such tariff changes fail to realize that checks upon Canadian prosperity automatically check the volume of goods which can be bought from the United States, and that on the other hand continued improvement in Canadian conditions brings corresponding increases in the volume of goods which they can sell to us. From this viewpoint it might be considered economic statesmanship for the United States to discover means to increase their purchases from Canada, rather than to consider measures which will constitute new trade barriers.

"In this connection, I again desire to call your attention to the possibility of increased trade with the Orient. The stabilization of government in China is producing a situation which justifies optimism concerning the possibility of increased trade throughout that part of the world. The great need of China is for continued stability and increased buying power. If our Trade Commissioners in that part of the world are far-sighted, they will be just as earnest in seeking opportunities for Canadians to purchase goods from the Orient as they are to assist in sales. It is essential that Canadians realize the growing importance of the Pacific in world trade."

General Manager's Address.

In his address, after reviewing the bank's progress during the past year, Mr. Neill said in part:

"To our farmers, the large crops of the past four years, and particularly the record crop of 1928, have brought substantial prosperity. For several years there has been an extraordinary expansion in Canadian mining. New mineral resources have been discovered in various parts of the country, but while the mineral statistics of 1927 and 1928 show gratifying improvement over previous years, they do not reflect the potential output of the new areas which soon will be in production. We may look forward with confidence to the most important mining era in the history of the country.

"So far commerce and industry have their feet on the ground and, speaking generally, the publicly-owned corporations have never been in a more sound or liquid position. With prosperity general, and prospects never before equalled in our history, consideration should be given to measures that will tend to ensure the continuation of the sound development of Canada. Although it has long been recognized that the exercise of due restraint during a period of rapid expansion would permit continued growth uninterrupted by severe recessions, there has always been the temptation to overdiscount the future in period of prosperity. Sound judgment will recognize that Canada is now in that phase of business when the setting up of strong reserves is more far-sighted than a policy which permits expansion to be carried to a point where overproduction in industry becomes inevitable.

"Undoubtedly speculation in stocks has been carried too far, and it is the duty of the entire financial community to do everything possible to prevent further speculative excesses which, if not curbed, must inevitably lead to trouble.

"Research may discover scientific facts for the use of agriculture and industry, but such knowledge only becomes effective when applied by the farmer and the business man. In this day of larger scale enterprise, those who have the responsibility of directing the policies of our government and of our great corporations should endeavor to apply principles derived from scientific study to the solution of practical difficulties. This is no less true in finance than in industry and agriculture. Although restraint and caution are essential to prevent inflation, a policy of continuous and sound expansion is justified by the Canadian situation. A virile policy, continuously stimulated by the visions of courageous foresight, but held in check by the dictates of sound judgment, will guide the course of this expansion so that stable prosperity will become a permanent phase of Canadian economic life."

Mr. Neill commented on the success which attended the annual Economics Fellowship competition established by the bank last year. It is understood, he declared, that the number of students who will submit papers this year will be substantially in excess of the number who participated last year.

In the account of the recital given by pupils of Mrs. W. A. Greenslade at All Saints' Church on Friday evening, under the auspices of the Women's Guild of the church, the name of Miss Margaret Curtis was inadvertently omitted. Miss Curtis acted as accompanist for the Thanksgiving chorus and the final chorus of the Holiday.

ROSS RESIGNS OFFICE.

TORONTO, Ont., January 15 (Canadian Press). — George H. Ross, Finance Commissioner of Toronto for the past nine years, has resigned in order to go "back to private business."

The Commissioner's resignation was not accepted by the Board of Control at their meeting here to-day, and they will meet again to-morrow to confer on the matter.

The first typewriter, for which it was claimed that "it could print almost as fast as one could write with an ordinary pen," appeared just 100 years ago.

Canada's Best Girl

What Helen Wills and Glenna Collett Are to the States, Ethel Catherwood, World's Champion Girl High Jumper, Is to the Dominion . . . She Excels In Every Sport From Ukulele to Hockey But Her Ambition Is to Be a Pianist

Ethel Catherwood at a Canadian winter carnival. . . . She got the cup for being the most beautiful girl there.

IF sport places any strain on an athlete, the game isn't worth the struggle. Taking athletics seriously robs the game of fun, turns play into work and defeats the very purpose of sport.

In these terms Ethel Catherwood of Saskatoon, Saskatchewan, world's champion woman high jumper, explains how to enjoy reaching the pinnacle of sport in a chosen field without undergoing the gruelling grind to make the grade.

This attitude gives just one sidelight on the personality of one of the most remarkable world-beaters in present-day sport; a girl who has never known defeat; who scorns serious training and who wouldn't diet a day to accomplish her purpose; in brief a top-notcher who literally "plays" the game and plays it for the fun she gets out of it.

Ethel Catherwood is 19 years old. In August of last year she jumped five feet three inches at Amsterdam for a world's record and expects to beat her unofficial record of five feet four this winter. Next year she will attempt to better her record just for the fun she finds in soaring over the bar.

Miss Catherwood, however, does not confine her sport activities to leaping to high jump records. She is Canadian woman champion javelin thrower. Her records stands at 118 feet. She hopes to make it 130 feet, provided she can arrange to do so without too much effort. She has upon occasion hurled the discus a hundred feet and aims to better that mark.

SASKATOON looks upon its Ethel as a basketball marvel. This player has set a scoring record that has never been approached in the home town. She was a member of the Bedford road collegiate team which won two city championships in succession and, as a fitting climax, won the provincial championship.

Ethel Catherwood is popular with western hockey fans. She has taken a leading position on girls' team in Saskatoon, where she is known as a speedy skater, deft with the stick and an accurate shot.

This girl also plays a regular man-sized game of baseball. She sniffs at the "soft" variety as a "sissified spoiling of the real game"; likes to step into the box, warm up and deliver her well and unfavorably known brand of ball to the discomfiture of aspiring Babe Ruths who stand at the pan ready to lay on it . . . and fan.

The athletic world marveled at this young woman's superb showing at Amsterdam. Sport writers stretched their imaginations to find a word that might even remotely describe her loveliness. Reporters coined new flower-phrases in her honor. Photographers gladly worked overtime to get pictures and still more pictures of this enchanting beauty as she appeared at the Olympics to bow acknowledgment to the echoing plaudits of admiring hosts.

But Ethel's winning ways are not restricted to the realm of sport, or beauty of face and figure. She is possessed of a striking personality, impressing the acquaintance as at once a child and a mature woman; youth, exuberant, expressing life in terms of slang, the woman quiet of voice and unassuming of manner; the child dividing her attention between a ukulele and a pet owl; the woman passing studied judgment on marriage and "careers."

One facet of her personality implies high-speed action, the other languorous ease. They clash. But then an understanding of this girl's outlook on life and her method of approaching its problems, mental and physical, erases this apparent contradiction.

In short, her first thoughts on any subject are to "take it easy." She is a labor-saving device in the flesh. She firmly believes that one can reach stardom by going slowly; to work up to a fast pace without strain. And the ease and grace with which she takes honors from her rivals would appear to prove her point.

A DISCUSSION of training brings out the fact that it is merely one of finding out how to reach the desired goal by the route of the least resistance. Each move is based on consideration of the results of every action.

This champion, with all the quiet confidence in the world, believes that she can and will jump five feet five inches when it becomes necessary to do so. In the meantime there is nothing to be done about it.

"To take training seriously would just kill the fun," she says. "Besides doctors tell me that high jumping for a woman might easily prove a severe strain."

"And you would not carry it that far?"

"No. That would ruin the whole thing."

An amused smile played about the corners of her mouth as the subject of dieting was raised.

"It doesn't mean a thing to me. I never diet. There is no use killing the sport. When training, I simply do a little routine work of going over the bar a few times a day to keep in trim."

Nor do stimulants hold a place in her scheme of things. Asked for an opinion of the use of brandy by a continental swimmer entered in the Wrigley marathon swim at Toronto last fall, a ready reply frankly answered the question so far as she was concerned.

"If he had to resort to artificial means to sustain him in order to continue the swim, I would say he did not possess the physical fitness to start. I never use spirits. I would not try it."

Although not interested in liquor and denying its value in a training camp, Miss Catherwood is quick to express a wholehearted enthusiasm for aquatics, but confesses being out of her element in water.

Raised on the prairies where rivers are swift and lakes are widely separated in the great stretches of farm and ranch lands, she has had slight opportunity to qualify as a swimmer.

IT is the high-powered motion combined with speed that brings her into ready sympathy with the swimmers. Indeed her natural tendencies are for a swift moving game of robust proportions. Her interests in sport, though wide and varied, line up strongly in favor of action aplenty.

For instance, golf holds no attractions for this girl. And it may shock millions who talk "pars" and "birdies" from morn till night to know that there are still a few persons who have not been converted to the hankering for a "hole in one."

A wise-crack expressed her views on golf.

"Goofy!"

"Goofy?"

"Silly. . . . It does not impress me. I think there are better ways to spend the time. No, I don't mean to take it up . . . or even try it."

On the other hand the records have it that not so long ago Ethel Catherwood, pitching for a Saskatchewan baseball team, led her team of girls to victory against a team of young men who did not court defeat out of any sense of gallantry. They were beaten. Saskatoon turns out to see the girls play ball. Ethel pitches.

Looking pretty for her adoring home-towners. . . . Ethel with Mayor Norman of Saskatoon on her triumphal return from the Olympics.

Olympic Champion Catherwood . . . does this only a few times a day when training.

YET seeing Canada's best girl at home, relaxed in the corner of a divan and lazily strumming a uke, it is difficult to think of her as being anything else but a member of the home-lovers' club; as a young woman of housewifely instincts, probably planning a home for herself in the near future. Another shock! The home from a housekeeping standpoint means little to her.

"Do you like housework?" Miss Catherwood was asked.

"Can you cook?"

A negative smile.

At this juncture Mrs. Catherwood disagreed with her daughter.

"Certainly Ethel can keep house and cooks quite well."

"Too much indoors. I do not care for it."

"Do you believe a woman can make a success of home life and enjoy a public career at the same time?"

"If a woman is going to marry, I say let her marry and stay out of sport."

"You would not consider trying both?"

"I would not tackle it."

Questioned as to the possibility of giving up athletics for marriage, Miss Catherwood simply dismissed the topic with a shrug which plainly said, "I am not interested in the subject."

To play the piano well is her all-absorbing ambition at present. She is now in Toronto, Ontario, studying for the degree of associate in the Toronto Conservatory of Music. The course will receive most of her attention for the next few years at least.

As a relief from long hours of scales and finger exercises she will practice jumping and javelin throwing, and then just to round out a full day will continue her business course started before leaving for Amsterdam.

At that time the champion was just beginning to discover that typewriter keys held speed possibilities which aroused her curiosity. She looks forward to entering stenographic contests next year.

Saskatoon's Ethel. . . . The world's best woman high jumper, champ of Canada's feminine javelin throwers, a brilliant player of baseball, basketball and hockey, she refuses to take her sport seriously.

High Jumper Catherwood. . . . A human labor-saving device, she "took it easy" on her way to stardom.

This program differs greatly from that of a few years ago when Ethel made her start running foot races on the village streets of Scott, Saskatchewan, and playing baseball on the vacant lots.

ETHEL CATHERWOOD'S taste for speed comes naturally. Her father was an athlete and encouraged his children to take a lively interest in sport. Ethel, fourth youngest of a family of nine, was put in training with the rest of the children at an early age. She was born in the town of Hannah, North Dakota, of Canadian parents. The family moved to Saskatchewan when she was but an infant. They took up residence in Scott. There she received her first training which put her on the high road toward championships.

Each evening when the day's work was done and the children had finished their school home work, they were taken outside and put through their paces. It was this first "back yard" training that gets the credit for her success abroad.

The favorite back yard sport was sprinting. All members of the family entered the nightly competitions. Ethel and her brother began to show racing form. Ethel made 100 yards in 12 seconds and her brother kept going until he won the provincial championship for the 100-yard dash.

Ethel then concentrated on jumping. At eight years of age she began to exhibit unusual ability in that direction. About that time the children were ready for public appearances at the fall fairs of Saskatchewan. They were duly entered in the sports events where Ethel won consistently in the 100-yard dash, 220 and 440-yard sprints, standing broad jump and running high jump.

AT the age of nine, in Wilkie, Saskatchewan, sports, Ethel was matched against other little girls in the jumping class. She won the individual championship with a mark of three feet ten inches. Trophies continued to pile up in the rural districts and then in 1925 the family moved to Saskatoon. Ethel was enrolled as a student in Bedford road collegiate and soon proved a valuable addition to its athletic personnel.

Up to her fifteenth birthday all training was carried out in the back yard. Ethel was jumping about four feet two inches. Although fourth youngest in the family, she was smallest in stature and was known as the "wee" girl. But that year she began to grow and show signs of reaching her present height of five feet 10 1-2 inches.

In a twelvemonth she grew six inches and, as she grew, continued to show better jumping form. At the end of the year she made her unofficial record of five feet four inches.

This jump came about as a result of a wager between Ethel and her father. Mr. Catherwood realized that his daughter was doing excellent work but was not satisfied that she was putting forth her best efforts. And he was right.

In a friendly argument he brought his daughter to the point where she would bet on her ability to jump an even five feet. The stakes were agreed upon. Ethel cleared the bar at five feet.

Another wager was made which called for a better mark a week later. When the appointed time arrived Ethel jumped five feet four inches.

AT the collegiate meets, representing Bedford road collegiate, the new student jumped five feet to win in that class and then took the first prizes in the 50, 75 and 100-yard dashes. She completed the day's fun by winning the running broad jump by a leap of 14 feet six inches.

Then systematic training started. Joe Griffith, University of Saskatchewan coach, in 1926 undertook to replace the back yard workouts by professional coaching. At the provincial meet in Regina the same fall, Ethel made five feet 7-16 inches. This was recognized by the Amateur Athletic Association of Canada at the December meet in Edmonton, Alberta.

The next field to be conquered was that of the Dominion championships at Toronto. Ethel conquered. From the Canadian championship it was merely a step to the Olympics at Amsterdam where Ethel Catherwood won the world's championship with her historic leap of five feet three inches, and incidentally became known as the "most photographed woman at the Ol[illegible]

Many novelty dances added to the enjoyment of the evening. The patronesses for the dance were the wives of the members of the school board. Lunch was provided at midnight and dancing continued until 2 a.m. The net receipts amounted to $100.

Presentation Made.

Mr. and Mrs. Wesley Hulin, who were recently married in Madoc, were invited to Stirling on Thursday evening, when a large number of their friends met them at the home of the bridegroom's brother, Harry Hulin, and presented them with a miscellaneous shower. The Entre Nous Club, of which the bride was a member while residing in Stirling, presented her with a beautiful bedspread, the address being read by Miss Ellen Shea and the presentation by Miss Willmore Morton. Rev. E. W. Rowland called the gathering to order and Reeve Thomas Montgomery, acted as chairman. Short speeches, expressing regret at the departure of Mrs. Hulin from the community were given. Mrs. Hulin will be missed very much from the church choir, of which she was a popular member. Community singing and music were enjoyed and the Girls' Club provided a dainty lunch.

TWO INSTITUTES HOLD MEETINGS

Much Business Discussed By Lakefield Societies—Girls Enroll For Course.

(Examiner Correspondence.)

LAKEFIELD, January 14. — The monthly meeting of the Junior Institute was held on Wednesday afternoon in the Legion Room in the Town Hall. The president, Miss Lulu Darling, was in the chair. Six girls handed in their names to be sent to Dr. Sutton as willing to do home nursing during the flu epidemic. The ready response to the appeal and the spirit of community service displayed was ample testimony of the value of the society in the community.

The girls are planning to join the Women's Institute in a domestic science course to be held in February or March. The girls are sponsoring a health meeting to be held on the second Wednesday of February (13), to which everyone is welcome. Dr. N. H. Sutton, of Peterborough, will be the speaker.

Women's Institute.

The regular meeting of the Women's Institute was held on Wednesday afternoon in the Town Hall. Owing to a rather small attendance, the reports of the committees who interviewed the School Boards especially concerned in the matter of the employment of a school nurse, were not full, and an extension of time was allowed. It was decided to arrange if the Department was willing, for a short course in household science to be held in February or March. The members of the Junior Institute were asked to co-operate and expressed willingness to do so.

Mrs. Davis, Mrs. Ridpath, and Miss Graham were appointed as a program committee for the next meeting.

Arrangements were begun to provide a box for the Institute dishes and kitchen equipment, which have been kept in the home of Mrs. J. H. Payne, the president. The members of the Institute felt that it was not fair to impose on Mrs. Payne any longer than possible, for while she had never made any complaint, it was generally felt that it had been a good deal of an imposition. Mrs. E. J. Sanderson was appointed to make the arrangements.

Mrs. J. W. Ridpath, Mrs. Fred Armstrong, and Miss Dever were appointed as a relief committee to cooperate with the Councils of Lakefield, Smith, and Douro respectively in any cases where help was required.

A delegation from the Junior Institute, consisting of Misses Marjorie Frankish and Grace Bickell, visited the Women's Institute and asked the senior branch to be their guests at the February meeting, which will be an open meeting, addressed by Dr. N. H. Sutton, of Peterborough, on the subject of "Health."

ST. John's W. A.

The annual meeting of the W.A. of St. John's Church was held on Tuesday afternoon in the Parish Hall with the rector, Rev. W. J. Creighton, in the chair. Reports of the past year's work were read and showed a remarkably good record in both finances and increased membership, with greater interest in the work.

During the year Mrs. B. M. Purdy, who is a member of the branch and is nursing in one of Dr. Grenfell's hospitals in Labrador, paid a visit to the branch and gave an interesting and inspiring talk on her work, which increased the active interest.

These officers were elected for the year 1929:

Honorary president, Mrs. W. J. Creighton; president, Mrs. James Mahood; vice-president, Mrs. S. E. White; general secretary, Miss F. M. Atwood; Living Message secretary, Mrs. Mendell Smith; treasurer, Mrs. T. B. Marling; Dorcas committee, Miss S. Hetherington, Mrs. Barker, and Mrs. Junkin; visiting committee, Mrs. Stenner and Mrs. Junkin; rector's nominees, Miss L. Hampton and Mrs. K. A. Mackenzie.

Going Upstairs Had to Sit Down Breath So Short

Mrs. H. Brousseau, Magog, Que. writes:—"For many years I suffered with shortness of breath; then four years ago I had palpitation of the heart, and was so bad I had to sit down two or three times when going upstairs. I read about so I got a box, and in no time I felt better, so I took three boxes more and I have never had shortness of breath since."

ERECTION OF SERVICE STATION DISCUSSED BY COUNCIL

had found that he was willing to withdraw it.

Explains Stand.

A letter from John R. Heron, the president of the Legion, to Mr. Gordon, cleared the air as to the stand taken by that body. Mr. Heron, in his letter, claimed that it was a meeting of the war veterans of the city when the motion was passed, and offered the Legion hall to Mr. Gordon to call a meeting of the returned men when the matter might be discussed. The Legion executive also, in its letter, suggested a town planning commission.

Mayor Denne.—Mr. Gordon, at the December meeting, promised he would bring to us a resolution from the returned men; this he has not done.

Alderman Phelan.—I take the same stand that I did when the matter first came up. The Imperial Oil Company before purchasing the property, inquired whether there was any restrictions in this area to the building a service station on the two lots beside the library. They were told there was none and hence purchased the property for about $8,000. I don't see how we can stop them now, and I am afraid if they go to court they will beat us and build.

In regard to the point of law Mr. Wearing was asked to give a ruling, and he said, "I think if you pass the by-law to-night you can stop them from building."

Alderman Huffman said he favored, in all fairness to Imperial Oil Company, granting the permit, as he believed fifty per cent of the people were in favor of erecting the service station in front of the park, as it would be a thing of beauty and in keeping with the surrounding property.

Question of Future Policy

Alderman McNabb. — It is not a matter of fairness to the Imperial Oil Company. It is a question of whether we want a service station on George street in front of the park or not. I am not in favor of erecting any service station there and I think the sooner we take action, the better. We should be the ones who should dictate where these stations should go, for the time will come when some company will want to erect a station on property where it would be injuriousb to the city. I am opposed to letting the Imperial Oil Company or any other oil company erect a service station opposite the park.

Alderman Macdonald.—Two years ago I moved a by-law creating a restricted area in this section of the city, but it was defeated. If it had not been, we would have saved ourselves all this trouble now. We ought to be far-sighted enough to restrict certain parts of the city and look ahead and plan a little for the future.

Alderman McIntyre.—For myself, I think a service station would be an improvement, but I would like to be a little more familiar with the matter. Art Blade, representative for the Imperial Oil Company, then suggested if the matter be held over he, at the company's expense, would call a meeting of war veterans.

Thanks Council

Ex-Mayor J. J. Turner addressed the council, thanking it for re-appointing him to the Boar dof Health and also congratulating the members on their election and last year's council on the splendid work it had accomplished in the city.

Alderman Phelan suggested that a member of the council see the Hon. George Henry, Minister of Highways, so that the planned paving on the Provincial Highway would be completed before Old Home Week or not started until the week was over. Alderman Hamilton was instructed to see the Minister.

Alderman Hamilton introduced a motion, which was carried, petitioning the government to continue with the work on Highway Number 7, which passes through this city to Ottawa, to continue with the work immediately east of Peterborough, so that those who are paying licenses might derive some of the benefits from having this great territory to the east of the city made convenient for motorists to come here and do their business.

City Clerk Armstrong was granted leave to go on a trip, as a slight consideration of the thirty-five years' faithful service that he has given to the city.

No Services Held in Village Churches on Sunday Evening.

WARSAW, Jan. 15.—(Examiner Correspondence).—The snow storm on Saturday with a high wind all night and on Sunday, filled in the north and south roads so that even cutters had difficulty in getting through. The east and west roads, however, are not drifted. At 9 o'clock on Sunday evening, the thermometer registered 10 degrees below zero.

On account of the roads being in bad condition, there were no services in the village churches on Sunday evening. Rev. Mr. Fenton and Rev. Mr. McCleary could not get to Warsaw and Rev. Mr. Herrington was away.

On Saturday evening a motor truck had to be shovelled out on the top of Gordon Payne's hill. It went around to the second line of Douro and coming back had to shovel practically all the way from Anderson's corner to Drain's gate. Going from D. Miller's to P. McMurray's, unloading a load of lumber and returning, took the truck from about seven o'clock until after twelve p.m. and then the driver had several miles to go to reach home.

Boasted he Escaped the Flu; but fell for Holiday

MARION'S MAIL

Address correspondence to Marion at The Examiner Office.

"Dear Marion,

I liked your Whatnot of Monday, even if it did seem to take a slap at me. I don't really know whether you were digging me or not, but it fitted!

I was one of the smart males who said the flu could be avoided by deciding one didn't want it, and I still believe it. That doesn't jibe, you may say, with my being since reported missing from my work 'with the flu,' and, on the face of it, I admit you would be right.

But, my dear Marion, didn't you ever hear of anyone getting fed up hearing about others having holidays when he never had any—in other words, didn't you ever 'scheme' to escape school? Yep! There you have the secret. Everywhere one goes nowadays one hears about someone staying at home because of flu, and the excuse is too good to be lost. But if you really meant me, and you really know who I am, please don't give the secret away!

Do I imagine it, or do you really write better over the week-end than during the rest of the week? I have just about decided your Monday Whatnot takes the prize—although I am one of the outcasts you knock so much, I read every Whatnot. But I don't like the stool you told about on Monday; I like the old-time padded stool on which one can get real close to the fire. I'm afraid yours would scorch if I were to draw it as close to the grate as I like to be.

I smiled over your 'tomato juice' cure for flu. Is that what cured you? Really, Marion, I could tell you a much better and interesting cure than that—a good preventive, too—but I'm afraid you could hardly use it.

Well, I hope you don't catch the flu, Marion, if you HAVEN'T had it, but don't lose sight of my idea if you find you need a rest!

Yours sincerely,
Jack."

Why not tell me that cure in a private note, "Jack"? I might be glad to pass it on to some friend—since I don't intend, myself, to catch flu! Your other ideas are worth considering.

"Dear Marion,

I noticed on a letter I received recently my correspondent had a motto printed in gold instead of the usual address, at the top of the sheet. I thought it a rather nice idea, and I would like to know some mottos from which I could choose one to suit myself. Have you any ideas?

Your page is very interesting, and my scrap book has grown beyond all my dreams, with the recipes sent in by neighbors. What a loyal circle you have!

Just to justify my writing, and to gain sure-enough entry to your neighbor.y circle, I'm sending one of my favorite recipes.

Yours very truly,
Chickie."

Thank you for your recipe, "Chickie," which will be printed soon. About the motto, I'm making up a list and will let you have it, maybe in the form of a Whatnot, very shortly.

"Dear Marion,

I am writing to you for help, and I wish, if you can't tell me offhand, that you would print an SOS asking how to clean a brown leather club bag. My husband's is very dirty from having him put his feet on it while travelling, and I want to freshen it up before he goes out on his spring trips.

We like your page very much at our home, and you seem to know so many things that I thought you might be able to help with this.

Yours faithfully,
"Sweet Sixteen."

I don't think we need insert an SOS, "Sweet Sixteen," but if any other neighbor has a better plan than this, please let us know. Try a good saddle polish, or a shoe cleaning polish, after you have cleaned the leather. Dissolve a bar of white soap in one cup of water. Then add one cup of alcohol and two cups of light oil. This not only cleans the eather, but supplies some of the oil which the leather requires.

I'm glad you like our pages, and I hope you write soon again.

"Dear Marion,

Here I am again, looking for help. You seem so gracious and willing to help that one doesn't hesitate, somehow.

I had a beautiful crocheted basket given me for Christmas, and I wish to stiffen it. It is of thick mercerized silk.

I'm still tagging along with your page, enjoying it more every week, and I have sent you the odd recipe, which you printed.

Yours truly,
Mrs. M. G."

I am warning you, "Mrs. M. G.", that this recipe has not been tried by me, and I don't know just how good it is. Better try it on something else before applying the treatment to your basket. Place a wood block of the desired shape in the basket and dip it in hot paraffin. Allow it to dry, and then remove the block.

Yes, I have received several recipes from you, "Mrs. M. G.", which I appreciated a lot. I'm glad to know you still like our pages.

The Eleventh Hour

By H. LOUIS RAYBOLD

"You'll be late at your own wedding, Janey!" prophesied her Aunt Margaret.

"Who said I was ever going to have a wedding?" retorted her niece flippantly.

Yet Janey was only waiting for a certain young man to ask her to be his before saying "yes" promptly.

What Janey did not know was that Shepley Barker had come to the house last night firmly determined to pop the hoped-for question when they should have returned from the play to which he was taking her. After, however, being obliged to wait so long for Janey to put the finishing touches to the gown she wanted to wear that the curtain had been raised half an hour when they got there, Shep was in no mood to be sentimental. It was one thing to love Janey, quite another to be amiable toward her pet failing.

Yet Shep did ask her to marry his a few evenings later. He had spent the afternoon playing tennis with her and had been asked by Aunt Margaret to dinner. Saying goodby to her out on the porch in the moonlight, a sudden realization smote him of what an entrancing little witch she was.

"Darling," he burst forth impulsively, "I love you more than I can tell. Marry me, Janey. Say 'yes.'"

And Janey shyly uttered the little word that had been hovering on her lips so long.

The wedding day was set six months ahead because Janey wanted to be married in the fall. Furthermore, she wanted to be married in the little country church at Sandersville where she had spent so many happy summers and where she had first met Shep. It meant a long drive down from the city home, but what was that, according to Janey, when compared with the romance of the thing?

Their engagement period was one of mingled pleasure and pain. Pleasure, when they were together, picnicking, shopping, or attending play, concert or dance. Pain, when Janey had left something until the eleventh hour and, as a result, was worn out, inexcusably late, or, as in one sad case, failed to show up at all, leaving Shep to cool his heels indefinitely at the door of the concert hall whither he had hurried from an important business meeting.

As an aftermath of that occasion, Shep had assured Janey that if she was late to the wedding he would walk out of the church with the maid-of-honor and never go back.

Spoken in jest, the threat brought Janey close to tears. "It was the old cleaner's fault!" she protested.

"I'll warrant you didn't take your suit there until yesterday afternoon!" retorted Shep.

"I took it this morning!" dimpled Janey. "And how could I wear my coat on such a summery day?"

Argument or protest were of little avail. Shep, to whom an appointment to meet a man was as sacred as his name on a note, could forgive Janey but not understand her.

Unfortunately, one of the eleventh hour delays of his fiancee concerned the sending out of the invitations. An aunt of the bride's received her notice of the impending wedding of her niece three days after the event.

Shep, who had turned over to Janey a meticulous list of his own friends and relatives, gave no more thought to the matter.

The wedding day proved one of those delectable gifts of autumn when a crisp and heady tang colors all existence.

Shep was staying with his cousins but Janey was to drive down from the city with Aunt Margaret and Uncle John, who was to give her away. The hour was purposely early—eleven o'clock—that the bride and groom might catch the one mid-day train that stopped at Sandersville.

Shep and his best man were early at the church and while Shep was in no way the nervous bridegroom of comic fiction the moments seemed to drag unbearably as he waited in the minister's study.

Ten minutes to eleven—five minutes to! A terrible premonition struck Shep. Janey was going to live up to prediction and be late.

A rap startled him. Cousin Fred, the best man, going to the door, found the station master's boy leaning beside his bicycle with a yellow envelope in his hand. "For Mr. Barker," he said. "They told me he was here."

Shep ripped the envelope open, drew out the enclosure, read it with a face that grew white, crumpled it into a wad and reached for his hat.

Cousin Fred picked it up and, at Shep's savage assent, read it.

"Terribly sorry. Can't make the wedding in time. Jane."

Like a man in a dream Shep strode out the side door and down the path as the church clock started to chime eleven. He did not see the automobile draw up in front of the church or hear Cousin Fred running behind him, but he turned at a touch on his shoulder.

"There's a mistake!" said Cousin Fred hoarsely. "Janey is here!"

A letter forwarded to Shep on his honeymoon from Shep's great-aunt Jane made things clear. "Your invitation must have been delayed in the mail. It came in time for me to wire I could not be present. I am sending a gift."

"It ought to cure me," said Janey contritely. But one doubts if it did.

THE MIRROR OF THE MODE

By Mary Marshall.

Stockings to match the colored kid shoe may be of dark green, wine red, brown or gunmetal for street wear—as indicated at the top of the sketch. In the center are two silk and wool mesh stockings in brown and tan, and below pinhole lisle stockings in pastel shades for sportswear.

If the fashion for short skirts has done nothing else, it has taught women the tremendous importance of nice stockings. And now, even if long skirts did return to favor, women of this generation would never feel well dressed or satisfied with themselves in the coarse, unattractive stockings that the majority of women used to wear. They have acquired stocking consciousness.

Personally, I feel convinced that we are a long way from really long skirts; and the uneven skirt line and skirt drapery only serve to emphasize stockings rather than to conceal them.

French women have for years made more distinction between the sort of stockings worn at different hours of the day and for different types of costume than have American women. They have been more inclined to wear fine quality lisle stockings for sports and street wear than have Americans, and have been much more inclined to reserve the very sheer, flesh-colored silk stocking for evening wear.

Here there is a growing tendency to vary the stocking with the gown, and the hour. Many well-dressed American women wear silk-and-wool stockings for the street in cold weather and wool stockings for sports. Lisle stockings of very good quality have been chosen by many women for sports wear at Southern resorts this winter.

With brown, wine-colored, dark blue or green kid shoes for street or afternoon wear, many women do not wear flesh-colored stockings. They wear transparent silks to match the color of the shoe or a dull, dusty shade of the same color. With evening frocks of uneven skirt drapery or that dip down at the back, it is often better to wear stockings of the same tone as the frock.

MORE PEOPLE YET LOWER DEATH RATE

When with more people in a country there are fewer deaths per thousand there must be a reason.

In 1881 the population of England and Wales was many millions less than in 1923 and yet the death rate with these many millions more in 1923 was less than in 1881.

In 1881 the infant death rate was 130 per thousand births; last year it was only 70, that is about one half.

What has been one of the factors in bringing this about?

During the war "man power" was the biggest thing in the world. Therefore just as any one will guard or protect that which they consider precious, so therefore was the health of the soldier given every means of protection, and every chance for complete development.

He was first overhauled physically, and any physical defects were not only pointed out but were corrected insofar as was possible at the time.

Bad teeth were removed; any shortage of teeth, grinding teeth, was replaced.

Bad tonsils were removed, nasal obstruction rectified, eyes fitted with glasses, varicose veins removed, and hernias repaired.

Any tendency toward kidney ailments was detected and treatment instituted.

Hearts that were too fast, or irregular, but organically sound, were given exercise to strengthen and regulate them.

Recruits whose chest measurements were below normal were given breathing exercises to bring them up to the required standard. Do you wonder then that notwithstanding the fact that many hundreds of the best stock in the country were killed, leaving what would naturally be a little poorer stock, nevertheless such was the effect of these "lessons in health" on the community in general that the death rate per thousand was less than it was before the war. So although the war was beset with many evils, and the loss of our best blood, nevertheless it did teach the world in general better habits of life.

Simply that the things that keep us from being our real selves, 100 percent, can in many cases be rectified if we allow the family doctor to examine us once a year.

PURSE MUFFS.

New Paris muffs—little trinkets of fine fur and luxurious fabric—assume the importance of purses by having regular purse pockets inside that snap shut for safety.

SIDE TRAINS.

Dipping skirts on evening gowns show a preference for greatest length on one side, usually the left. The other side dips also, but the left side may reach beyond the floor, providing a sweet little train.

"We require higher tasks, because we do not recognize the height of those we have.

Endeavouring to be kind and honest seems too simple and too inconsequential for gentlemen of our heroic mould; we would rather set ourselves to something bold, arduous and conclusive; we would rather found a schism, or suppress a heresy, cut off a hand or mortify an appetite.

But the task before us is one of microscopic fineness, and the heroism required is that of patience. There is no cutting of the Gordian knots of life: each has to be smilingly unravelled.

—Robert Louis Stevenson.

"The higher the style of friendship which we demand, of course the less easy to establish it with flesh and blood.

"The condition which high friendship demands is ability to do without it. To be capable of that high office, requires great and sublime parts; there must be very two, before there can be very one."

Emerson in "Friendship."

"Leave it to boys and girls to regard a friend as property and to such an all-confounding pleasure instead of the pure nectar of God."

—Emerson.

"Man attains in the measure that he aspires. His longing to be is the guage of what he can be. To fix the mind is to fore-ordain the achievement. As man can experience and know all low things, so he can experience and know al high things. As he has become human, so he can become divine. The turning of the mind in high and divine directions is the sole and needful task."

—James Allan.

"When a man makes truth his master, he abandons error; and as he transcends error, he becomes more like his Master. until he becomes one with truth, teaching it, as a master, by his actions, and reflecting it in his life."

ENTERTAINING GUESTS

A Series Giving Hints on Arranging Parties.
By LAURA.

GOLDEN WEDDING ANNIVERSARY

An old-fashioned "high tea" served as a buffet supper, is about the only way the hostess will be able to serve all of the friends of the honored couple. The idea, is, of course, to reproduce the atmosphere and customs of fifty years ago for their Golden Wedding.

The dining table is covered with a white cloth, with a centerpiece of green moss, on which is laid an old-fashioned bride's bouquet of lily-of-the-valley or camellias with a starched little frill of white lace about it tied with a big white satin bow. This of course, is presented to Grandmother at the close of the evening. An old-fashioned lace bonnet or a yellowed lace handkerchief lying beside it would also take one back fifty years.

At the four corners of the table place small dolls, such as the ones you buy for boudoir lamps, dressed in costume of fifty years back-plain, full skirt of satin with bustles and looped up over-skirts of gold-colored tulle. Round hats of leaf green built up with a profusion of flowers and feathers, and having long lacy streamers falling down behind.

Twisted about each doll's arm is a narrow gold ribbon stretching to the next doll, where it is wrapped around her arm in the same manner. Swinging by this ribbon are tiny brass bells so that there are fifty of them in all, forming a sort of a ring about the table edge.

On the other doll's arm is a small basket, as much like the old-fashioned garden basket as possible, and are filled with conserves—candied orange peel, violets and cherries, etc.

At one side of the centerpiece are heaped bags of golden brocaded silk, filled with dried rose leaves and tied with golden bows. In one of these bags a gold ring is hidden, and each feminine guest is supposed to take a sachet home as a souvenir, one, of course, finding the ring.

At the opposite side are the souvenirs for the men, which take the form of dainty wedding cake boxes. If it is possible choose little square gilt boxes for this purpose. These are filled with squares of the cake and on the cover is pasted a bundle of tiny doll envelopes which can be bought at any toy shop. The envelopes should be tied with faded ribbon to represent fifty-year-old love letters. Yellow wax candles in tall brass candlesticks stand at the corners of the mossy centerpiece lighting the table in the old-time way.

The dishes should be all old-fashioned ones—cold roast pork, boned chicken, salads, hot biscuits and pies, with a big silver pot of steaming coffee.

At one end of the table is a huge bride's cake, with the names of the bride and bridegroom written in silver or orange icing, and the fifty-year bride must be the first to cut a slice for good luck.

Invitations for the affair may be printed like the wedding invitation, but if the guests number a great many, a personal invitation or a telephone call would suffice.

Gifts for the happy couple include gold pieces or anything in brass.

ABOUT MEETING PEOPLE.

(Answer by "Eva")

"Dear Marion,

I have enjoyed the replies given by your Big Sisters to other enquirers, and I think this innovation a good one. My problem will not be difficult to solve.

I have just recently come to Peterborough to live, and I would like to know of some place where I can meet a class of respectable girls and boys. Those I meet in the office do not appeal to me, as all their talk seems to be of petting parties, and what 'he says to me.' I am just in my late teens, and I want to have a good time, with young folks who do it in a respectable manner. I am fairly good-looking, and dress well.

Yours sincerely,
Claire."

"My dear Claire,

In my opinion your best plan is to connect with the Y.W.C.A., where there are clubs for all ages and inclinations, with cheery company and a high standard. In your Church, too, there are classes and organizations that should offer just what you want. Through the girls you meet in these organizations you should also meet worth-while young men. I like your spirit, and I am sure you will enjoy your good times all the more for approaching them in this manner. Then, too, you will have no heartburnings in after years.

Eva."

(Thanks for your little personal note in the last paragraph of your letter, "Claire," which I omitted. I certainly wish you all kinds of good fortune. Marion.)

1 cup finely mashed potatoes
Milk or water.

Method.

Mix the flour with the salt and baking powder. Then add the finely mashed potatoes and water or milk enough to make a soft dough.

Turn the whole into a well greased frying pan and cook slowly, turning occasionally, adding a little more lard to the pan each time until the cake is a nice brown on each side and well cooked through. This should take about thirty minutes. Spread with lots of butter and eat while hot.

This makes a nice change for supper.

SAUSAGE.

(Contributed by "Lucinda")

Ten pounds of lean pork; 5 pounds of lean beef; 5 pounds of chine fat pork. Put all through the food chopper. Add four teaspoonfuls of powdered sage, two teaspoonfuls of summer savory, one and one-half ounces of allspice. Salt and white pepper to taste (it will take about 5 ounces of salt and 1¼ ounces of white pepper). Taste to see that it has the right flavor. Make into cakes, or fill the clean intestines of the hog. If you wish to keep them for two or three months, put them in a crock, cover with melted lard and stand away in a cool place.

YOUR HOME AND YOU

By BETSY CALLISTER

At a high-priced grocery store, I know, it is possible to buy special baking potatoes—of almost uniform size, large and smooth. But you pay a price that seems absurd for just potatoes.

Most of us content ourselves with just ordinary potatoes that come in various sizes, some smooth, and some rough, some with picturesque knobs and some without—the sort of potatoes you get when you ask the grocery man for a basket of potatoes.

Here is a plan that I have found a good one, and I think it is worth handing on. When the basket of potatoes comes, spread papers on the floor and dump them out. In one pile put all the fairly large, smooth potatoes that will do for baking when you want large portions. Into another pile put the fairly small smooth potatoes of nearly uniform size. Into another pile put the odd fellows—the one or two enormously large ones, too large to bake, the knobby ones, the midgets and those that have been partly split or otherwise blemished. Into three large bags or small baskets put the three sorts of potatoes and set them away in a fairly cool place, or at least not where they get the full heat of the kitchen

This takes some time, to be sure—but in the long run considerable time and more annoyance are saved. When you want to bake large potatoes you do not have to upturn the entire basket to find them, getting dust on the floor if you do not take time to spread a paper. When you want to serve plain boiled potatoes with their skins on or small baked potatoes, use those in the second bag, and when you are going to prepare potatoes for salad, pan frying, scalloping or something of that sort, choose the nondescripts.

HAT CLEANING

Women can keep their felt hats immaculate if they brush them daily and once a week go over them with a cloth dipped in some good cleaning fluid. Brush the nap carefully when dry.

SWEET SANDWICH.

A good sandwich for children is one made of chopped pineapple, nuts and a little boiled dressing. Serve on lettuce on whole wheat bread.

When e'er my friendly shore
Came where I might tread it,
And blew me out again,
'Midst seas that rolled and roared,
And mocked—without credit
For struggle and hard gains,
That his recurrent winds
Kept putting rough upon me—
Embattled in the trough.

Odysseus got home—
And there must come a time
When through the briny foam,
I'll stagger up the sands.

The Whatnot

A Column for Little Bits of Everything of Interest to Women Readers

Conducted by Marion (Copyright)

I wonder if you have ever noticed when at any of the social functions which are now so prevalent in Peterborough, that some women, and men, too, seem to have a number of subjects in mind which they do not wish to discuss with others.

• • • • • • •

If you have ever taken very great notice, you will find that even the gay and carefree girls who can keep up an endless conversation, and are ready to talk at any time, have at least one subject which they do not talk about.

• • • • • • •

There are always some matters which they do not mention. Perhaps they are personal matters, relating to some unhappy event and if brought up in conversation would make one feel embarrassed. It does seem, too, that to let bygones be bygones, is better.

• • • • • • •

I know of some people, one in particular whom I am thinking of, and it is a man, who tries his best to find out what concerns other people, but who never talks about matters regarding himself.

• • • • • • •

Before reading any further, just pause and think what subjects you do not care to mention to other people. And think, too, of matters of which you DO speak and which might hurt those about whom they are spoken.

• • • • • • •

Some are rigid in their choice of subjects; some avoid matters regarding themselves and their own private life, and there are those who do not speak of things which might offend others.

• • • • • • •

Surely everyone knows of people who delight in talking about operations and illnesses. One of the dreads of the sick room is the visitor who makes the one who is ill much worse by talking of similar cases of illness from which the patient almost invariably dies. This kind of visitor always brings horror with him.

• • • • • • •

Then there are people who consider it a breach of etiquette to speak of illnesses and such things which have happened to their children, but who have a desire to hurt other people's feelings. Perhaps they pass on a little bit of gossip which they have heard, and we all know that each story-teller adds a little more until the story has grown beyond recognition.

• • • • • • •

Many a reputation has been ruined and many a heart saddened because a harmless story grew until the truth was gone. It is very simple, indeed, to pass on a bit of gossip.

• • • • • • •

Sometimes people air religious and racial prejudices in large gatherings where there is sure to be someone who will be offended.

• • • • • • •

Some women in Peterborough do not hesitate to comment on personal matters, which others would speak of to no one. These women could keep up a conversation for any length of time without saying one thing which might offend other people.

• • • • • • •

Which kind of society would you prefer, that of the woman who delights in hurting others, or one like I have just mentioned? I am sure you will agree with me in saying the last named would be preferred.

• • • • • • •

Do you really know what subjects should be avoided in general conversation?

• • • • • • •

In a rather old etiquette book it says you should not talk about "your children, your servants and your ill-health," while a book which has not been published very long states, "We can discuss anything under the sun except money, disease and personal affairs."

• • • • • • •

But, of course, one need not go by such books. Some conversations regarding money are quite proper and many society women DO talk about their servants, and often comments by others go a long way toward solving a problem.

• • • • • • •

And often personal matters are quite pleasant and need not be offensive to others. I guess the best thing to do would be to talk about things which could not offend others or disgust them; to talk of nothing that would suggest to others a lack of taste or discretion and to talk about nothing which might, in an innocent way, divulge a secret.

This week's diagram is for a cap that is equally attractive for boudoir or dusting cap. It can be worn to keep odors of cooking from the hair and is very easily made.

• • • • • • •

Just how much care do you exercise in choosing your kitchen table? Most certainly we do not purchase a table every day, but those who are thinking of buying one, should choose it with great care.

• • • • • • •

The table should be equipped with castors, so that it may be moved around—near the sink or stove, when it is desired there.

• • • • • • •

The top of the table may be made of plain white boards. It is just as well to leave the top bare if it can be scrubbed with soap, hot water and a good brush, every day.

• • • • • • •

It would be all right to cover the top with oilcloth if it is to be used as an eating table, but otherwise do not put on a covering as hot dishes and pans discolor the cloth.

• • • • • • •

An excellent top for a table is one made of white enamel, such as are used with kitchen cabinets. I believe these tops can be purchased separately.

• • • • • • •

Enamel tops are not harmed by heat and will stand quite hard usage. Of course, they may chip if used roughly, but otherwise, will stand a lot of wear.

• • • • • • •

And then there is the galvanized top which I have seen used in some kitchens in Peterborough. At one place where I visited, the top had been put on by the woman's husband, who secured a large sheet of this metal from a haadware store and nailed it on the table, putting the nails on the under side of the table top.

My New Year's Resolutions

The following have been entered in a competition, the result of which will be announced on Saturday.

Dear Marion:
My Resolutions for 1929 are:
To take a retrospective view of 1928 and relying on God's help correct failures.
To give, ever ready help in time of trouble as far as in my power lies.
To seek the best and leave the rest, in everything, and everybody.
Set Onward to be the motto for 1929; no looking back with regret.
Looking for the silver things in life.
To be unbiased in thought and dealing with others.
Trying to make the world a little better for my having lived in it.
Taking an interest in anything for the uplifting of humanity.
Try to obtain the good will of all I come in contact with.
And never forget the source of all my blessings.
Try to obtain the seal of commendation at the close of the year.
"Good and faithful Servant."
"She hath done what she could."
"Well Wisher."

The twentieth chapter of the Book of Revelation contains the sublimest picture ever painted. It is the vision of the Judgment Day, and earth and heaven have vanished. Everyone is judged by what he has done. Every life is a book and every book is opened and the contents compared with that which is in the Book of Life. Each one may see the fulfilment or the falling short of the requirements. Man's words and deeds are the only witnesses summoned. Each one has written his own benediction or condemnation. A book is a collection of sheets of paper bound together containing printed sentences woven into a continuous narrative or composition. What is man's life but a collection of days written all over with thoughts, words and deeds and bound together in a volume. If then, life is indeed a volume we may consider every year a page, every week a paragraph and every day a line of a continued story. Through the last twelve months we have all been writing and reached the bottom of the page. Fifty-two paragraphs are completed and we are ready to turn the leaf. What is involved in this operation? When we turn a leaf we do two things. We cover one page and we uncover another. If it is a copy book we conceal the page on which we have just written and expose a blank page which is ready for our pen. We do this every January the first. It is not well to ponder too long over the finished page, for mistakes seem uppermost. If we brood over our failures, meditate upon our misfortunes, stare at our losses, fondle our sorrows, it renders us unfit to write the next paragraph. We cannot do ourselves justice when we have the blues. There is no use lamenting too long, what is written is written, and the only sensible thing to do is to turn over and atone for past errors by writing something that will stand the test of the Judgment Day. Keep the finished page covered and don't let the breezes of memory blow the old leaf over so as to expose the stained record. God is willing to cast sins behind and why cannot we? It is bad enough to spoil one without spoiling another brooding over the last one.

But we do not mean by this to ignore the past completely. We should take from it its jewels before we leave it, study its instructions and admonitions. A glance backward will reveal the places where we slipped and fell. We ought to be able to snatch from every blunder a wholesome lesson when we turn the new leaf it assures us we have another chance. We cannot alter but we can improve. Each December we realize how far short of our last January resolutions we have fallen. The first part is tolerably good, the second part is not so good, the third is worse, while the bottom of the page is scarcely discernable

The person who tells us that in reality there is no difference between the first of January and any other month may not be quite so wise as he thinks he is. At any rate, he is not much of a psychologist. To the most of us there is a difference, the New Year does seem to come with a fresh sense of possibility and achievement, and to make it worth while to try to do better. God keeps the heart alive by giving fresh opportunities, to do the old things with a finer spirit, to travel the old road with a kinder heart, to hitch one's waggon to a higher star. This is sure to add another hue to the rainbow.

What is the New Year if we are not to venture farther out upon the sea? We must enlarge our world, we must try to do more this year than last and do it better. We find much truth in the words of an English poet, "unless above himself he can erect himself how poor a thing a man is." To be sure we are going to have some cloudy days. The travelling will at times be rough and we will find thorns as well as roses. We shall occasionally stumble and fall and the new record, do what we may, will be more or less darkened and disappointing. We only succeed by struggling and trying. No one laughs at a child who does his best even though it is not good. If we will face this New Year with a resolute purpose to make it better and more cheerful and more Christian, the good spirit which prompted that upward reaching and made it seem possible, will not fail us when the opportunity for achievement comes.

Of course it is always possible that he who resolves splendidly may fall before his high aim, but what hope is there for the one who will not venture at all? We live in deeds, not years: in thoughts not breaths; in feelings, not in figures on a dial. Our deeds, good and bad, made and mar our individual Book of Life. He who examines these books reads them with a Father's eye. "He knoweth our frame. He remembereth that we are dust." It is better to make a few real resolutions and do our best to keep them than to make a number and partially fail in all of them.

If the mass of the people made a New Year's Resolution to be charitable in judgment, kind and sympathetic in attitude and helpful to strugglers, what a changed community there would be. Many of humanity's ills come from too much hardness and too little regard for the rights of others. If every one could make this his motto, the world would be the better:

Others, Lord, yes, others,
Let this my motto be,
Help me to live for others,
That I may live like Thee.

Many New Year's resolutions have relation to business progress or the gaining of wealth. They may mean the applying of harder pressure on others, but the most ennobling resolutions are the ones that deal with the improvement of character, that have a distinct relationship to humanity, and that brings us to a better state of mind toward our fellows, who are struggling onward to an end: that none of, rich or poor, can evade.

Resolutions for the Home-maker.

1. I will rest every day even if it is only to cease work and relax my muscles for a minute or two.

2. I will take some exercise in the open air every day, even if it is only to get outdoors and romp with the children.

3. I will make of my work a profession and a science, using my brains and my intelligence in perfecting an efficient, smooth-running domestic routine.

4. I will read books and articles pertaining to my craft that I may acquire that knowledge which is power, books in lighter vein for my amusement and edification, a good newspaper that will keep me informed on matters of general interest and progress in the world, and any other good literature for which I may have time and inclination.

5. I will take an interest in life outside of the four walls of my own home, so avoiding a narrow self-centred attitude and mental inertia.

6. I will take pains to make myself as attractive as possible, not being satisfied with passable cleanliness, but paying some attention to the dressing of my hair and the general effect of my costume. As there is a very real connection between mental and physical well-being. I will resist every temptation to become slovenly and careless.

7. I will try to acquire a cheerful philosophy to sustain me through the trials and vexations of every day.

8. I will try to be the cheery companion, as well as the wife and mother.

9. I will pass on to others, bits of wisdom and philosophy and advice which have helped and cheered me on my way.

LORD DERBY HEADS NEW MOVEMENT

"Come to Britain" is Slogan of Organization English Earl Presides Over.

LONDON, Jan. 11 (By the Canadian Press).—"Come to Britain" is the slogan of a new movement of which the Earl of Derby has accepted the Presidency. The organization will encourage every phase of activity connected with the tourist traffic to this island. A few private subscribers have guaranteed $50,000 per annum for a number of years, and the Government has promised a subsidy of $25,000 for the first year.

The Duke of York has extended his cordial good wishes to the movement. "We in the United Kingdom," writes His Royal Highness "have many attractions which cannot be rivalled anywhere else in the world. We have scenery unsurpassed for its delicate charm, while, for those people who are interested in the romantic past, we have scattered about Great Britain many places, each made venerable by some outstanding event in the world's history. Again, Britain is the home of sport. We have been too modest in the past. It is time we told the world what these islands can offer.

"I wish every success to this movement, which I hope and believe will result in a better national understanding, and also in an improvement in our invisible export trade."

At the inaugural meeting Lord Derby also remarked upon the "Wealth of historical monuments Britain has to show the visitor," and continued, "as the home of sport, the United Kingdom is well known. As to horse racing I can speak with knowledge. Most people, in fact, believe that I take my name from a famous race run at Epsom, instead of the race having taken its name from an ancestor of mine.

"Lord's cricket ground is the mecca of the cricketing world—the M.C.C. is so exclusive, in fact, that I put down my name when I was 21, and am still hoping to be included in the next fortnight."

St. John's Juniors Win Third Game of Season

SAINTS ADD TO THEIR LEAD IN GROUP RACE BY ANOTHER VICTORY OVER LINDSAY TEAM

Leaders Defeat Old Rivals 3 Goals to 1 in Interesting Battle.

TAKE EARLY LEAD

And Successfully Protect It for the Balance of the Game.

(By F. D. C.)

Taking an early lead and protecting it successfully, the St. John's juniors won their third victory in succession and increased their margin in the junior group race by beating Lindsay 3 goals to 1 at Brock street rink last night.

Most of the excitement was crowded into the third period when the Lindsay youngsters, down 3 goals to 0, threw their whole team up on the attack and battled valiantly to pull the game out of the fire. Aided by some erratic decisions by Referee McFayden they caught the Saints two men short on one occasion and scored their only goal of the game. But they could not break through again, in fact they came close to dropping further behind by reason of their reckless attack for three or four times they were caught up the ice and goals nearly resulted.

The St. John's crew had a big margin in the first period when they did most of the attacking and beat Lee three times to give themselves a commanding lead which they were content to hold. As a result of their tactics the red and white sweatered Lindsay lads had to do the bulk of the skating especially in the last period and they must be given credit for their fighting attempt to turn the tide.

It was an interesting struggle at all times and the last twenty minutes were brimful of excitement. The visitors had plenty of speed but it was matched by the good checking of the Saints and their success in working in close when on the attack and on the whole the Lindsay speed was thrown away.

St. John's expected until the last moment to be without the services of Frank Hewett, who has been a flu victim, but the sturdy wing player got into the game and was of very material assistance to his team. Terry Hall, out of the first two games for the same cause and just beginning to get into shape was in the line up for the first time and gave a good account of himself, getting the Saints' last counter with one of his old time drives.

The Saints' outstanding performer, however, was their captain, Gordie Cuthbertson, whose effective poke checking in centre ice played havoc with the Lindsay rushes while his good stickhandling made him the most dangerous attacker for the winners. He rose to the occasion in the last periods when the Lindsay attack was at its height, and made some lone handed raids that should have been rewarded with goals. Freddie Meagher was thrown in often and was effective at all times, while the defence pair, Howe and Frost, were effective in their checking and rushed well. Young Tommy Miller kept up his fine work in the nets, turning in another sparkling exhibition. Dunkerley at left did too much long distance shooting, but was effective otherwise.

For Lindsay the three stars of last year's team were again in the limelight. Wood, their big defence man, was good going both ways, while Forbert at centre and Gerster the left wing player were always dangerous. Lee made some fine stops half a dozen times when his defence had been beaten.

Owing to the similarity in uniforms of the two clubs the Saints wore the blue and white uniforms of the Peterborough intermediates, made available through the kindness of the management of the latter.

Referee McFayden of Oshawa did not make a hit with the crowd. He was seldom on top of the play and it really looked as if he were guessing at times and not making much of a success of it at that.

The game was very late in starting, owing to the tardy arrival of several of the Lindsay players. The rest stalled as long as possible and finally succeeded in holding the start up until their whole team was ready. The Saints got the jump on their rivals by pressing home a successful attack right off the reel. The game had not been going long when Dunkerley went down the side and put his team in front, the puck carroming off Lee's pads into the net. Then Cuthbertson stickhandled inside and pushed a second goal past the Lindsay custodian. When Terry Hall grabbed a loose puck inside the Lindsay blue line and let go one of his favorite shots the score was 3 to 0. The visitors fought back and tried hard to break through but had no luck in beating the Saints' checking barrange until Wood finally dashed inside and then shot wide. They had a good chance when Hewett and Frost were penalized almost together but the only dangerous move was a rush by Dames who was beaten by a great stop by Miller.

The second period saw the Saints quite content to hold their lead and although Lindsay tried hard they rarely got to dangerous quarters. They had an opening when Dunkerley and Frost got the gate almost together but Wood of Lindsay was penalized a moment later and the rest of the team failed to take any advantage of the fact that they were still a man to the good.

The final period was a hot session. Lindsay discarded any idea of defence at all and the whole team went on the attack. The Saints were checking well, however, and the visitors got nowhere until Howe and Meagher were penalized together, leaving the homesters two men short. Playing 6 to 4 Lindsay pressed and Dames finally scored their only goal with a side shot. When the teams were even again the Saints were in the driver's seat for the Lindsay lads were being well taken care of while the Peterborough youngsters broke away occasionally for dangerous attacks. Three times in succession Cuthbertson worked around the Lindsay defence but each time he came in on his wrong side and he could not beat Lee. The Saints' captain skated himself to the dropping point at this stage, and was much the most effective attacker out there during the closing minutes.

MARMORA WINS INITIAL FIXTURE

Smelters Defeat Madoc 2-1 in Trent Valley League Fixture.

PLAYERS INJURED.

MARMORA, Jan. 15. — Marmora hockey team played its first home game in the Trent Valley League with Madoc on Monday, and with a weakened team won a 3-1 victory. The game was played on good ice, and was of an even nature. It was not marked with any semblance of rough play, but Murray, the home goalie, and Henderson, the visiting right wing man, got on the casualty list, the latter's injury to his head as he fell over his stick in the corner being of a serious nature.

Marmora scored in the first period, G. Scott beating Anderson. Madoc equalized in the second half, Stover, their new centre, upsetting Murray's calculations. In the final period each goal was bombarded in turn in an attempt to obtain a lead. Speagle, playing his first game for the homesters, delighted the fans by scoring after Anderson had fallen in clearing a shot in the last moments of the game. G. Scott added the final goal for Marmora. Teams:

Referee—W. Jackson of Peterborough.

On the Pacific Coast they know how to make their baseball snappy. According to Harry Williams, president of the Coast League, the average length of all games played in 1928 was only one hour and fifty-five minutes. In the Middle Atlantic League they have hit on the bright idea of bonusing the umpire for finishing games up quickly. If there is much more complaint about N.H.L. games dragging, the idea might be applied with advantage to hockey.

Bowmanville Blanks Petes 4-0

FAMOUS HOCKEY GAMES OF PETERBOROUGH TEAMS

By F.D.C.

One of the most interesting and exciting games played by a Peterborough hockey team was the battle in the Toronto Arena on Saturday afternoon, February 1, 1913, when the University of Toronto seniors just managed to nose out the Petes 7 to 6 in a senior O.H.A. fixture.

This game was made notable by the fact that in the second half the Petes played wide open hockey throwing everybody up on the attacks and the resut was a sensational exhibition with the visitors bombarding the Varsity nets and then speeding back to head off the Students when they broke away.

It was a brilliant exhibition are the way.

Varsity, a study crew who checked hard and played good combination, lacked the speed of the Peterborough crew but made up for it in team work. The Students scored the first goal in three minutes but Park evened it up for the Petes and the teams battled fourteen minutes to break the tie. Finally Varsity scored and repeated in 30 seconds leaving them 3 to 1 in front at the half.

Jerry Coughlin made it 3 to 2 after seven minutes fast going in the second half and Pete Spratt went through alone with a beautiful rush to tie the score. Spratt came back with another spectacular dash and passed to Kelly, who put the Petes in front 4 to 3.

A moment later Sinclair took Webster's pass and put the teams on even terms and Caldwell drilled in another sending the Students in front again, 5 to 4. Giroux's lone rush tied it all up again, but Webster sailed in and scored and Varsity were leading once more 6 to 5. Back came Giroux with another goal making the figures 6 to 6.

The Peterborough defence pair were up on the attack, leaving Dwyer alone at his end of the rink and the next few minutes were packed full of excitement. The Petes pressed but occasionally the Students broke away and a wild scramble would follow. One Kelly saved a score by diving across the Peterborough nets when Caldwell and Webster had combined inside. Dwyer prevented another by a sensational stop right after and there was a pile up of six or seven players in front of the Petes' nets. The puck was found outside when Referee Sproule got them unpiled. Finally, however, with two minutes to go Webster broke away with nobody but Dwyer to beat and drove home the winning goal for Varsity.

Jerry Coughlin and Pete Spratt played sensational hockey for Peterborough in that engagement, their stickhandling being dazzling.

The teams:

Varsity—Goal, Parker; point, German; cover, Caldwell; rover, McDowell; centre, Webster; right wing, Sinclair; left wing, Strome.

Referee—Harvey Sproule, Toronto.

NELS STEWART TIES BAILEY

Andy Blair Even With Hooley Smith and Morenz For Third.

TIGHT RACE FOR HONORS.

MONTREAL, Que., Jan. 15.—The battle for scoring honors in the National Hockey League is being waged just as closely as the fight for positions. A tie for first place in the Canadian section scoring, and a triple tie for second position made the weekly goal-getting statistics, issued last night from the office of the president Frank Calder, and including the games played on Sunday evening.

Nels Stewart, left wing of Montreal Maroons, has fought his way up to a tie with Irvin "Ace" Bailey of the Toronto Leafs for first position. Stewart has scored more goals than any other player in either section, fourteen counters having sped from his stick, while he furnished three assists. Bailey has scored ten goals, but has provided his partners with seven assists, so that each has seventeen points.

In the triple tie for second place, one newcomer and two veterans participate. The newcomer is Andy Blair, Toronto centre ice man, the veterans, Howie Morenz, of Canadiens, and Reginald "Hooley" Smith, of the Maroons. Each has thirteen points. Carson Cooper, Detroit's "shovel shot" expert, has a two-point margin over Bill Cook, right wing star of New York Rangers, in the U. S. section. Cooper has notched ten goals and given six assists. Cook leads the section in actual goals scored, with eleven, but has had only three assists. There is a tie for third place in this section. The sensational performance against Toronto Leafs, in which he gathered four points, via three gaols and an assist, jumped Harry Oliver, the Boston Bruin right-winger, right up among the leaders. He has scored nine goals and given four assists, while Frankie Boucher, centre of the Rangers, also has thirteen points.

Lionel Conacher, stalwart captain of the section-leading New York Americans, has a wide lead over every other player on the circuit in the matter of penalties. He has served 83 minutes with the timers. "Bad men" are more in evidence in the Canadian section than in the American, for the three penalty leaders of that division have each spent more time in the coop than the Americ an section leader, Eddie Shore, of Boston Bruins. Shore has served 57 minutes, while "Red" Dutton, of Montreal, has done 69, his team mate "Hooley" Smith 58, and Art Smith of Toronto, 57.

PETES MISS OPPORTUNITIES TO SCORE BY WILD SHOOTING; JAMES STARS AS GOAL-TENDER

Local Crew Plays Superior Hockey To That Displayed By Victors.

GOOD STICK HANDLING.

Tricky Combination and Speed Skating Lends Added Zest To Fixture.

In a game that featured the uncanny goal tending of Johnny James in the Bowmanville nets the Peterborough Juniors bowed to a 4 to 0 defeat in Bowmanville last night. The Petes, although they forced the play during the better half of the game and repeatedly carried the puck right up to the mouth of the goal, could not plug one past the eagle-eyed, young, James, who rose to every occasion, s.abbing the peppery shots that the Peterborough sharp shooters hurled at him from all angles with the utmost coolness and dexterity. The Petes missed may golden opportunities, by wild shooting, the rubber frequently ricocheting off the signs above the nets, missing the goal by many feet.

Not detracting in the least in the clean cut victory of the Bowmanville youngsters, they did not deserve the win on their margin of play. The Petes always had the upper hand in the matter of forcing the play and their speedy skating, smart stickhandling and tricky combination should have given them something better than a nest egg for a total. The blue and white were never outplayed and during the second period they over towered the Bowmanville sextette so much that the Goodyears only had one shot at Gillespie while the Petes sent thrust after thrust down the ice and hailed shots at James. However the goal minder is part of the team and it was he, who earned the laurel crown and victory for his team.

Fast Hockey and Clean

It was fast clean hockey all the way, both teams striving to get goals and playing an open, back checking game that sparkled with combination attacks. The Petes opened up the game with Craighton, the Petes' sorrel-topped left wing, tested James with a hard shot. Candler drew a penalty and Hatton on a lone rush pushed a hot one at James. Cripps was benched and Bowmanville took advantage, Piper slipping down the right board and lifted the rubber into the corner of the nets for the first goal. A half minute later Hooper duplicated when he bore through the Peterborough defence and in on top of Gillespie for the second counter. The Petes began to force the play in their grim efforts to even the count. Hatton lifted a high shot from the blue line which carromed off Hooper and fell in front of the nets and he slammed it in; but the goal was disallowed because Hooper was injured. The Petes breaking three men swooped down in encores but their shots either went wild, were cooly turned aside by James. Just as the period was closing Candler started a rush, passed to Piper and the third goal hopped into the Peterborough net. Gillespie did not have a chance on any of these goals.

Play All Petes

The second period was all Peterborough's although nothing in the way of a score repaid their splendid play. Creighton, Jones and Cripps all received the final pass as the Petes' attack ended in front of the nets but none could succeed in even ruffling the confidence of James, who handled all the shots without a miss. For five minutes Bowmanville never carried the puck past centre ice and the Petes kept plying James with shots. Every Bowmanville fan's face looked relieved when the session ended.

Candler made the blue and white's cause hopeless right at the outset of the third period when he wriggled through the Petes forward line and lifted a high shot between the defence that ended in the corner of the twine. From then on the Petes sent up a four man attack that kept the Bowmanville team bottled up and games ever on the Jump, but he was one leap ahead of the puck. The Petes were boring in for the rebounds and there were wild scrambles for the rubber in front of the nets. The tension was further increased by several penalties being sent by Bowmanville players, but it was of no use the Petes could not score. The game ended with James lying flat in front of the goal mouth and a melee of players in front trying to slam the puck in.

Big Improvement

The Peterborough team work showed vast improvement over their first game a week previous. The front line combined nicely for their rushes and back checked hard. They all, Cripps, Jones and Craighton shone out in their vain attempts to get goals. The defence, Hatton and Calladine, were a stalwart pair and the speedy rushes and shooting made them good also on the attack. Gillespie turned in his usual fine performance between the posts. The relief pair, Merrett and Ellis gave an account of themselves every time turned loose. All in all the blue and white aggregation turned in a pretty game.

The aforementioned Johnny James was the star of the game and he was worth three of the other Bawmanville players; but Candler, at centre was the pivot man of their attack and Piper on the wing showed that he could take a pass and pick the proper slant for his shot. Hooper on the defence was a hard man to get by and his sound body checks put many a blue shirted attacker off balance for the shot.

The teams were:

Bowmanville—Goal, James; defence, Rundel and Hooper; centre Jack Candler; right wing, Piper; left wing, Jackman; alternates, O. Jamieson and F. Jamieson.

Referee—H. H. Jacobi of Toronto.

Home Teams Victors In Trent Valley League

CAMPBELLFORD, Jan. 15.—(Examiner Staff Correspondence). —Victory remained at home in each of the three fixtures played in the Trent Valley Hockey League last night. Marmora entertained the Madoc players and sent them home with the small share of a three to one score. Frankford visited Stirling and managed to score four goals, while the home team retained the honors with seven counters. The Campbellford players motored to Tweed and back and found that they had only three goals to carry back while they left four with the home team in the distant town.

TWEED HOLDS EARLY LEAD TO BEAT CAMPBELLFORD 4-3

Max Geraldi Stars For Homesters in Trent Valley League Fixture.

CLEAN HOCKEY.

Four Minor Penalties Drawn in Final Period of Game.

TWEED, Jan. 15 (Examiner Staff Correspondence).—With the narrow margin of one goal, and that margin being seriously threatened, the local team nosed out a victory over Campbellford, with the final score of four to three. The game was exceptionally clean throughout, with no penalties at all till the final period, when the local players drew four minor punishments of one minute each. William Jackson of Peterborough was right on his toes, and kept the game moving. The home team took the affair in their own hands when Max Geraldi scored two goals in the first period. By the end of the second session, the count for the local team had been doubled, and the visitors had broken the ice with a single counter. In the last period, the visitors managed to get two more, and were doing their utmost to even the count when the final gong put an end to the struggle. More than five hundred cheering fans filed out of the arena well pleased with the game they had seen.

The first period was fast hockey, but with a certain amount of hesitation due to offsides, which seemed to slow up the game. Ingram and Blue, for the visitors, got the opening shots on the nets, but Max Geraldi scored the first goal on a solo play, resulting in a close-in shot that beat the visiting goalie. Having thus sipped of the cup of success, the local players set a furious pace, playing clean hockey and holding the balance of power in their own hands. A second goal scored on an off-side sent the crowd into bursts of cheers, only to die as quickly when the fans realized that the goal was disallowed. But they were not left long in despair; before the period ended Max Geraldi scored a second time from the left wing, and was the hero of the hour. The checking and combination of the local players was a feature of the play. Till the bell rang at the end of the period they had the edge on the play and kept the visiting players busy with defensive tactics.

The period ended with the score two to nothing in favor of the home team. There were eleven shots on the Campbellford net, against six on the home goal. The visitors were responsible for five of the offsides, while seven went to the Tweed players. There were no penalties.

Second Period.

Jackson was right on the job at the beginning of the second period and caught several kicks and off sides. Campbellford began to exert all their efforts to even the score, or at least break into the scoring. They succeeded fairly well in keeping the play in the Tweed defense area for a considerable part of the period. Although Tweed managed to break away frequently, the play always returned to their end of the ice and eventually Runions scored on a pass from Ingram when there was a hot time right in front of the home goal. The initial counter for their interests seemed to enliven the visiting players and they speeded up their game considerably. They played much better combination and seemed more like a real hockey team. Tweed was not content with the order of things and tried hard to regain their margin of two goals. At almost every pause in the play, the home team changed players and had practically a fresh team on the ice at all times. Campbellford did some substituting but not as frequently as the local players. Smith, Tweed scored neatly on a pass from Max Geraldi but the count was disallowed since he was offside at the time. Max Geraldi got struck on the ankle with the puck and had to be relieved for a few minutes. With only two minutes of the period left, Alex. Geraldi scored another goal for Tweed on a rebound from Smith. Almost immediately after Max Geraldi scored again on a pass from Alex. and when the gong sounded, the score was four to one in favour of Tweed. In this period, there were seven shots at the Campbellford net, against five on the local net. The home team was responsible for five offsides against none for the visitors. There was no penalties.

Final Period.

Every player was eager to do his part when the teams took the ice for the last stanza. All went smoothly till Alex. Geraldi drew a one minute penalty for tripping. Smith tried a couple of long shots. They served to keep the play at the Campbellford end for a few moments, but nothing more. Campbellford speeded up and a count seemed almost certain when Pollock missed a pass directly in front of the Tweed net. Smith sprang into the lime light for a few moments for the home team, while Runions by his brilliant play, drew the cheers of the rooters for his brilliant playing. Twice he managed to get a shot at the net, but without result. Martin, a spectacular player drew a penalty for tripping Three times in succession the same Campbellford player was called for being offsides. With only six minutes of the time left, McArthur scored on a rebound from Pollock and left the score at four to two for the home team. Then the play got real fast with Campbellford playing four men on the forward line, leaving Ingram alone on the defense. McArthur got a shot at the Tweed net but it went high. Smith for the home team got up to speed again. Alex. Geraldi drew a penalty for using hisi knee and R. Quinn was sent off for hooking. With only one minute to go McArthur got the puck from the face off and scored The game ended with the score of four to three for the Tweed team.

In the final period, there were five shots on each of the nets. Five offsides were chargeable to Campbellford against four to Tweed. The home team drew four penalties, while the visitors had none.

Referee—W. Jackson, Peterboro.

MILLIONAIRES BEAT BISONS

Toronto Canpros Win 2-1 Victory in Interesting Hockey Fixture.

POOR ATTENDANCE.

TORONTO, Ont., January 15 (Canadian Press). — Only a few hundred people watched the Millionaires defeat Buffalo by a 2-to-1 score in a Canpro conflict last night. The smallest crowd of the lean season was present, although the game was interesting, with the score close and plenty of good hockey.

The win put the Millionaires within reach of the leading positions, while Buffalo remained in the deadlock for last place with Hamilton, although they made a vigorous attempt to climb. On their play Buffalo looked better than a tail-end club for their defence, while guilty of one major mistake, was generally strong and the forwards compared favorably with many of the top place teams.

Percy Williams Leaves For East Wednesday

VANCOUVER, B.C., January 15 (Canadian Press). — Percy Williams, Vancouver's Olympic sprinting champion, will leave for the East on Wednesday, where he is to take part in the Melrose Games at New York early next month, according to President Bert Davison, of the British Columbia Amateur Athletic Union. He also plans to compete in other meets both in the United States and Canada.

For Colds —

How many people you know who end their colds with Aspirin! And how often you've heard of its prompt relief of sore throat or tonsilitis. No wonder millions take it for colds, neuralgia, rheumatism; and the aches and pains that go with them. The wonder is that anyone still worries through a winter without these tablets! They relieve quickly, yet have no effect whatever on the heart. Friends have often told you Aspirin is marvelous; doctors have declared it harmless. Every druggist has it, with proven directions. Why not put it to the test?

VIEWS ON SPORTS

Tomorrow night the City League will continue their schedule with one junior and three senior games.

Johnny James, the High School boy in the Bowmanville nets who wears a rugby helmet and sings during the game, was the person who beat the Junior Petes, keeping everything they heaved at him while his teammates garnered four goals. Along with the singing goalminder it was the Petes' inaccurate shooting that aided in keeping them from the score column. They played a speedier game and forced the play throughout but could do nothing with their advantage.

* * * * * *

The Lakeshore Junior group are playing a double schedule and the Petes will get two more chances at Bowmanville. If they improve as much in the next week as they did during their practices last week they have a good chance of trimming the group leading Oshawa Shamrocks. They have the combination, speed and backchecking and need a little more strength and practices in getting the shot away quickly and having it hit the corner.

* * * * * *

The St. John's team showed they were no flash-in-the-pan crew by defeating the Lindsay Midgets 3-1 and taking a firmer grip on their group leadership. The whole St. John's forward line broke fast and aided in the goal scoring, each getting one. Miller the youthful net guardian handled a host of shots which resulted from the five man attack of the Midgets during the last period.

* * * * * *

Nels Stewart has drawn up even with Irvin Bailey, the Leafs scoring ace, with 17 points each for first position in goal scoring honors of the N.H.L. Andy Blair is proving himself to be the biggest find of the season winning up to second place, and being tied such veterans of speed as Howie Morenz and Hooley Smith. The Leafs played the New York Americans two games last week and scored few goals, the Americans being the strongest defensive machine in the N.H.L.; this did not aid Bailey's position at all.

* * * * * *

Dad Ashley is still holding down a position on the Preston team. Dad was a star away back in 1915 and he was offered a chance to turn pro., but he remained with the Simon pures and with the exception of last year, when he was out on account of illness, he has performed every year.

* * * * * *

The two boys on the Oshawa Shamrock team that the Junior Petes will have to watch closely are Gunn at right wing and Black on defence. These two players starred in the four to one victory of the Motor City crew combining to get all their goals.

* * * * * *

Jimmy McLarnin, the great Canadian lightweight boxer from Vancouver, startled the New York boxing fans again by his clean cut victory over Joe Gleik, tough Brooklyn lightweight and the greatest contender for the crown, in a bout that re-opened the Gardens to boxing after the death of Tex Rickard. The Canadian is a blue-eyed Irish lad, who looks anything else but a fighter, and yet he is lightning fast and deadly with both fists.

"MOTHER KNOWS BEST"

This picture with the melodramatic title which recalls memories of the "ten-twent-thirt" vaudeville of other days, is extremely interesting. An older woman, the actress who never makes up, who lets her hair go anyway and faces the camera so that the hard lines of age come out with cruel distinctness over her countenance, is the main character. Louise Dresser as the mother, Mrs. Quail, does some superb work in this picture.

She is the woman from a little town who is possessed of one idea. Her mania is to see her daughter, a great and successful actress and she omits nothing from her life or program that will gain the desired end. Taking the money which her ineffectual husband needs for his debts, and using it to teach Sally how to dance and sing, then making the round of the "sticks" with the young girl, pawning her wedding ring to get a chance for the daughter in New York, bullying and browbeating managers, and finally seeing the success which comes as a reward—so the picture unfolds its story.

The mother has no use for men and omits them entirely from the program planned for Sally, the beautiful and clever girl who yearns for a normal life. But Cupid has his way. Bert Terris, a vaudeville pianist, cames along and Sally falls madly in love with him. Thereafter it is a conflict between the mother and daughter, the former winning out every time by feigning mortal illness when the girl wishes to leave her and marry Bert.

Sally goes to Europe and makes a tremendous success there and then the war intervenes. She entertains the men at the front with her impersonations of famous actors and then —Bert arrives once more, this time as an American soldier. She defies her mother absolutely on this occasion, and resolves to marry Bert at once. But he marches away and doesn't come back. He is reported as dead.

Sally returns to New York to open her own theatre, and there she has a complete collapse. The story, which has held the atmosphere of tension admirably up to this moment, here winds up to swift denouement. Bert appears on the scene, this time minus a leg, and Mrs. Quail, maddened by fear of Sally's death, welcomes him with open arms.

The refrain of the picture is the sentence: "Mother Knows Best," constantly repeated by Mrs. Quail as she and her daughter come into conflict. But she still knows best at the finale, whe she refuses to take the honeymoon trip with the young people and sends them off alone. She is still the dominant figure, even in defeat of her most cherished plans.

The three main figures have the entire action. Louise Dresser has a marvellous part in this mother role; Sally is the lovely daughter, acted beautifully by Madge Bellamy, and Barry Norton is the ingenuous and youthful lover, Bert Terris.

PICKWICK IS ALTERED IN BIG THEATRE

Dickens' Classic Undergoes Revision at Haymarket Playhouse.

CHARACTERS IMMORTAL

Fanatical Dickens' Purist Will Shudder When Hears of the Liberties Taken.

LONDON, Jan. 15 (By Thos. T. Champion, London Manager of The Canadian Press).—Fifty years or more ago a young unknown actor caused all London to talk of his performance of Jingle in a version of the Pickwick Papers. The young man was Henry Irving, who came to be the greatest star the English stage had seen for well-nigh a couple of centuries. No stage presentation on the large scale of Dickens' masterpiece has been given since in London the past Christmas-tide Basil Dean produced at the Haymarket "Mr. Pickwick."

Nobody will deny that Mr. Pickwick and all his companions are immortal, and are to be treated therefore with something approaching reverence. The fanatical Dickens purist will shudder when he hears some of the liberties taken with the "Posthumous Papers." But what is a poor playwright to do when he has to boil down a thousand pages, every paragraph of which, nay every line, is full of color and action, into a two-and-a-half hours' entertainment? Messts. Cosmo Hamilton and Frank Reilly have slashed ruthlessly here, telescoped mercilessly there, treated some characters as though they never existed, and put speeches into the mouths of others which they most certainly never uttered. If they had not done so the result would have been a performance taking up the best part of a week. You are never introduced to Rochester, to Eatanswill, to Bath, to Bristol or Dorking. Stiggins does not appear at all. Ben Allen and Bob Sawyer never say a word. On the other hand, the Spinster Aunt, who according to Dickens withdrew entirely after the elopement, bobs in and out at different points of the adventures.

Open in Courtyard.

However, there is much left over which to rejoice. The play opens in the courtyard of White Hart Inn, with Sam Weller cleaning the boots. Mr. Pickwick has his difference with the cabman, and Jingle appears. (Yes, it is true this really happened at the Golden Cross, but wait until you hear of some more extraordinary transmogrifications.) In the White Hart Courtyard, Old Wardle and his crowd greet the Pickwickians, Jingle entrances Rachel Wardle and tricks Tupman, and the elopment is planned and frustrated. This is telescoping the story with a vengeance, and with so many incidents following in hot haste it is small wonder that the stage action is of liveliest. The next act takes you to Mr. Pickwick's lodgings in Goswell Street, where the book is perhaps followed as faithfully as at any point of the play in representing Mr. Pickwick's so unhappily misunderstood advances to Mrs. Bardell. Following this are Mr. Winkle's adventures with a gun, which are supposed to take place at Dingley Dell, although it seems to us it was in quite another adventure that the great man took cold punch and fell asleep in the wheelbarrow. Then Manor Farm, Dingley Dell, for the Christmas festivities. The scene is a perfectly charming one, but at the risk of being hypercritical the suggestion is ventured that its gracious splendor pertains to the old-time traditional baronial hall rather than the house-place of yeoman farmers. Let it pass, though. The Christmas revels go with a proper swing, and Old Wardle's mother comes out gaily in her lavender silk dress.

Back to Mr. Pickwick's lodging for a brief space, and then to the Court of Commons Pleas at Guildhall and the famous trial. At this point, sympathy should certainly go out to the producers. Nothing but stern necessity would have caused them to cut detail at such a point. No pages of the Pickwick Papers are better known to the world at large. "Bardell versus Pickwick" is a classic. But the night is far spent, and time won't wait even for a classic.

No protesting voice is raised by the chemist who hopes the court will excuse his serving on the jury. The truth is you never see the jury, who, according to the action of the other characters, seem to be placed in the front row of the stalls. Even Sergeant Buzfuz has slightly to curtail his address. One does not need to be a Dickens fanatic to feel a sense of shock at the wind-up of the trial. Sergeant Snubbin opens his address on behalf of Mr. Pickwick, but the Judge announces he has received a message from the jury that they have already decided to award Mrs. Bardell damages!

Such an ending is neither law, nor Dickens, nor good stage-craft. Worse still, it robs us of the memorable outburst of Tony Weller.

The scene in Fleet Prison also suffers from severe compression. The prison pictures in "Pickwick" are perhaps some of the most effective Dickens ever achieved when he set out to depict squalid tragedy for in such circumstances he was apt to run towards the mawkish.

If it had been possible to allot more time for this scene it might have been worked up into an arresting contrast with the boisterous gaiety of the rest of the play. Finally, we are taken back to Dingley Dell, where Mr. Snodgrass marries Emily Wardle, and Mr. Pickwick delivers the speech which, according to the book, he delivered at Trundle's wedding the previous Christmas.

And how do the players shape in such immortal characters? Is it possible to clothe immortality in flesh and blood? If we analyze Mr. Pickwick, as Dickens gave him to us, we find him a benevolent-minded old noodle, who is largely a pivot around which half-a-hundred others antic. Charles Laughton makes up in the part very fairly and does the requisite elderly clowning with restraint. The best opportunity afforded to anyone in the caste, though, falls to George Curzon as Jingle, and he takes full advantage of it. That the play gets a good start is largely due to his work in the first act. Bruce Winton as Sergeant Buzfuz is superb. His depiction is on fresh lines and one seems really to be listening to the choleric, bullying advocate of a century back. Any actor who undertakes the part of Sam Weller sets himself a task of extreme delicacy. Eliot Makeham is ready enough with some of the celebrated figures of speech, but the Cockney of 100 years back had perhaps a drier manner of speech. The young ladies of Dingley Dell can do no more than look engaging in old-time costumes. The ungracious characters, such as Mrs. Bardell and Mrs. Cluppins, are presented as satisfactorily as circumstances permit by Miss Mary Clare and Miss Pollie Emery. Miss Susan Richmond contrives to make the Spinster Aunt amusing, especially when she goes into hysttrics in the elopement scene.

IMPORT HOUNDS IS SUGGESTED

DISCUSS MATTER.

TORONTO, Ont., Jan. 15 (by the Canadian Press).—Wolves in the Parry Sound District are becoming numerous and a menace, and it is proposed to hunt them with dogs possessed of the instinct of following wolves by scent instead of by sight, as most hounds do. The wolves are numerous in the timbered country where dogs can not well follow them by sight alone. Dr. George V. Harcourt, Conservative, M.L.A., Powassan, suggests the importation of hounds to combat the wolf menace in the Parry Sound District, and in this connection he was in Toronto this week discussing the matter with officials of the Department of Game and Fisheries, Parliament Buildings.

Dr. Harcourt says the wolves are more numerous in his district this year than ever before, and have become so bold lately as to come right out in the open and invade the outskirts of Powassan. Brush wolves, he states, are the chief offenders, although the timber variety is often seen near the town. He realizes that the ordinary wolf hound, which chases by sight, would not be of much use in the wooded districts of the North, so he is trying to locate a breed of hound which would follow the wolves by scent.

MAJOR CHARLES G. D. ROBERTS ADDRESSES LARGE AUDIENCE AT WOMEN'S CANADIAN CLUB

CENTENNIAL ODE

Speaks Frankly of His Own Distaste At Compositions Written in a Hurry.

A poem written after a dream in which the words were transmitted to the brain of the composer by the subconscious mind, was one of the quotations from his own work made by Major Charles G. D. Roberts, M.A., LL.D., F.R.S.C., when speaking to members and friends of the Women's Canadian Club at the meeting held last night in the hall of the Conservatory of Music. A capacity audience of over four hundred people greeted the visit to the city of this famous Canadian poet, novelist and historian, among his hearers being a number of small children who appeared to enjoy very much the story of the black mule and its change of heart, with which he concluded his program. For nearly two hours, Major Roberts held the attention of his audience with the reading, in clear, mellow tones, from his works in poetry and prose, interspersed by a few personal anecdotes and bits of reminiscences. His friendly and personal manner of address added to the charm of the entertainment.

The mysterious poem entitled "Beyond the Tops of Time," heard first in a dream and described later, was an elusive thing that recalled to mind something of the atmosphere of Newman's "Dream of Gerontius." Seeing in a vision a sea of faces that milled and seethed about the high tower "beyond th tops of time," in which the watcher sat, faces that cried 'Give us the dream for which we died," the listener thinks; "And still I wondered if they knew, the dream for which they died was true." Then stillness and quiet intervened and "One came with eyes of bliss, with brow of calm and lips of prayer." The watcher in the tower asked: "Which dream was true?" and the "answer fell, as soft as sleep": "To the soul made wise, all are true. All beautiful they seem in the white peace which fills our eyes."

The first quotation from his own work read by Major Roberts was an Ode written for the celebration of the Diamond Jubilee of Canada, entitled "These Three Score Years and Ten" and read by himself at the Jubilee celebration at Fredericton, New Brunswick, his own province.

Centennial Ode.

It told, in dramatic language, of "these three score years and ten, so swift have they sped," when a nation had "snared a savage continent with steel, and tamed old factions to the common weal." To the question: "Are we worthy these heroic sires?" "Make answer, fields of Flanders, fields of France, where late our young battalions marched and sang," and "embattled at the grim old lion's side, our scarred battalions laughed and fought and died."

Reading from his volume of verse, "The Vagrant of Time," the poet gave one of his own favorite bits, "In the Night Watches," a fanciful bit of loveliness in verse that was followed by a little lyric entitled "Sister to the Wild Rose."

As illustrative of the love of the beauty of common things," which characterizes this composer's work, Major Roberts read the sonnet called "The Waking Earth," also "Pumpkins in the Corn," "The Old Barn" and "The Farmer's Winter Morning," with its reiterated line, "The snow lies deep in the barnyard, the frost is white on the latch." A poetic fancy clothing ordinary things was vocalized in these little bits of rhythmical melody.

"Aylesford Lake" was the word picture of a lovely lake in the Maritimes, where "all night long the islanders slumber, but my heart is wide awake."

A ballad always has an irresistable appeal. To those who have read and loved "The Laughing Sally," it was more than a treat to hear the poet's own voice read the lines that make immortal this pirate ship, when "the black flag flew at her top, to tell how she took her toll of the sea."

But" the king's black ship was on her trail—the chase of the pirate quarry, the hunt of the tireless hound.' Then, "the wind blew up from Pernambuco" and the "Sally" fled before her pursuer, to find safe refuge in a secret cove. "Hid from view, in the black bayou," she watched the English ship strive to cross the bar and fail. Then, as chance decreed, two battleships from France came up and engaged the English ship in a bloody fight. But, "the pirate mate was a man from Devon. The captain thundered then, there is English rope to bind our necks, but we all are Englishmen."

The Pirate Ship.

So, out went the "Laughing Sally" from her safe refuge, to fight with the French ships. When the English Captain looked out over the bloody decks at dawn, he say the Frenchmen beaten and only a spar sticking up through the waves to mark the pirate ship's grave. "Yo, heave ho, for the Laughing Sally, gone down at the break o' day."

Speaking very frankly of his own distaste at times for compositions of his own, written in a hurry, and then disdained later, Major Roberts referred to one ballad that he thought was the worst ballad ever written," which brought him a hundred dollar cheque from the editor of a New York magazine, and his own disbelief in that editor's good judgment, forever after.

Quoting a little composition entitled "At Tidewater," and "The First Plowing," with "the wholesome, sweet smell of the sod, upturned from it's winter's dream," he went on to quote also three of his most recent poems, one written last Sunday and not even re-read by himself. This, a little love poem, immortalizing the thought, "Under the veil of your slumbering eyes, I caught the heart of your dream by surprise," was companioned by a tiny bit of exquisite nature verse and a little touch of modernistic verse in a poem dedicated to Pan. "I am not quite sure if it means anything," said the composer, naively when he had finished reading it.

Nature had her way again in the verses woven about the logs coming down the river, "to the mill, where scream the jaws of the eviscerating saws," and "The Cricket," a fantastic thing immortalizing the shrill-noted musician, in "It's oh, to be a cricket, in the warm, thistled thicket, where the honey drops are coming, where the bumble bees are humming—that's the thing!"

A tiny piece of nonsense verse whose creator remarked of it that it didn't mean a thing, but that had a pleasing rhyming absurdity all its own was "The Piper and the Chiming Peas," where the sweet peas tell the piper they "only play the simple airs, to suit the bumble bees."

For the children, Major Roberts read his little story of the black mule of war time days which suffered a shell barrage and a change of heart at the same time. His usually ornery nature became quite tractable and he finally rescued his driver from death in a shell hole. This little extract concluded the program.

A very appreciative and well-worded vote of thanks to the speaker was voiced by Miss Edith Murphy and seconded by Inspector A. Mowat. Mrs. J F. Allan, occupying the chair, also spoke warmly of the excellence of the program and Major Roberts acknowledged the expressions of appreciation by saying that his former visit to Peterborough and the welcome then accorded him had made him eager for a return visit. "I came back at the very first opportunity," he assured his audience, striking at the conclusion of his remarks the same note of warm friendliness and informality which pervaded his entire program.

The music for the National Anthem which opened the evening was played by Mrs. W. A. Logan.

adjust. Failing agreement by the railway heads as to their respective construction rights in Western and Northwestern Canada, the problem comes before the representatives of the people to solve. The railway committee of the House of Commons is the body which reviews all applications for railway charters and either refers to Parliament or throws them aside. Thus, the railway committee room of the Commons, will probably be the scene of a real battle between the two great systems during the coming session of Parliament.

IN POLICE COURT

Reginald Winch found himself before the Magistrate in Police Court this morning, charged with having "moonshine" in his possession and without a permit to have liquor. The outline of Winch's career, as given by the Chief, was one which disclosed the accused man's part in and previous convictions for obtaining money under false pretenses, all reading like fiction.

According to the Chief, Winch, who at one time or another has adopted the aliases of Tobin and Vermillion and others, has been going about promoting plans for a large summer resort on one of the nearby lakes, and incidentally contracting rather formidable taxi bills. He was arrested at about midnight last night by city police, who found him attempting to force a door in the south end of the city, while his two companions, on giving satisfactory answers, were allowed to go. But a woman who is alleged to have travelled with him during his "promotion" trips, appeared this morning also, as did Gordon Hilliard of Detroit and Midland. On request of the Crown, an adjournment was granted for one week, during which time Winch's career will be more fully probed.

A resident of Byersville was committed for trial on a charge of indecent assault upon a woman of that district, the Magistrate hearing sufficient evidence to justify his sending the man on for trial.

TWILIGHT CIRCLE HOLDS MEETING

Girls of George Street United Church Have a Very Enjoyable Supper.

A meeting of the Twilight Mission Circle of George Street United Church was held recently. At six o'clock the girls had a very enjoyable supper, which was provided by the Executive. The tables were decorated with blue streamers and yellow candles. The 2nd vice-president, Myrtle Stevens, took the chair for the business meeting, which was opened by repeating the Lord's Prayer in unison. The roll call and secretary's report by Aileen Clarke and the treasurer's report by Vera Squire, were read and adopted. After prayer by the leader, Mrs. W. H. Morton, Myrtle Stevens took up the 2nd chapter of the study book, "Drums in the Darkness." Dorothy Wiman gave a reading, and after singing a hymn the meeting was dismissed with the Mizpah benediction.

At a previous Executive meeting four groups of girls, with fourteen girls in each group, with Evelyn Routly, Lilian Wiman, Verna Strong and Margaret Deyell as leaders, were appointed. It was decided to make maps of Africa, mark them off in squares and sell each square for 10 cents, in order to raise money for the Circle. This is described as "Selling Shares in Africa."

ATTORNEY ORDERS SECOND AUTOPSY

Authorities Believe Mrs. Ruth Died From Suffocation and Incineration.

WATERTOWN, Mass., January 15 (Canadian Press). — Still another legal obstacle remained to be handled to-day before the body of Mrs. George Herman Ruth, estranged wife of Babe Ruth, could be taken to its last resting-place. Mrs. Ruth died last Friday night in a fire at the home of Dr. Edward H. Kinder, Boston dentist, here. She had been known to neighbors as Mrs. Helen Kinder, and authorities started an investigation into the circumstances of her death when it was learned on Sunday that she was Mrs. Ruth. That was shortly before the hour which had been set for the funeral.

District Attorney Robert T. Bushnell ordered a second autopsy to be performed to-day on Mrs. Ruth's body, although he said that he was convinced that Mrs. Ruth died from suffocation and incineration.

Meanwhile Dr. Kinder, who had been in hiding since early on Saturday, reported to the Watertown police of his own accord and submitted to four hours' questioning. Afterwards Chief of Police John F. Milmore announced that Dr. Kinder had satisfactorily expalined his connections with Mrs. Ruth, and with the circumstances of her death.

Dr. Kinder told police that he had lived with Mrs. Ruth at intervals since 1927, that he had never married her, but that there was nothing "morally wrong" with his relations with Mrs. Ruth. The chief declared that Babe Ruth knew that his wife was living at the Watertown address with him. The Ruths have been separated for three years.

DEATH TOLL LOWER FROM FLU EPIDEMIC

Steady Improvement in Influenza-Pneumonia Situation in Toronto District.

TORONTO, Ont., Jan. 15 (Canadian Press). — There is a steady improvement in the influenza-pneumonia situation in Toronto and suburbs, according to reports issued from hospitals to-day. The number of new cases admitted is almost negligible.

Overnight deaths from the diseases numbered 12, according to figures registered at the City Clerk's office. The death total this week so far has been considerably lower than during the previous week. Deaths last night were divided, six being attributed to the flu, complicated with pneumonia, and six from pneumonia alone.

Increasing in States.

WASHINGTON, D.C., Jan. 15. — (Canadian Press).—Reports to the Public Health Service to-day showed influenza is still increasing in prevalence in New England and the Eastern States, while the peak of the wave has been passed in the West and West Central States.

Twenty-three states to-day reported a total of 55,429 new cases for the week ending January 12, compared with 60,820 cases during the preceding week in the same territory. Public health officials said, however, that they could not determine whether prevalence for the country at large is decreasing until complete reports were received.

TRAIN DERAILED.

C. N. R. Freight Train Leaves Track Near Sarnia—No One Injured.

SARNIA, Ont., January 15 (Canadian Press). — Nineteen cars of Canadian National Railways freight train 487, west-bound from Buffalo to Sarnia, left the track six miles east of Sarnia at six a.m. to-day when a wheel flange on a freight car in the centre of the train broke. No one was injured. Traffic was blocked on both of the double tracks. Wrecking crews from Sarnia and London which rushed to the scene expected to have the right of way restored by this evening. Trains to and from Sarnia proceeded via Stratford.

WEDDING BELLS

BROWN—HUGGINS

A pretty but quiet wedding was solemnized at the home of Mr. Jos. Huggins, South Monaghan, Ont., on Saturday, Jan. 12th, 1929, at the hour of 12 o'clock, when his only daughter, Edna, was united in marriage to Garnet H. Brown, of Peterborough, Ontario. Rev. John Riddell of Centreville Presbyterian church officiated.

The bride was given in marriage by her father and the young people were unattended, only the immediate friends being present.

At the close of the ceremony a dainty wedding luncheon was served, after which Mr. Brown and his bride left on a trip to Toronto and other points, the bride travelling in a brown charmeuse dress with gold trimming, gold lace hat, and seal coat with sable trimming.

On their return they will reside in Peterborough.

STEPHEN PARRAGREEN

OMEMEE, Jan. 16 (Examiner Correspondence). — The community in general has been cast into gloom over the death of the late Stephen Parragreen, who for the past four years has been caretaker of the Emily Cemetery and the Presbyterian Cemetery as well. Mr. Parragreen was an English gardener and took great pride in his work. On different occasions he not only acted as organist but leader of the singing in the United Church at Mount Pleasant, where he resided. His death was due to influenza, followed by pneumonia.

The funeral was held on Monday afternoon, following a private service at the house, and the body was conveyed to the United Church where a public service was held. The funeral cortege then wended its way to the Emily Cemetery, where the burial service was read by Rev. Mr. Riddell of Millbrook, in the McCrea Memorial Chapel.

Among the many floral tributes were those of the two cemetery companies and the church. The bearers also represented both companies, and were: Messrs. Lamb and R. Johnston, of Omemee; R. Graham and H. Bland of Mount Pleasant, and H. Gardiner and F. Fee.

To the sorrowing widow and two daughters, Mrs. G. Wilson and Mrs. A. Wilson, is extended the sympathy of the whole community.

COUPLE LOSE LIVES IN FIRE

Industrial Magnate and Wife Suffocated in Montreal Home.

RESIDENCE DESTROYED.

MONTREAL, Que., January 15 (Canadian Press). — Hiram L. Piper, president of the Railway Supply Company, bearing his name, and his wife, sister of Sir James Carruthers, lost their lives to-day when fire destroyed their residence in Westmount, a local suburb. Death was due to suffocation. Mr. Piper was a prominent figure in traffic circles in this city, and was in intimate touch with railway life in the Dominion. He came to Montreal from Toronto in 1903.

SECOND EDITION BEING ISSUED

Broadcasting Corporation Is Getting Out a Second Weekly Journal.

DISPUTE IS RAGING.

LONDON, January 15 (Canadian Press Cable). — Apparently Premier Stanley Baldwin will not be troubled any further by the dispute between newspaper interests and the British Broadcasting Corporation regarding the projected publication by the corporation of a second journal to be issued weekly. The Broadcasting Corporation is now prepared to receive representations from the proprietors of existing publications. The new paper will appear this week, but it is not to contain more than ten per cent. original contributed matter unconnected with broadcasting, the remainder to consist of reprints of talks which have been broadcast and comment thereon; articles relating to radio programs and news of the service generally. The Corporation says it has no intention of publishing further papers and will not accept more advertisements than are necessary, with the paper's other revenue, to cover the actual cost of publication.

GENERAL BOOTH REFUSES TO QUIT

chief of staff urging the High Council to stop further action and stating there was every prospect of a recovery of the General.

"The impression was thought to be that the Chief of Staff had authorized the message, but on referring the matter to him it was found that he did not have knowledge of the existence or the issue of the message and had no wish that such messages be sent him."

Action Expected To-day.

Definite action on the continuance in office of General Bramwell Booth, Commander of the Salvation Army, probably will come to-day on the opinion of leaders of both factions of the organization, they agreed on this point after it had become known that the General's reply to the suggestion of the High Council that he retire, had been delivered late yesterday at Sunbury-on-Thames.

Both sides said they were completely in the dark as to whether the aged leader would make a countermove against retirement when the High Council re-assembled. The reform element said, however, that if he has declined to retire, the Council would at once proceed to vote on his physical fitness to continue his duties.

They predicted that the ballot, if the case came to that would be overwhelmingly in favour of a new head of the Army and Reform in its basic organization.

PUBLIC HEARING OPENED AT OTTAWA

Quebec—has granted a seventy-five year lease of the water power rights concerned." Mr. Geoffrion declared "and the Dominion authorities must have very good reason before they could refuse this application which comes under the Navigable Waters Act only."

For the Dominion Marine Association, Francis King, K. C., said the Association was being placed in an unfair position. He contended that the interests of the Beauharnois Interests should prove conclusively that this diversion would not interfere with navigation.

"All our enemies have at all times have been trying to deceive the people by saying we would practically empty the St. Lawrence," Mr. Geoffrion retorted. The present application, he continued, would permit the diversion of 40,000 cubic feet per second and nothing more.

More Closely Defined.

D. L. McCarthy, K. C., Toronto, for the Soulonge Power Co., said that according to engineering advice in his possession the diversion of 40,000 cubic feet per second could not provide 500,000 horse power. The application of the Beauharnois Company, he proceeded, should be more closely defined.

Mr. Geoffrion repeated that all his company asked for was authority to divert 40,000 cubic feet per second. If any more power were required to produce the necessary horse power, his clients would have to get the permission of the Province of Quebec, he declared. He was quite willing to have a provision made that the Beauharnois Company could only divert 40,000 cubic feet per second.

"The question we are interested in at the moment," Hon. Charles Stewart, Minister of Interior, interjected, "is how would this proposal affect present or future navigation. Is it going to lower the levels of Lake Louis or Lake St. Francis?"

Henry Holgate, civil engineer expressed the opinion that diversion of 40,000 cubic feet of water each second would have a serious affect on navigation on the St. Lawrence at this point. He did not care to forecast the full result through the proposed diversion, but, for one thing—the rapid boats of the Canada Steamship Line would be forced out of business for tourist traffic by the creation of many cross currents.

FOCH PUTS UP A BIG FIGHT

eral conference late to-day, after which a communiqu will be issued.

It was learned that kidney complications which are appearing in Marshal Foch's condition, while not likely to produce a sudden collapse as would be the case in a renewed heart attack, are regarded as extremely dangerous by the doctors because of their effect on the strength of the famous patient.

Clemenceau Is Ill

Georges Clemenceau, famous French war-time Premier, has been confined to his home for several days with the grippe.

His condition was reported not to be serious excepting for the possibility of complication but because of the great age of the patient—he is 87—bad colds are always regarded by his entourage as more or less disquieting.

The absence of the name of Clemenceau or a representative in the huge volume in the ante-chamber of Marshal Foch's house which gradually is being filled with all the names of prominent figures, caused enquiries to be made at Clemenceau's house.

"I have been sick with grippe for nearly a week," the "Tiger" sent word back to callers who queried about his failure to ask after Foch's condition. "I confide to nobody an expression of my personal sentiment."

It was through Clemenceau's untiring efforts that Foch was appointed Generalissimo of the Allied Armies. They then were the staunchest of friends, but later the friendship cooled especially during the Peace Conference. Clemenceau's non-committal reply explaining his non-appearance at the Marshal's sick bed proved very puzzling to inquirers seeking to determine the present relations between the two men.

Seven passengers were injured, two seriously, and the motorman had a miraculous escape from death when he was thrown through a front window.

LOCAL LODGE HOLDS BANQUET

Woodmen of the World Instal Their Officers For 1929.

REPORTS READ.

Installation of officers for the year 1929 and the reading of reports regarding the business of last year were the chief items of business discussed at the Annual Banquet of the Woodmen of the World held in their lodge room last night. Many of the old members who have not attended the meetings for a number of years were in attendance to welcome the new members. The banquet given by the ladies committee under the convenorship of Sovereign Millard was largely responsible for making the gathering such a huge success.

Officers installed by Head Commander Clair Jarvis of London were:

C.C. Sov. W. Johnston.
Adv. Lt. Sov C Tucker
Banker Sov. J. Bath.
Clerk Sov. H. G. Freeman.
Escort Sov. M. Wells.
Watchman Sov. C. Crouter.
Sentry Sov. A. Hawkin.
Managers—M. Cook, N. Murray and B. Meeks.
P. C. C. A Murray.
Physicians—Dr J. A. Morgan and Dr. G. G. Loudon.

The reports presented by the retiring officers were found to be satisfactory by the members and last year's officers were tendered a hearty vote of thanks for their work during the past year.

Deputy Consul Fred Sutcliffe gave a full and concise report of auditing of all books pertaining to the Peterborough camp. The members present were delighted to hear this report, which gave them a fuller understanding of the local financial conditions, and feel very optimistic of the success which is being made to ensure future prosperity.

Before sitting down to the banquet table H. C. C. Clair Jarvis gave a very instructive address on the work of the Order, and especially going deeply into the financial strength of the society. The Woodmen of the World is a strong insurance and fraternal order under Dominion Government cooperation, he said. The Woodmen were pioneers in adopting adequate premiums and the first Canadian fraternal society to issue 20 payment life policies, and endowment at 65 or prior death. In addition to these, they also issue double benefit policy at 65; while life, 20 year term, sick and accident and funeral benefits, also juvenile insurance. In 1914 the gross assets were $351,000. The last audit showed the Order's assets to be $1,647,982.00.

Following Mr. Jarvis' address local members voiced their intention of keeping the Peterborough Camp at the top of the list a position which they now occupy in the Canadian Order.

HIGH COUNCIL TO TAKE OPEN VOTE ON BOOTH

General Fitness To Hold Command of Salvation Army Is Discussed.

ADJOURNMENT EXPECTED.

Admission Is Refused To Attorney Representing Commander-in-Chief.

Sunbury-On-Thames, Jan. 16. (C.P.)—The sixth day's session of the High Council of the Salvation Army opened to-day with th prospect that a ballot would be taken by early afternoon on the question of General Bramwell Booth's fitness to hold his generalship.

It was understood that this would be an open vote as such a method was decided upon yesterday evening by a vote of 54 commissioners after much debate.

Should the ballot, as forecast by those well informed on the matter decree the retirement of the General, the Council would probably adjourn for two or three days to enable candidates for the vacant office to prepare their platforms. It was understood that each candidate must declare openly before the Council the reforms that he or she proposes to make and promise to carry them out before any vote will be taken.

Refuse Admission To Attorney.

It was also stated in a well informed quarter that the Council yesterday by about the same vote as that which decided upon an open ballot, voted not to allow Atorney Jowitt to appear before it on behalf of General Booth.

The High Council adjourned for lunch at one o'clock. It is understood that the Council is hampered in reaching a decision because various points have had to be referred to sub-committee appointed to deal with legal questions.

It was learned also that the question of a successor to General Booth also was discussed.

An offical statement was issued after the noon adjournment, reading as follows:

"The High Council of the Salvation Army resumed its business at Sunbury to-day. The weather was bright and cold and sunshine for the first time since the Council's assembly was much appreciated. The proceedings began by singing "He Leadeth Me, Oh Blessed Thought," from the Salvation Army Hymn Book after which Lieu-

ENGLISH LADY FLIER COMPLETES FLIGHT

CROYDON, Eng., Jan. 16. — (Canadian Press).—Lady Bailey landed her light plane here this afternoon after flying from France, and thus completing her long, lone air journey to Cape Town and return. She left the southern tip of Africa on May 12.

Owing to the refusal of the authorities of the Sudan to allow her to cross certain dangerous territory unaccompanied, she took a route to the west, flying across the Congo, Nigeria, French West Africa and Morocco to Spain and France. She landed at many out-of-the-way places and sometimes had difficulty in replenishing the small supply of clothing which she carried in one suitcase.

Rear End Collision Occurs On Main Line Near Chatham.

SEVERAL INJURED.

CHATHAM, Ont., Jan. 16 (Canadian Press).—Four persons received minor injuries and traffic was delayed for about ten hours when the Canadian National Railway Flier, No. 10, eastbound, crashed into the rear of a standing Wabash freight train, seven miles west of here, at an early hour to-day.

The railway line was enveloped in one of the worst fogs ever experienced here, and the passenger train was right up on the rear of the freight before the crew was aware of the danger. After applying the emergency brakes, the engineer and fireman leaped from the cab, only a moment before the crash. These two men and two passengers sustained minor injuries.

Harry M. Chart of London, Ont., was the engineer of the Canadian National train. George Dow, also of London, was fireman. Both men escaped with slight bruises and scratches. Mrs. Louis LePage of Windsor, and W. G. McHugh of Toronto were passengers, suffered from shock.

300 ARE LOST WHEN CHINESE STEAMER SINKS

Only Twenty-three Survivors Are Known To Have Been Rescued.

ONE LIFEBOAT LAUNCHED

Vessel Sank a Few Minutes After Striking a Rock Off Waglan.

HONG KONG, Jan. 16 (Canadian Press).—More than 300 lives apparently were lost to-day in the sinking of the Chinese steamer Hsinwah.

The vessel sank a few minutes after striking a rock off Waglan.

Only 23 survivors were known to have been picked up. One survivor said that the vessel carried 300 Chinese passengers, and most of the crew down with her.

The survivors said the vessel, which is owned by the China Merchants' Navigation Company, left Swatow yesterday at noon and encountered heavy seas and a strong wind. At 3.40 a.m. to-day, the ship struck a rock.

One Lifeboat Launched.

The vessel filled rapidly with water. It was believed that only one lifeboat was launched. In this were a boatswain, 15 members of the crew and four passengers.

The lifeboat tossed about on the heavy seas for about an hour and was sighted by a junk just as the Hsinwah heeled over and sank.

The junk brought the 20 survivors to Hong Kong.

Another junk picked up Chief Officer Jacobsen and two Chinese. All wore lifebelts, but were so numbed by cold that they were unable to grasp ropes thrown to them. The fishermen jumped into the water and lifted them aboard the junk.

Search for other survivors was being continued this afternoon.

The Hsinwah was of 1,040 tons. The ship was commanded by Captain Jensen. The chief and second engineers were British and the other officers were either Russian or Chinese.

14 ARE KILLED IN TRAIN CRASH

Engineer and Crew Are Reported To Have Been Drunk in Cab.

GOING AT HIGH RATE.

TURNUSEVERINU, Rumananla, Jan. 16. —(Canadian Press). — Railroad inspectors said to-day that drunkeness on the part of the engineer and crew of the Bucharest-Temesvar express cost the lives of 14 persons. In addition to the fatalities about two score passengers were injured last night at Prunisoru, near here, when the express crashed into a local train which had been derailed.

The express was plunging along at 55 miles an hour in the dead of night when the crash occurred. The engineer of the express, which was heavily laden, was apparently blind to all signals.

In their excitement over the derailed local train station officials apparently forgot about the onrushing Bucharest Express which ploughed into the passenger coaches of the local train like a catapult.

GENERAL BOOTH ISSUES PUBLIC REPLY TO ARMY

Commander Declares He Has Worked Hard For 54 Years In Interests of Salvationists.

WILL NOT RETIRE.

Legally High Council Has No Power To Propose Or Make Changes Says Commander.

LONDON, Jan. 16 (Canadian Press) —General Bramwell Booth, head of the Salvation Army, who sent a secret reply to the High Council meeting at Sunbury, which had requested his resignation, last night issued a statement to the press, giving the first public review of his position.

His statement read:

"For 54 years I spent all my time and energy and toiled incessantly amidst burdens of anxious care such as few men are called upon to bear in extending and leading the Salvation Army. I have never before had a prolonged rest, but some months ago was ordered away by doctors so that I might have a complete cessation from work.

"November last my illness became critical, and I have since learned that, following upon certain published bulletins indicating that my recovering was doubtful, the High Council was called to consider the question of the future.

"It has been said that had the seven commissioners who requested the council to be called believed I should recover, this step would not have been taken. This has, however, been done and the High Council has met to adjudicate upon my fitness for my position, and with the desire to discuss proposals for radical changes in the constitution of the Army.

No Power to Make Changes

"Legally the High Council has absolutely no power even to propose, let alone to make changes in the constitution, but I wrote to the council stating I should be prepared to consider any feasible scheme for broadening the constitution, and suggested appointing a special commission to consider what changes were desired and how far they were practicable. I also asked for a little time in order to regain my normal health, which my doctors have advised me I have every hope of doing.

"I am informed that my letter to the council was scarcely considered and I was asked in reply to retire from office under what amounts to nothing less than a threat of expulsion.

Future Leader Unknown to Him

"Why should I retire? My leadership at the moment may not be what it was, but what guarantee or assurance have I that I would be replaced by one who would seek first and foremost the principles of the Salvation Army?

"I am responsible before God for the well-being of this great organization to which I have devoted my life. I feel I should be less than a man, let alone the leader of a great religious organization if I agreed to a request to retire at a time when, as I understand, there is agitation to change the foundation upon which it rests.

"Therefore I am compelled to refuse to do so."

General's Condition Shows Improvement; Heart Is Stronger

War-Time Generalissimo Has Been Battling For His Life, But From Latest Reports He Appears To Have Again Been Victorious.

QUEEN MARY SENDS MESSAGE TO FORMER LEADER

REV. FATHER FOCH, A BROTHER, IS SUMMONED

Georges Clemenceau, Former Premier of France, Suffering From Grippe, Is Expected To Be Able To Resume Work Before End of Week.

PARIS, France, Jan. 16. — (Canadian Press).—The condition of Marshal Foch, it was learned on unimpeachable authority late today, is much improved and the Marshal was felling better and stronger this afternoon than at any time since his heart attack on Monday.

Dr. Davenieres, the Marshal's army physician, called at intervals of every two hours and at noon Dr. Hertz-Boyer made a brief call. Both physicians will visit the patient again late this afternoon and there will be a general consultation early this evening.

The war-time Generalissimo is battling for his life. There being intermittent weakness of the heart and then reactions during which he is somewhat stronger. The fact that his brother, who is the Rev. Father Foch, has been summoned to come to Paris from Montpellier is interpreted as indicating that the doctors feel the Marshal's condition is most serious.

Little Yvette Fournier, the Marshal's granddaughter, came to luncheon at his home to-day and sat at the table with her grandmother and mother.

"Where is Grandpape? Why doesn't he eat. I want to see him," she said, but this latter plea had to be denied.

None of the thousands of telegrams which have been arriving daily from many parts of the world has been shown to Marshal Foch. One of these messages came from Queen Mary of Britain and after saying that she was deeply distressed it mentioned what great encouragement it would be to the King if he knew that he was fighting the same battle alongside with Marshal Foch.

NEXT MOVE IN BIG POWER FIGHT IS WITH FEDERAL GOVERNMENT

Conference With Ministers Yesterday Marked Important Phase in Gigantic Battle.

SITUATION DESCRIBED.

Hearing Was Called To Give Opponents of Scheme Opportunity To State Objection.

OTTAWA, Ont., Jan. 16 (Canadian Press).—The public hearing into the merits and the demerits of the project sponsored by the Beauharnois Light, Heat and Power Company, which envisages a fourteen mile power canal to connect Lake St. Francis with Lake St. Louis in the province of Quebec, constructed to develop half a million hydro-electric horse-power, has come and gone, and the next move rests with the Dominion Government. The battle which raged yesterday in the chambers of Hon. J. C. Elliott, K.C., Minister of Public Works, marked an important phase in a gigantic fight of contending power interests for the right to build works of this nature, while the inland steamship companies were also drawn into the engagement. Whether the matter will be settled without reference to Parliament, is problematical.

The hearing yesterday was called in order to give opponents of the scheme an opportunity to state their objections, and in equal measure to give the Beauharnois protagonists the chance to answer such objections. The occasion was embraced to ventilate all the problems which such an immense project involves.

Situation Described

As the matter rests now, the situation may be briefly stated as follows:

The Beauharnois Light, Heat and Power Company sought and obtained from the Quebec Legislature last session a franchise to construct a 14-mile canal from Hungry Bay in Lake St. Francis to Melocheville, on Lake St. Louis. This would be a power and navigation canal, 4,000 feet wide throughout most of its length and with a depth of 30 feet for one-eighth of that width. The remaining 3,500 feet would be excavated at a depth of 10 feet. This 30-foot channel would be constructed to take care of navigation.

At the same time the Beauharnois

PUBLIC MEETING OF EX-SOLDIERS

Veterans Invited By Hon. G. N. Gordon To Hear Service Station Discussion.

All War Veterans are invited to attend a meeting in the Legion Hall on Thursday evening at 8 o'clock, to discuss the question of the establishing of a service station on George Street, opposite Confederation Square. The meeting is being called by the Hon. G. N. Gordon, K.C., who will describe the station it is proposed to erect and its attractiveness.

It was at an open meeting of War Veterans on November 29, last year, that the original resolution opposing the station's erection was moved by H. Burrows, and carried.

At Monday's meeting of the City Council it was intimated that the mover of the resolution is prepared to withdraw his opposition, and this meeting is called to offer him that opportunity, and also to enable those interested in the building of the station to point out its advantages.

The original motion was not an official act of the Canadian Legion, but at the next meeting of that organization, on December 17, the following resolution was adopted, to be forwarded to the City Council:

"Whereas: The members of Peterborough Branch of the Canadian Legion have had the opportunity of

RIVER PROPERTY IS MENACED BY FLOES

Worst Ice Jam For Many Years Piling Up in Niagara River.

NIAGARA FALLS, Ont., Jan. 16.—(Canadian Press). — The worst ice jam for many years in piling up in the lower river, and the water has risen eleven feet above normal. The ice is only thirty feet from the big Hydro-Power House at Queenston.

Buildings on both sides of the river are menaced and the buildings at Queenston Docks, owned by the Canada Steamship Lines, are being removed as much as possible. Two feet of water covers the docks, usually away above water level.

At the Canadian-Niagara plant, production has been cut by 12,000 watts, due to ice and low level of water in the intake.

A. S. Robertson, engineer at the Queenston Power House, said that conditions are improving. The river level has fallen a little over a foot, leaving it just about nine feet above normal. The ice is beginning to move slightly, thus relieving the situation.

BIG WAVE STRIKES MAJESTIC KILLING ONE OF THE COOKS AND INJURING SEVERAL OF THE CREW

Steel Bulkheads Are Twisted and Part of Cargo Is Ruined.

SEVERAL NARROW ESCAPES.

Third Class Passengers Are Removed To Other Quarters On the Steamer.

NEW YORK, N.Y. Jan. 16.—(Canadian Press).—One cook was killed and several other members of the crew were injured bya gigantic wave that surged over the bow of the White Star liner Majestic on the crossing completed when the ship docked here to-day.

The wave twisted steel bulkheads, wet the mail, ruined part of the cargo and necessitated removal of the 289 third class passengers to other quarters.

The wave smashed in a forward hatch imprisoning eight members of the crew who were in their bunks in the forecastle. The water was eight feet deep there and the trapped seamen swam about until they found a break in a wooden bulkhead through which they crawled to safety; several of them suffering from abrasions.

The water broke down the doors of the third class passenger quarters forward but because of the time of day most of these passengers were out on deck. There were some instances of hysteria but no general panic. A few of the passengers were trapped below decks by the broken doors and had to be freed with axes.

Passengers Removed

After the wreckage was cleared away the third class passengers were transferred to the third class tourist quarters aft and then for the first time the first and second class passengers also quartered aft; became generally aware of the seriousness of the situation.

All equipment forward, including two large derricks, the forward ventilators and the bell standard, was carried away by the wave. Half of the 10,384 sacks of mail carried were stowed around the first hatch that broke. Under the wreckage of the hatch cover and girders could be seen two smashed automobiles and below that was sodden cargo.

Attempt to Salvage Everything

There were 148 men, 95 women and 46 children in the third class and it took three quarters of an hour to transfer them to the tourist quarters, the delay being occasioned by the insistence of many to attempt to salvage their belongings from the swamped berths.

The Sergeant stated that they had made particularly sure that it was a blackbird.

Settlement of Roman Question Will Permit Pope To Leave Vatican.

ENTITLED TO ROYAL HONORS

ROME, January 16 (Canadian Press). — The Vatican, which has been maintaining entire reticence on the question of settlement of the long pending Roman question, conitnued to preserve a more or less non-committal attitude to-day.

In response to requests from foreign correspondents who have been asking for confirmation or denial that an agreement on the settlement of the problem had been reached, a Vatican spokesman said:

"No agreement has been signed. So far only conversations have taken place and projects drawn up."

Then, after admitting that much, he resumed:

"In reality the whole thing can be summed up by the proverb: 'Don't count chickens before they are hatched.'"

A definite accord having been reached on the Roman question, speculation has started in both Quirinal and Vatican spheres as to what action by both parties will follow the actual signature of the accord by Premier Mussolini and Cardinal Gasparri, Papal Secretary of State.

It is understood in Italian court circles that King Victor Emmanuel will be the first visitor to Pope Pius under the new state of things. While in all probability this first call will LONDON, Jan. 16. — (Canadian Press). — British official advices state that fighting still continues at Kabul despite the abdication of Amanullah as King.

The situation in Afghanistan is confused, but it is believed that Bachai Sakao, the rebel leader, has entered the capital.

There is no apprenhension regarding the safety of the British Minister, Sir Francis Humphrys, at the Legation.

In British official circles denial was made of the comment in the German and other continental press implicating Great Britain in Amanullah's downfall.

YORKSHIRE MIGRATION BODY REPORTS FAVORABLY OF CANADA

Members On Dominion Trip Find An Ever Increasing Demand For Labor.

BIG OPPORTUNITIES FOUND.

Most Vigorous Campaign Is Needed To Arouse the Briton, the Report States.

LONDON, Jan. 16 (By Thomas T. Champion, London Manager of the Canadian Press).—The report of the Yorkshire Voluntary Migration Committee, made public to-day, stated the delegates who visited Canada to study labor conditions, are convinced Canadians desire and prefer British emigrant, and " a most vigorous campaign is needed to arouse the Briton to the great opportunities awaiting him."

"Unfortunately," the report states, "despite generous scheme of assisted passage granted British nationals, they have failed to come forward in sufficient numbers to meet the ever-growing demand for labor. There appears to be a marked disinclination to see more favorable conditions overseas. Meanwhile other nationals without the generous facilities enjoyed by the Briton have not been slow in taking advantage of the situation. They come forward in ever-increasing numbers, and while many in the distressed areas of England are enduring great privation, these men of foreign stock are enjoying prosperity. We are convinced a most vigorous campaign is needed to arouse the Briton to the great opportunities awaiting him."

The committee reported a scheme of seasonal employment as an aid to emigration was enthusiastically received in Canada, and the committe was convinced the majority taking advantage of this scheme would become permanent settlers.

"Prairie loneliness such as we visualize," the report continues, "is non-existent owing to the advent of the telephone and radio, and the distance from homes was found to be surprisingly small, considering the vastness of the country."

"As the Empire Marketing Board fosters trade, so should there be an organization to encourage the fluidity of labor throughout the Empire," the report concludes.

Buddhists Are Using Hymns Sung By Christians

LONDON, Jan. 16 (Canadian Press).—Buddhists are appropriating hymns hitherto used only by Christians, according to Rev. George McNeal, head of the Wesleyan Central Mission. "O for a Thousand Tongues" is being used by them, the name of Buddah being substituted for that of Christ. "My this means the Buddhists are attempting to graft upon their gloomy religion some of the radiance of Christianity," he says.

PHYSICIANS REPORT KING IS STRONGER

His Majesty's Slow Progress Is Bein Maintained, Bulletin Says.

LONDON, Jan. 16 (Canadian Press) —It was officially stated at Buckingham Palace to-day that King George's slow progress was being maintained.

It is understood from an authoritative source that the King is now definitely stronger than at any time since the beginning of his illness. The increase in strength, however, has been very gradual and cannot be measured from day to day but, as compared with a fortnight ago, His Majesty is considerably strengthened.

The difficulty of persuading the King to take nourishment has been largely overcome, and for the past week he has been taking more food. This has been reflected in his increased strength with the result, consequently, that considerable confidence now exists at Buckingham Palace.

COL. LAWRENCE NAMED

Britain Is Alleged To Have Known Why Frontier Princes Rose in Rebellion.

BERLIN, Jan. 16. — (Canadian Press). — Several Evening Papers yesterday expressed the belief that in the fall of King Amanullah, of Afghanistan, Great Britan won important diplomatic ground at the expense of Moscow.

The Deutsche Allgemeine remarked that the world revolutionists in the Kremlin have every reason to bewail the abdication because it means the end for an indefinite term of Soviet influence in Kabul. It affirms that from the moment Amanullah openly sided with Russia, it was clear that Great Britain would not permit a victory for him over the rebels.

The Lokalanzeiger said that the British Government feared that the example of an independent king of Afghanistan would enhance the ambitions for freedom of Indian Princes.

Boersenzeitung called the new King Inayatullah notoriously pro-British.

The Deutschee Zeitung says that Great Britain knows why the Afghanistan tribual princess in the neighorhood of the British frontier were the first to rebel and why they were well armed. Other newspapers repeated the reeport that Colonel T. E. Lawrence has been concerned in the affair.

Official disclaimers have been made of the reports that Colonel Lawrence was working in any way on this Afghanistan situation. As 'Private Shaw' in the British Air Force in India, Lawrence was for some time stationed on the Afghan border but was recently ordered away from there because of the rumour in circulation.

BROTHER FOUND IN STOCKYARDS

George Percival, Brother of Newly Elevated Earl of Egmont, Is Expert Sheep Shearer.

MAN OF SIMPLE TASTES.

VANCOUVER, B.C., Jan. 16 (Canadian Press). — George Perceval, younger brother of the newly-elevated Earl of Egmont, the Alberta farmer who suddenly inherited his title and an estate valued at $1,000,000, works from 7 a.m. to 4.30 p.m. daily, at a stockyards here as a sheep shearer—one of the most difficult jobs there. He is a good sheep shearer, says Superintendent R. Brassell, for he is the only man to hold the job for 18 months.

George Perceval is a man of simple tastes, and has no love for publicity. When sought out yesterday he retired somewhat hastily from any discussion of family affairs. And when he glimpsed the photographer's camera he fled behind the big white stockyard barns and back to the cattle.

"I won't have anything printed about me, and anything you want to know about me you better ask my brother. You'll get all the details necessary there. Good-bye," he said.

George Perceval is a man of about fifty. Yesterday he was wearing blue overalls and jumper coat, mud-spattered, heavy working boots, and crowning his costume was a battered felt hat.

He has spent years on the Canadian prairies bunching cattle and handling heavy range work. For the past three years he has been living here with his wife, having come to Vancouver from Calgary.

UNITED STATES RENOUNCES WAR

Only One Vote Recorded Against Multilateral Treaty in U. S. Senate.

REPORT SUBMITTED.

WASHINGTON, D.C., Jan. 16 (Canadian Press). — Adherence of the United States to the multilateral treaty pledging the nations of the world to renounce war was voted yesterday by the Senate, 85 to 1.

Applause of the women-filled galleries echoed the announcement of the overwhelming vote. Mumblings and some hisses from the galleries greeted the reading by the Senate Clerk of the name of Senator Blaine, Republican, of Wisconsin, as the only one recorded in the negative.

A vote was made possible when Chairman Borah of the Foreign Relations Committee, in charge of the treaty's two weeks' journey through the Senate, acceded to the demand for the submission of an interpretative report by his committee. He made the report with the stipulation that it was not to be considered as changing the treaty in any way, or as affecting any reservation of it.

The report reiterated the previously expressed views of Senator Borah, that the treaty did not curtail right of self-defence, and that the Monroe Doctrine was a part of this country's system of national defence. The report was laid before the Senate, but not acted upon.

Car Makes First Crossing Of Rice Lake On the Ice

(Examiner Correspondence)

BAILIEBORO, Jan. 16. — The first car of the season to travel from Gore's Landing to Bewdley by way of Rice Lake made the trip on Monday about noon. The car seemed to be travelling without any effort and was running about thirty-five miles an hour. The only difficulty it seemed to have was in crossing a large crack which runs from Pine Tree Point to a point north of Bewdley. Here the occupants got out of the car and investigated to find a safe place to cross.

The recent frosts have made a lot of ice on the lake, and with careful driving it should now be safe for motoring.

EGG MARKETING IS DISCUSSED

Unprofitable Situation Confronts Dealers On Account of Large Supplies On Hand.

ADVERTISING SUGGESTED.

TORONTO, Ont., Jan. 16 (Canadian Press).—Egg marketing problems was the main feature discussed at the annual convention of the Canadian Producers Association here yesterday. In view of the unprofitable situation which has confronted the dealers on account of surplus supply, it was decided that a committee be named to take the matter up with the government. W. S. Cameron, Toronto, President of the Association, suggested that the committee be representative of dealers, exporters and producers.

It was urged by Alfred McCann, of Chatham, that advertising calculated to insure the consumption of eggs should be undertaken by the government and as to publicity in Great Britain, it was suggested that this might be obtained through the Minister of Trade and Commerce and the Empire Marketing Board.

Mr. Cameron, in his presidential address, stated that the season had been a profitable one for the egg producers but on the average it had been unprofitable for the dealers.

Consumption per capita in Canada had risen from 26.06 dozen in 1924 to 29.67 in 1927, and he expected the 1928 figures to show more than 30 dozen per capita.

ENGINEER WILL INVESTIGATE MINE

Shareholders of Company Complain To Government of Action of Land Officials.

TORONTO, Ont., Jan. 16. —(Canadian Press). — John A. Reid, well-known mining engineer, has been engaged by the Provincial Government to investigate conditions at the Tough Oakes Burnside Gold Mines Ltd., at Kirkland Lake, Attorney-General W. H. Price announced yesterday. Mr. Reid is already at the mine. This action was taken by the Provincial Government following reports that the company would abandon the mine.

Mr. Price stated that certain shareholders of the company had complained that they thought the mine was to be abandoned "with the prospect of having it taken over later by certain interested parties." A preliminary investigation, in which the company furnished the Provincial Government with every facility, had shown, he said that, as far as could be ascertained, the property was being abandoned because it had been found unprofitable. Renewed complaints, following this investigation, had prompted Mr. Reid's appointment.

DEPARTMENTS FLOURISHING

Disposal of Shed to Seymour Township Is Discussed at Annual Meeting.

CAMPBELLFORD, January 16 — (Examiner Staff Correspondence). — There was only a small attendance at the annual meeting of St. Andrew's Presbyterian Church held in the Sunday School Rooms at eight o'clock, last night, Matters followed their natural course till near the end of the session when the auditors' report was submitted. There was an amount of money which could not be officially accounted for, said Dr. G. A. Hay, who gave the report. He wanted to know who hired the organist and on what authority it had been done also at what salary. The church drive shed was also under discussion again this year and several suggestions for its use and disposal were put forward. The most favored was that it be turned over to the township under certain specified conditions and a committee to wait on the Seymour Township council was appointed.

The opening devotions were presided over by the Rev. W. J. Mark. Dr. O. C. Watson was selected chairman and George Whitelaw, secretary for the meeting.

Minutes from the last annual meeting were dealt with and the regular reports of the various organizations within the church for the past year were received in order. There was no report from the church session. Mr. Mark explained that he had not been accustomed to preparing this report and thought that it would be done by the clerk of the session. W. W. Clarke who holds this office, is at the present time, passing through a period of great anxiety due to the ill health of his son. Mr. Mark assured the congregation that the report would be prepared and would appear in the annual report as usual.

The amount of insurance carried on the buildings was $30,900. The manager's report showed a good attendance during the year. Several improvements had been made to the property including the permanent wiring of the manse lawns for garden parties and similar functions. There was a substantial credit balance

TWO OFFICERS ARE DISMISSED

Failed To Report Drifting Ashore of a Rum Boat Near Amherstburg.

CRAFT ESCAPED.

TORONTO, Ont., Jan. 16 (Canadian Press).—Provincial Police Officers W. L. Greenaway and R. M. Miller, stationed at Amhersburg, were dismissed from the service yesterday for "irregular conduct." Dismissals were ordered by General Victor Williams, Commissioner of the force, and announced by Attorney-General William H. Price as "effective at once."

According to the Attorney-General the chief irregularity in the conduct of Greenaway and Miller was their failure to report promptly, as required by their instructions, the drifting ashore near Amherstburg of a rum-boat partly loaded with liquor. This negligence on their part, is is claimed, allowed the owners of the craft, supposedly American, to get hold of it and put out with it again without proper clearance papers or authority of any kind.

WOMAN DIES IN TIMMINS HOTEL FIRE

King Edward Hotel in Northern Ontario Town Was Destroyed Yesterday.

SEVERAL INJURED.

Fire Is Believed To Have Started From Overheated Stove On Second Floor.

TIMMINS, Ont., Jan. 16. —(Canadian Press). — Fire which destroyed the King Edward Hotel here yesterday resulted in the death of a young woman, presumably Georgina Laporte, of Ottawa. Two other persons, Mrs. Mary Arquette, and John Grezenia, were injured but will recover. Mrs. Arquette sustained a broken leg when she jumped from the first floor to the ground to escape the flames while Grensenia suffered severe burns.

A letter found by the police beside the charred remains of the dead woman, bearing the address "Miss Georgina Laporte, Timmins," has been taken for granted as establishing her identity.

The origin of the fire is unknown as yet but it is presumed by police to have started from an overheated stove on the second floor. Due to the woodwork being covered by metallic sheeting the fire gained considerable headway before being discovered. The damage is expected to reach several thousands of dollars.

JUDGE O'CONNOR DISMISSES ACTION

Dispute Over Sewer in Munro House is Thrown Out in Judgment.

His Honor Judge O'Connor yesterday gave his decision in the case of James Guiry against Ivan T. Lillico and John K. Hughes. The plaintiff claimed to be entitled to be reimbursed for moneys spent in repairing sewer to Munro House building now occupied by defendants. His Honor found that the sewer in question had become blocked prior to the occupation by defendants and held that the statutory covenant to repair contained in the lease between the parties did not go farther than to require the defendants to maintain things in the condition they were at the time the premises were first taken over by the defendants and that the defendants were not liable for the said repairs.

Messrs. Peck, Kerr and McElderry for the plaintiff and Messrs. Hall and Stevenson for the defendants.

KEEPS CHILDREN FROM EVER HAVING BAD COLDS

Doctors Show Best Thing to Do The Minute Child Begins to Feel a Cold Coming On!

Glad that she took the advice of her family physician, Mrs. H. G. Grant, like so many Peterborough mothers, realizes how easy it is to keep the whole family free from severe colds during wintry weather.

Even the slightest exposure to a draught used to cause her little daughter, Lucille, to catch colds which often became serious. Her last cold was so severe she found it difficult to breathe and the doctor was called at midnight.

On the doctor's advice then she gave double strength doses of Ayer's Cherry Pectoral every half hour. By morning the child was breathing with ease and felta lots better—and the cold was completely gone next day. But her greatest joy came when she found that this hospital certified medication not only ends colds, but prevents one from having a bad cold, if used in time.

The minute the child feels a cold coming on now she is given a pleasant spoonful of Pectoral every half hour for three to five hours. This quickly checks congestion, helps drive out the threatening cold, reduce fever and restore linings of the inflamed air passages to a strong, healthy condition. In this way it ends a cold before it has a chance to take hold. And as a result vast numbers of mothers here find that children can now be spared the misery and danger of winter colds.

Note: Other cases reported daily—all certified by attending physician.

Ayer's Cherry Pectoral is made of ingredients as safe as the purest food—recommended for children by the foremost cold clinics. Endorsed by physicians and druggists.

What Doctors Think of the Laxative Habit

In all history, no Indian was ever known to have constipation. Nor need YOU. He chewed the bark of a tree called cascara. Today, we have the candy Cascaret.

Cascarizing the bowels never forms a laxative habit. If already formed, an occasional Cascaret will usually break the habit. For cascara strengthens the muscular walls of the bowels, and their need of any aid at all grows constantly less. What other cathartic has this characteristic? The writer knows of none.

An evacution brought gently about by cascara will, nine times in ten, be followed by full functioning of the bowels on the morrow—and for days after. For there is no REACTION as with sickening salts, or any of the man made purgatives that go through one's system like a bullet.

Physicians tell us cascara is the ideal laxative—and the tongue tells us candy Cascarets are its ideal form. At least a million people know this; what a pity there are any who don't! Especially parents; because children love to take a Cascaret. After which, for days-on-end, the bowels will be seen to work of their own accord.

The only habit from cascara is that of regularity! Cascarets tone and train the bowels. But at the first sign of returning sluggishness another Cascaret is as effective as the first.

There isn't a druggist who hasn't Cascarets, so WHY experiment with laxatives?

CASCARETS They Work While You Sleep!

DELORO SAFETY COMMITTEE HOLDS 4TH ANNUAL BANQUET

Two Awards Made For Worthy Suggestions Received During Month.

ADDRESSES GIVEN.

R. A. Elliott Tells Gathering Many Lines of Improvement Made Towards Goal.

(Examiner Correspondence).

MARMORA, Jan. 16.—The Hub dining rooms at Deloro wore a festive appearance on Monday evening on the occasion of the 4th anniversary banquet of the Deloro Safety Committee. In addition to the effective decorations of evergreen and bunting, two nicely executed charts adorned the walls. The first was titled "Lost days per year which came under compensation," and tracing back to the year 1923, read:

1923—643. 1924—519. 1925—246. 1926—184. 1927—88. 1928—126.

The other "Compensated accidents per year" read:

1918—25. 1919—20. 1920—17. 1921—26. 1922—20. 1923—33. 1924—20. 1925—14. 1926—6, with minor accidents, 12. 1927—4, with minor accidents, 19. 1928—4, with minor accidents, 14.

The banquet served by Chef Arthur Hart and his staff at 6.30 p.m was of the usual first-class order, and before tables were cleared for the monthly and annual meetings which followed. R. A. Elliott, chairman of the committee, called for an expression of thanks to the company who made the banquet possible, and to Mr. Hart for the time and interest expended in its provision.

Reports Read.

The monthly meeting followed. W. Williams, reporting for the Suggestions Committee, mentioned five suggestions having been received during the month. H. F. Berry gave the report of the Competitive Committee. The flag was awarded to the Oxide Plant, while the star is retained by the General. Two awards were made for worthy suggestions received during the month. H. Smith, floating member on the Inspection Committee, then gave his report. W. L. Rigg told of a demonstration of the pulmotor and of the prone method at the laboratory. H. Loveless told of two practices at the Oxide plant. W. Mumby was asked to hold two practices with the engineering department. T. Cousins was appointed float ing member of Inspection Committee for January.

H. Buskard gave the monthly statement of the trustee relief fund.

W. R. Reynolds concluded reports with that of the Publicity Committee.

Annual Meeting.

The monthly meeting having adjourned, the annual meeting was commenced. R. A. Elliott, in giving the chairman's report, said it was not so lengthy as in former years, due to difficulty in getting fresh material as the years go on. Reference was then made by the speaker to the Lost Day chart. 1927 was the record year of all. Improvement, he showed, was to be noticed along the line of minor accidents. Reference was then made to the second chart.

"Nine months," he said, "have passed without a compensation case, and it was hoped that the previous record of fourteen months without a compensation case will be exceeded The foremen having the best record for last year were Floyd Gray, E. Hewitt and H. Loveless.

The Chairman then made some explanatory remarks on the activities of the Trustee Relief Board and also touched on the recent mass meeting.

"The safety record," he said, in conclusion, "should be improved and there should be the endeavor on the part of all to make it a 'No accident' year."

F. Paquet, secretary-treasurer, followed with a financial statement of the year's working. He also gave interesting figures which he had compiled on accident awards and other matters as distributed over the plant. "By reverses, we know ourselves. Let us make 1929 a record year," he urged.

The officers were re-elected by acclamation:

Chairman, R. A. Elliott; vice chairman, J. Hemphill; secretary-treasurer, F. Paquet; assistant secretary, W. R. Reynolds.

Committees were appointed as follows:

General Business

Various matters having been brought up under general business, F. A. Bapty was called upon to speak. He regretted the absence of S. B. Wright. "The company," he declared, "was greatly interested in the movement and ready to help it. The executive and committee members were open to sincere congratulations. Though record of 1928 was not so good as that of 1927, there was no cause for criticism in his estimation. He wished the movement every success for 1929.

H. W. Sabine spoke next. He found that the results accomplished by the movement were interesting. He congratulated the committee on the fine work done in the past year. J. Hemphill, next called upon, made a few inspiring remarks. Dr. H. Crawford referred to the two St. John Ambulance classes and said it was pleasing to note the interest taken in these courses. W. R. Reynolds referred to the backwardness of some to take part in discussions. He was proud to be a member of the organization and if there was a better one, he would like to see it.

Always Recommends Them For Backache

"Before I started taking Dodd's Kidney Pills my back often used to ache," writes Mrs. J. Kulchar, St. Brieux, Sask. "A friend of mine told me to try Dodd's Kidney Pills and I am so glad I did as I am now free from Backache. If anyone says they have Backache, I always say use Dodd's Kidney Pills." The reason Dodd's Kidney Pills are so very popular all over Canada is that people have tried them and found them good. If you have not given Dodd's Kidney Pills a trial, do so at once.

Nomination Date Set For Hydro Commission Vacancy—Accounts Passed.

(Examiner Correspondence).

HAVELOCK, Jan. 16.—A gloom was cast over the inauguarl meeting of the town council on Monday evening, when word was received about the middle of the session that Ex-Reeve W. T. Curtiis who has served the village as reeve and councillor for about twenty years and was also Ex-Warden of the County, had just passed away in an hospital in Peterborough where he underwent an operation about ten days ago. Reeve R. Sanderson expressed the sorrow he felt on hearing of Mr. Curtis death which was a great shock to all present and requested that a resolution of condolence be forwarded to the bereaved widow and family. In opening themeeting Reeve Sanderson said it was five years since he had sat at the table as councillor and for 1929 he would endeavor to do his very best in the interest of the village. If he made mistakes it would not be done intentionally.

P. Lancaster, clerk of the village, gave a short address stating that it had been his good fortune to help with the affairs of the village to the best of his ability in the capacity of clerk for the past eight years. He thought that every council during that time had done its best for the town and he had no doubt the present council would od the same. During the past three years, the town had spent about $8,000 indrainage and he hoped the council would be faced this year with the question of endeavoring to provide pavement for the streets which is very badly needed. Familiar as he was with the finances, he could state that thetown would have saved money had they started paving ten years ago. He closed by wishing the members of council the beet of luck in their dealings throughout the year.

CHICAGO GRAIN

CHICAGO, Ills., Jan. 16.—(Associated Press).—Immense surplus supplies of wheat increasing further and United States wheat prices high above world parity did much yesterday to press all grain values down. Heavy profit-taking sales were witnessed in wheat and corn alike, and there was talk that a reaction from recent sharp advances had become overdue.

Closing quotations on wheat were unsettled, ⅝ cent to 1 cent net lower, with corn at the same as Monday's finish to quarter cent off, oats ⅝ cent to ⅝ cent down, and provisions unchanged to a setback of seven cents.

Relinquishment of holdings of future deliveries of wheat began early and continued throughout the day. The downward swing of prices here received much of its impetus from the fact that the Liverpool wheat market yesterday was lower than looked for and because export demand for wheat from North America apparently was inconsequential. Later, too, the selling side felt the effect of an announcement that world's available stocks of wheat had been augmented 1,801,000 bushels in the last week, making the total 407,225,000 bushels compared with 293,531,000 bushels a year ago.

Breaking up of severe cold weather in domestic winter wheat territory had an additional bearish influence on wheat prices. Besides, a good deal of notice was taken that although Argentine news yesterday about corn crop damage was the most unfavorable received so far this season the corn market here was averaging lower after having bulged to nearly the best prices yet achieved.

Under such circumstances and with considerable spread trading in progress between wheat and corn, the wheat market at no time gave evidence of any great power to rally.

Temporarily corn values here proved readily responsive to news that extreme heat intensifying Drought Damage was making the Argentine Corn Belt suffer, and that Argentine Corn Supplies available for export in the next ten weeks amount to only 22,000,000 bushels. Furthermore, country offerings of corn to Chicago were smaller, and mostly held half cent to 1 cent above the market. Increased speculative buying, however, met with stiff resistance, and somewhat violent fluctuations ensued, with the day's battle ending in a virtual draw. Therew as some buying of corn here credited to Argentine account. Oats declined with other grain.

Provisions were a little easier, reflecting a decline in hog values.

TORONTO PRODUCE

TORONTO, Jan. 16.— Egg prices remained unchanged at the week-end decline in wholesale trading in Toronto yesterday, but the undertone of the market continued weak and retail demand for fresh grades was only moderately active. Although trading was on a small scale, dealers are somewhat encouraged by the continued cold weather of the past three days, and it is thought that incoming supplies of fresh eggs may be somewhat reduced as a result. Meanwhile wholesale dealers are making every effort to move the liberal supplies of fresh eggs on hand, and the reduction in prices to the retail trade are naturally having a favorable influence in this direction. Storage eggs were moderately active yesterday at unchanged prices for extras, while storage firsts were slightly easier.

Current quotations to country egg shippers range from 36c to 37c a dozen for fresh extras, delivered in Toronto, cases returned, with firsts at 32c to 33c, while seconds are quoted at 25c.

These supplies are being offered to the retail trade at from 45c to 47c for fresh extras in cartons, or at 38c to 39c for fresh firsts. Storage eggs yesterday ranged from 34c to 36c for extras in cartons to the retail trade, with firsts easier at 29c to 31c.

Butter at 40c to 40½c

The butter market was steady at 40c to 40½c for finest No. 1 creamery, delivered in Toronto, and quotations for New Zealand supplies on spot were 40c in most instances. While the undertone of yesterday's light trading appeared fully steady the bulk of sales were reported around 40c, with 40½c asked for fancy stock. Trading in No. 2 grade creamery has been considerably more active during the past two days at a general price range of 39c to 39½c a pound, delivered in Toronto. Butter quotations to the retail trade were unchanged yesterday at 44c to 45c for No. 1 creamery prints, with No. 2 prints at 42c to 43c.

The cheese market was dull, and ruling quotations of 20c to 20½c a pound were nominal. The price range was quoted for new large cheese, waxed, No. 1, Government graded, delivered in Toronto.

BEER BY THE GLASS.

When a deputation representing Ontario Labor waited upon the Ontario Government with the usual presession requests the members must have realized that in asking for the authorization of the sale of beer by the glass they were making an impossible demand upon the Government.

There is no strong current of public opinion in favor of a return to any system of sale by the glass, and any administration that attempted to foist such sale upon the people of the Province would have a brief existence.

The Labor men know this, and their inclusion of a sale-of-beer-by-the-glass plank in their program is merely a gesture that they realize will not be taken seriously by the Government nor by the public.

The present Liquor Control Act goes as far in the direction of the sale of liquor in Ontario as the people at present desire.

It is still on trial—and while its operations are being observed, it is idle to urge any reactionary move approaching a return to the days of the open bar.

"SMALL TOWN STUFF."

Ald. Huffman's statement that it is "small town stuff" to oppose the building of a gas station opposite Confederation Square, is open to correction.

When a municipality begins to assert its right to have something to say about what kind of buildings may be erected in certain areas, it is leaving the small town stage behind and is on the road to intelligent and systematic growth.

"Small town stuff" consists of dumbly allowing all sections of a city to be invaded by any commercial enterprise that may want to locate, regardless to the nature of the business carried on and its effect upon the surrounding area.

The Examiner believes it is high time Peterborough realized the need of intelligent town planning, and is thoroughly in accord with the views expressed by Ald. Macdonald, who declared: "We ought to be far-sighted enough to restrict certain parts of the city and look ahead and plan a little for the future," and with Ald. McNabb's declaration that the Council should be the body to dictate where service stations and similar enterprises should be located.

These aldermen are on the right track; they have vision enough to see that there must be some control exercised over building operations and in regard to town planning generally, and if Ald. Huffman is well advised he will swing along with them and drop his impossible opinion that to protect beauty areas and other districts and to plan for future development is "small town stuff."

IMPROVING INVERLEA PARK.

The Examiner was glad to notice that Mayor Denne brought to the attention of the members of his Council at the inaugural meeting the desirability of improving the bathing facilities at Inverlea Park.

There is nothing in the present weather conditions to suggest the old swimming hole, yet summer follows rapidly on the heels of the cold months, and now when the estimates will shortly be under consideration is the proper time to plan for much-needed improvements at the city's only bathing beach.

Inverlea Park is one of Peterborough's most popular places during the summer, and there is no reason why it should not be made even more popular by adopting the program of improvements mentioned by Mayor Denne.

Particularly should attention be given to the question of providing better dressing-room facilities and sanitary conveniences.

In these respects the conditions at Inverlea are not in keeping with the popularity of the park, and if the funds are available the Council should include in its 1929 estimates an adequate appropriation that will take care of these improvements, particularly as Inverlea Park will be one of the places in Peterborough most visited during Old Home Week next summer.

The matter should receive the earnest consideration of every member of the Council when the estimates are under consideration.

THE COUNTY'S LOSS.

Peterborough County has suffered a double loss in the passing of two of its citizens who had a long record of public service, W. T. Curtis, of Havelock, and Robert Shaw, of Harvey, both former wardens of the county and prominent for many years in county municipal politics.

They were both of the type deserving the earnest thanks of their fellow-citizens, men who took the keenest interest in public affairs, and willing to give unsparing of their time, energy and ability to furthering the interests of the communities they served.

In Harvey, Robert Shaw devoted a large part of his life to municipal business, and enjoyed the regard and support of his fellow-citizens to such an extent that for thirty years he represented his township in the County Council, over which body he had the honor of twice being warden with his terms of service separated by twenty years.

His judgment in county matters was always appreciated by his fellow-legislators, and those who sat on the Council with him will be among the most sincere mourners at his taking-off.

Mr. Curtis had long served his home municipality of Havelock and, in the larger arena of service, the County Council. To the latter body he first came in 1903, and was a member again the following year. Seventeen years he returned to the County Council for a year, and after another absence of three years, came back in 1924 and served for five years, retiring at the end of last year. He was warden in 1926. Mr. Curtis was an able legislator, a man whose viewpoint was broad and whose interest in the welfare of Peterborough County always beyond dispute.

The passing of such well-known county legislators on the one day has caused general regret throughout the district.

BANISH OBSOLETE AIRCRAFT.

In no phase of manufacturing are more kaleidoscopic changes being effected than in aircraft building. What is new to-day seems to be old to-morrow and obsolete the day after. In this respect, the aeroplane manufacturer is merely passing through the same era of seeking after and finding improvement calculated to make air transportation safer as did the automobile manufacturer a decade ago, but in perhaps a more intense fashion.

With such rapid changes, there can be no defence of the use to-day of aircraft that were manufactured during or immediately after the war, probably for war purposes. Individuals of companies who persist in operating machines until they literally "drop to bits" are creating a hazard that can only be termed a decided menace to the progress of aviation. Their operations should be stopped abruptly, and it lies in the hands of the Controller of Civil Aviation to do this.

Departmental officials at Ottawa realize only too well the dangers of operating obsolescent aircraft, and are gradually refusing licenses to operators of this type of machine. Perhaps action along this line could be speeded up to such an extent that the obsolete machine will pass out of existence in quick order.

The plea of Mr. G. J. Desbarats, Deputy Minister of National Defence, made at the International Air Conference in Washington, for unification of aeroplane standards was timely and courageous. It is a subject bristling with difficulties, for at the present time aeroplane standards are at sixes and sevens. True, Canada and the United States recognize each other's certificate of air worthiness, even if the latter is ignoring the International Air Convention; but in Europe the situation is chaotic. No plane of unanimity has been reached, and the Governments of the different countries are as far away from agreeing on the subject to-day as they were when the subject was first broached.

How difficult the matter is can be gauged when it is mentioned that a machine which is quite airworthy in the United States may not stand up to the rigors of Canadian flying conditions. That is true also of Europe. A country sets its standards to suit local conditions. What, then, must be the solution for the exporter and for the user of imported machines? Can a manufacturer reasonably be expected to build machines of different standards for the different countries to which he is exporting? If not, where lies the common plane for all countries. Would it be wise to go on the chain principle, and make the chain as strong only as its weakest link; or should all countries insist on specifications set by that country where conditions are most severe and a more strict certificate of air worthiness is required?

There is a chance here for Ottawa to take the lead by inviting other countries to send representatives to a convention at which this matter could be thoroughly thrashed out.—Canadian Aviation.

KNOW THE EMPIRE.

There never was a time, probably, when more was being written about the desirability of knitting the various countries of the Empire together in closer ties of sentiment and understanding. Communications have been improved to such an extent, that it is, in these days, a comparatively simple matter for the people of one part of the Empire to visit another, and a greater knowledge is growing up as a consequence. Economic bonds are being strengthened and the thought of a great imperial economic unit is in the minds of statesmen; but this effort to develop the Empire, to make the most of the advantages which Providence has given to the British race, is not one which concerns the statesmen alone. It is a matter in which the private citizen can take a practical, useful part. There is the movement to extend Empire trade, for instance, which depends for its success upon the degree of enthusiasm aroused in Empire shoppers. Another way in which the individual may assist development is by making himself personally acquainted, as opportunity offers, with conditions in other Dominions. It is not always convenient for Canadians to take long trips overseas, but there is one way—and a most delightful way—in which the people of this Dominion may help, and that is by favoring British territory when choosing holiday resorts.

It is not surprising that the extensive advertising of American resorts should have resulted in attracting a large Canadian patronage; but it should not be forgotten that just as agreeable, and more beautiful, areas exist under the Union Jack, which should have the first claim on British tourists. Within our own Dominion, there is the unrivaled scenery of the Rockies and the ideal holiday country of Northern Ontario. Neither is it necessary to go to the southern United States to escape the rigors of winter; for there is Bermuda—a veritable paradise of rest and pleasure, with a climate unrivaled in the western hemisphere and a social atmosphere that can only be found under the British flag. The same may be said of the British West Indies in general. There are to be found attractions of a special character—the novelty of the quaint and exotic combined with the comfort of the modern, and all the advantages of sport and amusement which could be desired. The new steamship services which have been inaugurated by the Canadian Government between Canada, Bermuda and the West Indies should have the effect of greatly increasing travel from this country to these delightful islands. Their popularity is already great, but they deserve to be even better known by those who are in a position to enjoy such a winter holiday. British scenery must be sold to Britishers, and Canada is fortunate to be so near to some of the most alluring of all the island possessions of the far-flung Empire.—Hamilton Spectator.

THE GAS STATION.

To the Editor of The Examiner.

Dear Sir:

In regard to the proposed gas station opposite Confederation Square I'd like to say that the theory that because the original mover of a motion passed unanimously at a mass meeting of five hundred citizens has been argued into consenting to withdraw his resolution, the whole motion can now be ignored comes close to being an insult to public intelligence.

The mover did not of himself carry the motion, he merely was the instrument by which the subject was brought before the meeting and his decision now that he would like to withdraw the resolution cannot be seriously considered.

His protest against the erection of a service station at this point was carried by one of the largest meetings of war veterans in the history of Peterborough; what nonsense to suggest that because the mover has in some way or another been persuaded to consent to a withdrawal the opinion of all the rest of the war veterans present, as expressed by their vote, should be disregarded.

COMMON SENSE.

"SMALL TOWN STUFF"

To the Editor of The Examiner, Peterborough.

Dear sir,

In your issue of last night an alderman of the city is reported as having said: "I think this is small town stuff, stopping the Imperial Oil Company on this particular property."

I would like, sir, to ask this alderman, through your columns, one or two pertinent questions. What experience has he had with "big town stuff", from which he draws his "small town" comparison? What does he know about town planning? Does he pay no regard to the protest made by the war veterans of the city? Does he honestly think a gasoline station, of whatever design, will add to the beauty of Peterborough's memorial or of Confederation Square?

Let's see. In first place the small town is the one that has no progressiveness; but town planning is a sign of progress, so the proposal to beautify Peterborough is a sign that at long last this city is aspiring to climb out of the small town class. Therefore this Alderman is incorrect, logically speaking, in his statement that it is "small town stuff" to endeavor to preserve the natural and manufactured beauties of the city. Any man, individual citizen or alderman, who troubles to keep himself informed of progress in city management, city building, and town planning, knows that every worth-while city in America is coming into the town-planned circle. It is just as necessary, Mr. Alderman, to have a plan for a city as to have a plan for a house.

Then, sir, mention is made of the protest of "a man" at a meeting of war veterans. This is incorrect, too, because the protest was not that of 'a man" but of five hundred citizens. Five hundred citizens, too, who had earned in a difficult field the right to speak; five hundred citizens who, in their travels through England, France, Belgium and Germany have seen more than the average citizens of public squares and monuments. Is that a protest to be lightly ignored? Are the minds that framed that protest any more "small town" than the minds that so label the protest?

I think, sir, this alderman should reconsider the matter in the light of these facts. Certainly, it seems to me, the matter is worth more than surface consideration. It is not a matter of moment only to to-day's citizens; the men who are entrusted this year with the administration of Peterborough should build for next year and for all years to come. Only thus can Peterborough ever get out of the small town class.

Yours truly,
PETER BOROUGH.

THE LUCKIEST LADY

XXXIV—IS HUGH ENGAGED?

"What are you thinking about?" George asked Marna.

She looked up at him.

"George, if Biddy asked you for some money—a lot of money—and no questions to be asked, what would you do?"

Paget chuckled.

"Give it to her, of course," he said easily. "She's all right. Nothing wrong about the Little Flapper." He seemed struck by the gravity of his wife's face. "Why do you ask?" he inquired.

Marna told him.

He listened seriously, then he whistled.

"Humph! Sounds queer, but I don't expect it is. Give it to her. Believe in trustin' people myself till you find out that they can't be trusted, and Biddy's straight enough."

"I know, but I keep remembering her mother, and what she came from——"

"Can't blame the poor kid for that."

"I'm not, but it's only—if she would just tell me what she wants the money for."

"She'll tell you some day," Paget said easily. "Never cross a bridge till you get to it—eh?"

"Then shall I let her have the money?"

"'Course!"

Paget had complete faith in his womenfolk; he had complete faith in all the world.

Marna drew away from him with a little shiver.

"Well, if you say so," she said slowly.

* * * * * *

Another fortnight slipped uneventfully away.

The Little Flapper got well, and no further allusion was made to the forty pounds. Marna gave it to her in bank-notes—laid it on her dressing-table one night in an envelope, with her name just written on the outside, and the Little Flapper wrote her thanks:

"I wish I could explain; perhaps some day I shall be able to. It's nothing to be ashamed of, darling. I give you my word of honor it isn't."

Marna believed her, but she never ceased to wonder. Often she found herself watching the girl with a new, vague suspicion; often she questioned her closely when she had been out alone, and instantly regretted doing so.

"She'll think I don't trust her. How hateful of me! I do trust her. I know she's all right, really."

She tried hard to believe that the incident had made no difference to their complete understanding, and she knew that Biddy was trying to believe the same thing, and failing. The little rift had been made in the lute, and could not be closed.

Renny Martin, who had stayed away from the house since Biddy's illness, renewed his visits.

"Heard from Hubbard yet?" he asked Marna sometimes, and always she had to force herself to smile and to answer as naturally as she could.

"Oh, no, there hasn't been time yet."

Then one day he told her he had some news for her.

She looked up, startled.

"What sort of news?"

Her thoughts had flown at once to Hugh; and yet, how could Martin have heard anything from him?

"Saunders has had a cable from his sister," Renny Martin said.

It was so sudden and unexpected that Marna had no time to control herself, and she knew that her face was white.

"A cable! Oh!"

Then instantly she recovered and tried to laugh.

"What extravagance! Is anything the matter?"

"She is going to be married."

Marna was mistress of herself again now, but her heart was thudding at suffocating speed.

"Married! How romantic! She wasn't engaged when she left England, was she?"

"No. It's some man she met on the boat, he tells me."

"Oh! That so often happens, doesn't it?"

She knew that he was watching her closely, and she hated him for the pain which she knew he was deliberately trying to give her.

"Who is the lucky man?" she forced herself to ask.

"Saunders didn't seem to know." Renny Martin rose and came over to where she stood. "I suggested it might be Hubbard—it wouldn't be altogether surprising, would it? Saunders' sister is an attractive girl, and you know what it is on a long voyage—moonlight, and all the rest of it."

"Yes."

"They might do worse, both of them," Martin said coolly.

George Paget came into the room at that moment; he frowned when he saw Martin and Marna together, but he spoke in his usual cherry way.

"Hallo, you two! Plottin' mischief?"

Marna turned round.

"Renny has been telling me that Mr. Saunders has had a cable from his sister. She is to be married to some man she met on the boat."

Paget dropped his eyeglass with a little click.

"Not old Hugh?" he said uproariously.

Marna caught her breath hard.

Why did George suggest such a thing? It hurt her far more than Martin's words had done.

"Saunders didn't know the name," Martin explained. "But it might be Hubbard. I was just saying to Marna that all sorts of things happen on shipboard—eh?"

Paget chuckled.

"Yes, by Jove! Remember myself before I was married: there was a little widow comin' back from Bombay——"

Marna slipped away.

She had heard all about that little widow from Bombay many times before, and had never been in the least jealous, but her pulses were racing, and she felt that she could hardly breathe as she went up to her room and shut the door.

She covered her face with her hands, and found herself whispering desolately:

"Don't forget me, dear! Oh, don't forget me, Hugh!"

George Paget came knocking at the door.

"What are you doin', Marna?" He knocked again. "Let me in. Why do you lock the door?"

She opened it, trying hard to smile.

"What do you want? I'm sorry, I didn't know I had locked the door."

He looked at her with puzzled an xiety.

"What di ye go away for? I was just tellin' Martin about the little widow from Bombay."

"I know, but I'd heard it before."

He flushed boyishly.

"Fed up with my stories—eh? Sorry! But you needn't have run away."

Marna averted her head.

"I'm tired, Renny Martin tires me."

"Does he? Does he really?" He looked pathetically pleased. "Glad to hear that, Marna. I've thought lately——" He broke off, ashamed to speak of his reluctant jealousy.

He encircled her with his arms.

"Well, if you're tired you won't want to go tonight," he said.

"To go where?" She wanted to be left alone; she felt as if she must take him by his great shoulders and turn him out of the room, out of her life. Loneliness, anything would be better than the constant reminder that she belonged to him and could never get free.

Then she was ashamed. He was too good for her; she was not worthy of his love. She slipped a hand through his arm.

"Where do you want me to go, George?"

"It's Martin's idea. There's a gala night at the Star Club—all the girls from the Gaiety show are going. Thought it would be fun."

"Would you like to go?" Marna asked.

Paget rubbed the back of his head and laughed boyishly.

"Well, it would be bright, eh, what?" he asked.

"Very well, we'll go."

"Not if you're tired," he said quickly. "I'm not tired. I'm not nearly so tired when there are things going on as I am when we're quiet and alone."

But the evening was a nightmare.

SHOVELING SNOW

That youngster just won't shovel snow,
No matter how I scold him.
He always lets the sidewalk go
No matter what I've told him.
And so I warned him yesterday,
Unless the job was finished,
He'd find the time allowed for play
Consider'bly diminished.

And then today, to my surprise,
Right after it was snowing,
I'd scarce believe my ears and eyes—
I heard the shovel going.
But when I went to tell my joy,
To say some word approving,
I found 'twas Mrs. Jones's boy
Who was our snow removing.

I asked him how he came to do
The work of one so fickle.
He said that Son had hired him to,
Had given him a nickel.
Where did he get it? So a talk
I had tonight with Sonny.
He'd shoveled Mrs. Jones's walk—
That's how he got the money.

Why We Do What We Do.

WHY WE GIVE

By Mehran K. Thomson, Ph.D.
(Author, The Springs of Human Action)

We give for a great many reasons, but the motives back of all giving fall into two main classes. One is decidedly selfish—we give in order to get. The other is altruistic—we give for the pleasure of exercising the generous impulse, and because our sympathies have been aroused.

In a sense, both types of giving go back to the self-regarding impulses. The giving of alms was widely practiced in the middle ages for the benefit of the giver. The motive, however, was to obtain religious merit for the giver rather than to relieve human need and suffering on the part of the receiver.

A great deal of giving is more like an investment than a charity. The giver hopes to get more than he gives. He believes that his generosity will be made up to him with liberal interest, either in this world or the next. In the exchange of gifts with friends one usually breaks even, and some few even gain a little on the exchange.

True generosity exists when the giver gives only to those who can't repay. This is certainly a higher form of charity than casting bread upon the waters in the hope that it may come back with a fish inside, but it is not wholly devoid of the idea of compensation. One who has a great deal of pride and self-respect always gives more than he receives. His reward is not in material things but in the more subtle compensation of self-satisfaction.

When you do a generous deed you feel satisfied with yourself. When you act selfishly you are likely to despise yourself. To suffer the loss of prestige and humiliation in one's own estimation is degrading, and quite uncomfortable. We prefer the opposite feeling of elation and self-expansion even if it does cost us the sacrifice of money and other valuables.

During the Christmas season the contageous spirit of generosity is in the air. We all want everyone to be happy. This adds greatly to our own happiness. It is difficult to enjoy a fine Christmas dinner while you are aware that little children in the neighborhood have practically nothing to eat.

If men were really generous and wanted to help others without compensation for themselves, they would try to give the poor devils a better chance in life rather than a generous hand-out once or twice a year. Envy for their greater fortune gives human beings a great deal of satisfaction that socialism and economic equality would kill. The occasional doling out of turkey dinners and other favors appeals, because it gives us a chance to display our superiority.

Why do you do what you do. Ask Dr. Thomson. Write care of this paper, and send stamped addressed envelope for reply.

The Stars Incline, But Do Not Compel

THURSDAY, JANUARY 17, 1929

(Copyright, 1929, McClure Syndicate.))

This should be a fairly lucky day for all who are willing to use their best energies. According to astrology benefic aspects are fairly active.

In the early morning there may be a tendency for men to doubt their own best talents. They should act rather than plan while this rule prevails.

Under this planetary government a who are clever at detail should benefit. There is a sign of promise for those who contribute to the success of plays, but are never known to the public.

Women should push all important matters today, for there is an aspect that seems to promise success.

The stars smile on those who wed under this rule, which is read as promising material as well as spiritual progress.

Financial matters are subject to an encouraging aspect which seems to be especially lucky for women.

Young folk should benefit while this planetary rule continues, for it is believed to awaken high ambitions and to increase mental activity.

Geniuses are to win recognition in America for service in the arts and sciences. Great inventors are to win fame this year.

According to ancient lore this is a day most auspicious for interest in whatever is executive or constructive.

Young women will do well to choose their special life work while this configuration continues. College students should take note of this.

Accidents of many sorts may mark this month. Skaters as well as motorists and aviators should take notice.

Under this planetary government international problems of a new order are likely to vex the British government.

Persons whose birthdate it is have the augury of a year in which they find success in whatever career they have chosen. There may be indecision on certain subjects, notably among the young in choosing just the right one to marry.

Children born on this day probably will be endowed with happy dispositions. The subjects of this sign are often witty and imaginative, entertaining companions and delightful friends. Many clever writers belong to Capricorn.

News From the Mines

Through
Sollows, Mills & Company

INTERNATIONAL NICKEL.

After cutting the stringer we mentioned in our bulletin on Monday and later passing through a horse of rock, three lateral drives at the Frood mine are now in ore. The horizons at which the deposit has been intersected are the 1,600, 2,400 and 2,800, and work is advancing through solid sulphides. It is officially stated that the grade of ore is "just as we expected." Ore samples from the 2,800 level are similar to the ore being taken from the 3,100 at the Frood Extension, which according to Lord Melchett's figures averages close to $118 a ton. While no assays have been announced, ore from the 1,600 appears from a casual inspection to be at least equal to that of the 2,800 horizon of the Frood Extension. We are able to say that the grade and size of the ore body corresponds with the expectations from diamond drill results.

MALARTIC.

One of the holes being put down by Malartic in their present diamond drilling campaign was spotted so as to pick up the high grade vein which on the 125 level showed high values over six feet in width. This hole is being put down from the 250 foot level and should tap the vein, if the dip has not altered, at a vertical depth of 450 feet. During the summer a raise was put up on this ore from the 125 and values were found to be consistently high. It is possible this ore has been cut, which would account for the strength and activity in the shares of Malartic on Monday.

GOODFISH.

According to information received from our field man at Kirkland Lake, station cutting at the 125 foot horizon of Goodfish in the new shaft is practically completed. Foundations are in for two new compressors and the new hoist has been installed. Diamond drilling in the vicinity of the new shaft from surface recently encountered six feet of vein matter showing free gold. This was at a vertical depth of 400 feet and another vein was cut at approximately 600 feet vertical.

FALCONBRIDGE.

The application of the Canadian Pacific Railway for permission to build a branch line from the Stobie Mine into Falconbridge Township is taken in Sudbury as forecast—a new smelter at the Falconbridge mine in due course. The distance covered by the railway would be about 2½ miles and would serve the Mount Nickel Mine, under option to the United Verde Company, as well as the Falconbridge.

LAKE GENEVA MINES LIMITED. (TOWAGMAC)

Lake Geneva Mines Limited should be driving in ore by the end of January if the present schedule is carried out. Station cutting has already started at the 250 foot level and as the crosscut will have only about 25 feet to go in order to reach the ore, news of ore developments may be expected in the near future. Owing to the dip of the ore body the crosscut on the on the 125 foot level will have some 75 feet to go but should be in the ore body at this horizon shortly after the first of February.

COPPER OUTLOOK.

Recently an authority in New York with thirty year's experience in the metal market, predicted that copper would sell at 20c a pound in the near future, owing to the demand created by expansion in the electrical industry. Should his predictions be borne out, it will be seen that a 4 cent increase in this metal will add $2800 a day to the earnings of Noranda, at their present rate of production. When Noranda gets on its scheduled production of 2000 tons a day and should they smelt 10 per cent. copper, and increase of only a cent a pound would mean $4000 daily. At 20 cents, an advance of almost 4 cents on the present price, it would mean approximately $5,000,000 additional earnings yearly on a basis of 2000 tons smelted daily.

GRANADA.

The drifts on the No. 2 vein at both the 375 and 500 foot horizons continue to look decidedly good. The cross cut at the 625 has been passing through the porphyry zone, and the No. 2 vein should be encountered this week.

NORANDA.

Splendid progress is being made in sinking Noranda's new No. 4 shaft which is down to a depth of 325 feet.

AMULET.

The raise from the east cross cut at Amulet still continues in high grade copper ore, and the raise from the west cross cut continues in copper-zinc ore. The extremely cold weather is still hindering diamond drill progress directed towards the "E" ore body from the surface. The hole was down to a depth of 90 feet yesterday with approximately another 60 feet to go before reaching the favorable zone.

AMITY.

Sinking at the Amity Copper in the Boston Creek area is rapidly approaching the 600 foot horizon, and the proposed program of lateral work will shortly be under way at this level.

Trading Scattered Throughout Broad List On Toronto Stock Exchange.

PRICES FIRM.

TORONTO, Ont., Jan. 16.—(Canadian Press). — Tip Top Tailors preferred was the only issue to register an increase of note on the market at the Toronto Stock Exchange to-day. Although anumber of the medium priced issues advanced slightly, fluctuation on the whole was rather limited, and trading was lightly scattered throughout the list. Tip Top soared to 100½ firming at the peak for a net increase of 9 points.

International Nickel which was back again in the listed section of the board and was heavily dealt in, and after reaching 55 eased to 53 1-2, off 1-4. Easy Washers was activly dealt in for a short period and gathered in an additional 4 points to 40, while Bell Telephone in light trading moved one point higher to 170.

The Industrial section, with the exception of Massey-Harris and Cockshutt which were fractionally higher, weakened toward the noon hour and all registered net losses at this period. Massey-Harris preferred, McKinnon Industries and Page-Hersey, were each off one point to 110, 72 1-2 and 131 1-2 respectively.

British American at 53 1-2, Imperial at 98 1-2, International Petroleum were all fractionally higher while the other issues in this section remained steady.

Roy in Berlin from the art treasure of the Hermitage Museum, St. Petersburg, Russia. A Rembrandt portrait has never been auctioned in Canada before. Rembrandts usually bring $250.

NEW YORK CURB RALLY BASED ON BUYING SUPPORT

Call Money Rate Holds Steady Throughout Early Trading Session.

CHEMICAL SHARES FEATURE.

Merger and Dividend Rumors Provide Background For Chemical Advance.

NEW YORK, N. Y., Jan. 16. —(Canadian Press). — Strong buying support came into the stock market today and prices rallied in impressive fashion under the leadership of the Chemical shares. Some irregularity developed at the opening as a result of selling based on the recent stiffening in call money, but offerings were well absorbed, and a broad upward movement was under way in the early afternoon.

Call money renewed at 8 per cent. and held steady throughout the early trading at that figure, despite the calling of about $15,000,000 in loans. Time money was in good demand at the recent high rates, and the supply was not very abundant.

There was not much in the day's trade news to influence the price movement. Merger and dividend rumors provided the background for the advance in the chemical issues. Allied Chemical, which broke 13 points yesterday and was one of the weakest stocks on the list soared to-day to a new high record at 278 on talk of an early stock split-up. Mathieson Alkali soared nearly 15 points to a new high at 195 to the accompaniment of rumors that Dupont interests were accumulating the stock. Bogden's, which is also slated for a stock split-up this Spring, jumped 5 1-2 points to a new high at 192 1-2.

Rossia Insurance, Vanadium Steel, General Electric, Continental Motors, Union Carbide, A. M. Buyers, Liquid Carbonic and Commonwealth Power all sold 4 to 5 points higher, and U. S. Steel Common, Union Pacific, American Telephone, International Telephone, Pan American 2, and American International were among the many issues to sell 3 points or more above yesterday's final quotations.

Wright Aeronautical turned heavy after an early outburst of strength, dropping from 361 to 274.

PROMINENT ISSUES FEATURE SESSION

Western Canadian Group Plays Prominent Part On Standard Exchange.

TORONTO, Ont., Jan. 16. —(Canadian Press). — A very irregular tone developed on the Standard Stock and Mining Exchange this morning with recent prominent issues assuming undisputed leadership. Trading, which became active towards noon, was confined mostly to these issues. Western Canadian issues played a prominent part during the session with big Missouri adding a further gain of one point to its rising price at 176 while Central Manitoba held solidly at 71, unchanged. Fen Oreille was 50 cents higher to 13.50 and Kootenay-Florence which led the trading, 1 1-2 points to 29 1-2.

Noranda weakened under profit taking and eased off 1-75 to 61.25 while Nipissing provided, in its category, the most severe loss of the session, dropping 24 cents to 3.25. Sudbury Basin in light trading was off 20 cents to 8.40 and Grandview, prominent in recent sessions, after climbing to 96, slid down to 85 for a net loss of 4 points.

Wet Weather in Argentina Benefits Corn Prices—Oats Easy.

PROVISIONS SAG.

CHICAGO, Ills., Jan. 16. —(Canadian Press). — Word of rains in three Provinces of Argentina benefiting the corn prices here. On the other hand, Chicago wheat values displayed relative firmness as a result of Liverpool wheat quotations higher than due. Opening unchanged to 1-2c, corn later showed setbacks all around. Wheat started unchanged to 5-8c down, but subsequently scored gains. Oats were easy. Provisions also tended to sag.

Immense Satisfaction

Ratification of the Briand-Kellogg pact has caused immense satisfaction in League of Nations circles in Geneva.

A prominent official said to-day that he considered the pact the greatest single step in the organization of peace since the signature of the league covenants a decade ago. He added that the world had given no proper recognition to the advance in the organization of peace and expressed the belief that more has actually been done in this domain than in any other field of human interest.

Citing the league action in the Paraguayan-Bolivian dispute, officials said that this co-operation with the Pan-American Conference indicated how wide was the field of future co-operation between the league and the American Republics including the United States for the maintenance of peace whenever it might be threatened.

The world's rarest stamp is the British Guiana one cent magenta of 1856. There is only one known to exist and it changed hands a few years ago for over $35,0000.

observing many cities in several countries, and especially the arrangement of public squares and public buildings, and whereas we are not convinced that the erection of gasoline stations, etc., facing Confederation Square will not detract from the essential qualities of that Square, be it therefore resolved that we petition the City Council that at the earliest possible opportunity steps be taken to investigate and adopt a general and comprehensive scheme of town planning, so that buildings to be erected shall always be suitable to their surroundings, and our city made thus constantly more attractive to business and pleasure visitors, and a constantly greater source of pride to its inhabitants."

MEMBERS REPORT ACTS OF INHUMANITY

Junior Humane Society Holds Its Regular Monthly Meeting.

Instances of close observation on the part of members of the Junior Humane Society were noted at the last meeting of that organization, held in St. John's parish hall, with Mrs. J. Chandler presiding.

The members reported several instances of inhumanity to animals. One boy asked the owner to take a cat in which had been left out in the cold, another remonstrated with a boy whose collie pup was made to pull him on a sleigh and who had been seen to kick the same dog, and a local vendor was said to have severely beaten a horse for slipping on the icy street.

Appreciation was voiced of the action of a local blacksmith in discharging an employee who had struck a horse with a file.

Mrs. Chandler, in response to a question, made clear the view of the Humane Society as to horse-racing and said it was not the sport, but the evil things which often appertain to it, to which the organization objects. Many horses were doped and beaten in order to obtain greater speed from them, and this unnatural treatment was cruel and inhumane.

A suggestion, which was agreed to unanimously, was made that the secretary write to Mrs. W. R. Morris and Fred Ford, expressing the deep regret of the members at their illness, and wishing them a speedy recovery.

The members also strongly expressed their disapproval of the drawing contests so often held at Fall Fairs and agreed that if horses were made to pull similar weights on the streets, the owners would immediately be brought before the courts.

Appreciative mention was made of fine reports of the meetings given by Examiner and the members agreed that this assisted materially in bringing the work of the organization before the public.

CHURCH ARMY IS WELCOMED

Laymen Give Supper To Crusaders At All Saints' Church.

TWO FINE ADDRESSES.

The members of the Church Army Crusaders now in Peterborough were welcomed at a men's supper on Tuesday night. The ladies of Browntown Guild catered and provided an excellent meal. Charles Lacheur, president of the Laymen's Association of Peterborough, presided. The Rev. J. L. Hughes came with his party from St. George's so that the whole group was together for at least one gathering.

Splendid services everywhere marked the opening of the Mission. The morning service of Holy Communion was held in St. George's, with services afternoon and evening both in St. George's and All Saints'.

Captain Morley, who is in charge at All Saints', until the arrival of Capt. Casey, gave two splendid addresses yesterday and was ably supported by Sister Bordman, who not only sang solos at both services but also gave a short address at the evening service.

NATIVE QUESTION IS VITAL ISSUE

General Smuts Condemns Nationalist Party For Its Policy in Campaign.

CAPE TOWN, South Africa, January 15 (Canadian Press Cable via Reuters). — In a stirring speech at Bethal, Transvaal, to-day, the Opposition leader, General Jan C. Smuts, roundly condemned the Government Party, the Nationalists, for attempting to make the native question the vital issue in the forthcoming general election. General Smuts deprecated Premier Hertzog's "dragging the native question into the heat of election while the opposition and the Government are still conferring on the proposed native bills, and a select committee is still sitting to deal with the matter."

General Smuts flatly denied any intention on the part of the South African Party to make political capital out of the native bills, as had been charged by Premier Hertzog. He said apparently, however, the Nationalists' only election hope was to relight the fires of racial friction and set white against white with the blacks as the pawn. "It will be an unhappy day for South Africa if the Nationalists succeed in fighting the election on the cry of a 'white South Africa,'" said General Smuts. "They might win the election, but they would disrupt the country."

IN POLICE COURT

Traffic morning in police court brought to task several motorists whom the police had seen fit to check up on. William Driver, a taxi driver was charged with failing to stop before entering a through street. He pleaded not guilty and the case was adjourned until Wednesday, January 23 at 10 a.m.

Bud Shannon, also a taxi driver, pleaded not guilty to a charge of reckless driving and owing to the illness of several witnesses, this case was also adjourned for one week.

One William McKenzie, formerly a taxi driver with a good record, pleaded guilty to a charge of reckless driving and was fined $10.00 and costs.

The old adage that a good big man is better than a good little man came in for considerable debate during settlement of the forth case on the docket this morning, the Magistrate, the Chief of Police and the Hon. G. N. Gordon, K. C., being principals in the discussion.

A local boy who had been remanded from January 8, appeared on a charge of resisting or wilfully obstructing police officers in the discharge of their duties, and pleaded guilty. His counsel suggested that while he had actually struck one of the officers who had questioned him on Simcoe Street, the damage to the city police force had not been serious.

Magistrate Langley—He don't look big enough to damage either Piercy or Thompson, the officers who had arrested him.

Chief Newhall—"Size don't count at all. I would rather tackle a man twice my size than a short man.

Magistrate Langley, glancing in the way of the prisoner—"I'd put my money on the police any day, but just the same he should not have struck the officer.

Chief Newhall—He did not hurt the officer but I want him to learn that he must behave himself.

Magistrate Langley—Impose a fine of $20.00 and costs or 20 days in jail.

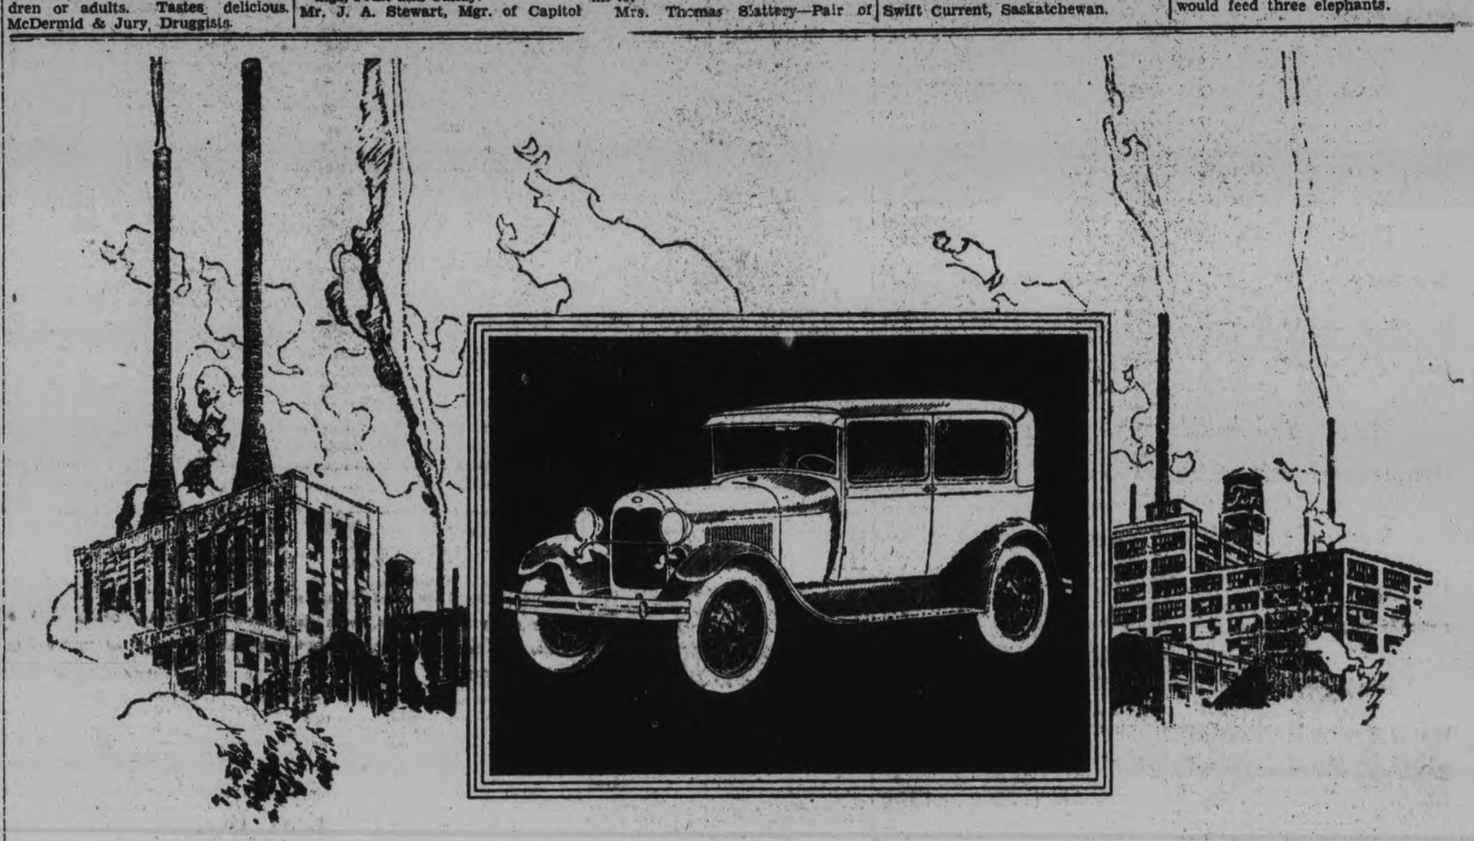
Stirling

(Examiner Correspondence)

STIRLING, Jan. 16.—Thomas Donnan has sold his farm on the 2nd concession of Rawdon to Arthur Juby, who has disposed of his farm to Oliver Stapley, of Madoc Junction. The farm Mr. Juby sold to Mr. Stapley was purchased from Mr. Donnan several years ago.

Friends of the Rev. S. A. Corrigan, late of St. James' Church here, will be pleased to learn that he was the unanimous choice as chairman of the Separate School Board in Kingston.

The most expensive animal to keep in captivity is the walrus. The food bill of a full-grown walrus would feed three elephants.



A PROMISE FULFILLED

WHEN the New Ford was promised to the motoring public our reputation, established by twenty-three years of undisputed leadership, came to the test. Restrictions as to price, raw materials and labour did not exist. The new car should be a masterpiece—the contribution of its makers to the automotive history of the age. Practical idealism would fashion it into the fleet, sturdy, beautiful car of today.

It was promised. Curtains of rumour and uncertainty cloaked the months. It appeared. One year on the highways of the world proved its speed, power, endurance; one glance, its beauty. The promise is fulfilled.

You have seen Ford cars glide by, moving into traffic, manoeuvering, taking the lead. ¶Now drive one yourself and feel the superabundant power at your command. ¶Any Ford dealer will be glad to give you a demonstration.

A NEWSPAPER--AND MORE

The Examiner is more than merely a purveyor of news. It is true that its principal function is that of distributing current news, but to this it has added other graces, touching the more intimate life of every reader. The following are some of its services:—

WOMEN'S INTERESTS

The Women's Pages of The Examiner are designed to be real helps. Nearly all the articles appearing on them are local in nature—many are written and suggested by Peterborough district readers.

A daily column which is conducted by "Marion" is full of ideas that will help every woman.

Daily, too, there are letters from readers giving hints, asking advice, or telling experiences. It is a real meeting place for real neighbors.

Mary Marshall contributes a daily illustrated article on dress.

Every day there is given a "Favorite Recipe" or two, contributed by Examiner readers.

"Neighborly Helps" is a column where readers answer requests for help, giving recipes asked for, and other hints.

Every Saturday there is a double column of Women's Institute news; an article on marketing; an article on entertaining, and a "Song of Love," dainty verse usually contributed by readers.

FREE HELPS

Every week there is offered a diagram-pattern of some up-to-the-minute garment that can be easily made by the home dressmaker.

Advice on matters of etiquette, weddings, and suchlike is gladly given by Marion, either through the columns of the paper or privately by letter.

JUST TWO EXAMPLES OF THE SERVICE

A city lady, bedridden and not expected to live the day out, took a fancy to a certain prepared food described in the Women's Page. A relative telephoned The Examiner, and Marion, who had forgotten in what store she saw the new food, searched until she found it. An Examiner car then made a special trip to carry the tin to the inquirer.

A young lady wrote to Marion asking advice about a farm house wedding. Such questions as what to serve, how to serve, payment of expenses, what presents to give, and many more, were asked. Marion's reply covered five typewritten sheets, explaining the procedure from sending out the invitations until the departure of the honeymoon couple.

OMEMEE BRANCH HOLDS MEETING

Sewing Demonstrator Will Take Charge of Institute Class.

(Examiner Correspondence)

OMEMEE, Jan. 16.—The Omemee branch of the East Victoria Women's Institute met on Thursday evening, January 9, at the home of Mrs. D. Rea. The meeting opened with the Ode, Mrs. J. Widdis presiding.

The secretary, Mrs. McGinnis, called the roll and the responses were varied, numbering many poems on the New Year, humorous sketches, etc. A solo by Miss Mildred Williamson followed, entitled "Mother's Lullaby." Various matters of business were brought before the meeting and voted upon. It was unanimously decided to have a sewing demonstrator visit Omemee the first two weeks in March if possible when classes will be held at the home of Mrs. R. Wilson each afternoon. Anyone who wishes may join this class. The fee to members of the institute will be 25c and to non-members 50c for two weeks' tuition, the 50c fee making non-members members of the institute.

It was also decided to ask for a special speaker for the June meeting.

A unique pattern for a quilt was decided on, which when made will be for sale. Mrs. E. MacPherson and Mrs. R. Wilson were appointed as a flower committee.

A splendid piano selection was given by Frances MacPherson and a reading by Mrs. Fred. Evans, both of which were much enjoyed.

At the close of the meeting a social time was enjoyed with Mrs. Russell Brooks, Mrs. P. Parsons and Mrs. T. E. MacPherson as hostesses.

The next meeting will be preceded by a sleighing party to the home of Mrs. R. Brooks, on February 13.

Week of Prayer.

Owing to inclement weather, the week of prayer observed in Trinity United Church was not as largely attended as it otherwise would have been. The meetings each night, with the exception of Thursday, were led by the pastor and were bright with song. On Thursday evening the young people from Bethel took charge. Rev. J. T. E. Blanchard presided at the piano and Mrs. Oswald Ruth conducted the services in a very efficient manner. Harry Jackson delighted his hearers and brought many truths home when he spoke from the words found in Acts 26-28, "Almost, thou persuadest me to be a Christian." A pleasing solo, entitled "Let Jesus Come Into Your Heart," was given by Miss Eleanor Sherin.

At the conclusion of the program the pastor expressed to the visitors the appreciation of the gathering for their effort in braving the elements and providing the splendid entertainment, which no doubt would be a benefit to all.

TO BUILD SANITARIUM.

Quebec Government Will Erect Large Hospital To Care For Province's Tubercular Patients.

MONTREAL, Jan. 16 (Canadian Press).—The provincial government will shortly build a sanitarium for the care of tubercular patients in the neighborhood of Montreal, it was announced here yesterday by Hon. Athanase David, Provincial Secretary. The present sanitaria at Laval and Lake Edward will also be enlarged, added Mr. David.

Millbrook

MILLBROOK, Jan. 16—(Examiner Correspondence).—The annual installation of officers of Golden Sheaf Rebekah Lodge, No. 176, will be held on Tuesday, January 23, at 8 p.m., the District-Deputy President, Mrs. Sexsmith, of Havelock, having charge of the ceremony, assisted by the local Past Noble Grand officials.

Mrs. J. G. Bryett, and son, Gerald, of Peterborough, are guests of her mother, Mrs. T. G. Harkness, this week.

The many young people of the community who have been impatient for the enjoyment of skating had their desire fulfilled this week, the Cosmos Rink Company opening its open air rink the early part of the week. Until the recent cold weather winter sports have been rather at a discount, but many bob-sleighs were in town on Saturday, the heavy snowfall making good sleighing, and evidently tempting those living in the country to make their week-end trip to the village by this means.

The Misses Marcella and Marguerite Lang have been guests of Mr. and Mrs. Walter Wright, Peterborough, this week.

Owing to the epidemic of flu in the vicinity of her school at Courtice, Miss Gertrude Spence had an extra two weeks' holidays, returning on Saturday and expecting to begin the new term's work with her pupils on Monday morning, January 14.

The extremely inclement weather on Friday evening was responsible for the very small attendance at the community hall, Centreville, for the play, "Green Stockings", and it was decided to repeat the entertainment on Wednesday, January 16, at 8 p.m. The play was much enjoyed by those brave enough to venture over the roads in Friday's storm, and doubtless will attract a much larger gathering to-night.

PRESBYTERIAN CHURCH

in the bank to begin the work for the present year.

The managers and congregation wished to express their appreciation of the efforts of Pryce Nesbitt and the choir for their splendid work during the year.

R. N. Morrison, church treasurer, in his report showed that almost $400.00 had been carried ove from 1928. There had not been the usual revenue from the garden party, on account of the heavy rain. But the fowl supper had been more remunerative than formerly. The cost of wiring the church was given in three items. Cost of material, $168.61; Lunches for the men, $7.00; Gold Watches presented to the electricians when the work was completed $96.00.

Passed Objective

The report of the ladies aid society showed a member ship of twenty-six with an average attendance of eighteen. The society had enjoyed a very successful year. The report of the W.M.S. showed that they had passed their objective and had also enjoyed a prosperous year. Stewart Anderson was absent and there was no secretary's report from the Sunday school. John Storie gave the report of the treasury. Mrs. Clarence Massie brought in the report of the Girl Guides which showed that all the members had been outfitted with uniforms and that in the present year, the funds would be available for other work. An item of interest in the report of the Young People's Society was the claim that the society of this church was the oldest and largest of the presbytery. There was no report from the Boy Scouts.

In the books of the church, the auditors reported there was $175 which had been paid out and which was not officially accounted for. He though the matter should be explained to the congregation. The amount represented the salary of the church organist and Dr. Hay wanted to know who had hired him, on what authority and at what salary.

It was moved by Dr. Hay and seconded by Alex MacDonald that the reports as read be accepted, with the exception of the auditor's report. Dr. Watson asked for a motion to accept it as well, but there was none made. J. A. Anderson said that the salary of the organist was eight hundred dollars and that the appointment had been made by the session. Unfortunately, the clerk was not present and could not, therefore, produce the ratification of the appointment. Dr. Hay produced his copy of the Blue Book and began to read the laws governing such matters. Mr. Mark R. N. Morrison, Dr. Hay, J. A. Anderson and James Massie all entered into the discussion which followed. Finally the agreement regarding the organist was ratified by a vote of the people of the church.

Managers Elected

Sine five of the managers were retiring this year, it was necessary to appoint others to fill their places. R. S. Bell, one of the retiring board, was unable to accept the office for another term. This was the word he sent with another member of the board. With this one exception, the retiring managers were re-appointed for another three-year term. They are, Garnet Curle, Dr. O. C. Watson, A. C. Connor and J. R. Battisby. Alex MacDonald was appointed to the vacany left by R. S. Bell. The auditors for 1929 will be J. A. Smith and William Hume.

Church Shed Discussed

Once more the matter of the church shed came up for discussion. It was thought that since the building was used by the farmers coming to town and almost not at all by the people of the town, that the township might be willing to lease it for a nominal sum and on condition that it be kept in repair and that it continue to be used as a shed. It was suggested that if the church wished to remove the responsibility of upkeep on the building to another quarter that the land and building be offered for sale to those whose property it originally was a part. Mrs. James Alexander was strongly opposed to any change being made in the present order of things. Finally, there was a committee of three appointed to wait on the Seymour township council and ask them if they would consider leasing the shed under certain conditions and terms. The committee consisted of John McGregor, John Locke and Alex. MacDonald.

Before closing the meeting, the Rev. Mr. Mark expressed his appreciation for the splendid encouragment he had been given since beginning his ministry in Campbellford and asked the members and adherents of the church to continue in the future as they had done in the past.

Farmers Surround Cabin To Find Wrong Park Man

WOODSTOCK, Ont., Jan. 16.—(Canadian Press).—Considerable excitement was created in the southern part of Oxford County late yesterday when it was rumored that John Park, Peterborough jail breaker had been hiding in a shanty. A large number of farmers, some armed with shot guns, surrounded the cabin, and Constable Makie entered the place, only to find that it was Joe Park, not Jack, who was inside. Joe was not wanted by the police.

Life carefully planned

ASK any of the boys who've made good and they'll tell you it didn't just happen by a lucky break. Their success was the result of careful planning. Hard work. Night school, perhaps. And above all, always attending strictly to this important matter of health.

"I had no time for outdoor exercise," is the story you'll hear. "I couldn't afford one of those gymnasium courses. But I figured I could keep myself in good shape by taking Nujol. I've taken it ever since. And it's helped as much as anything to keep me fit and on the job every day."

There's no easier way to keep in first rate condition than by taking Nujol. Nujol is not a medicine. It's just a pure, natural substance that helps your system to function as Nature meant it to under all conditions. Normally. Regularly. Easily.

It not only keeps an excess of body poisons from forming (we all have them), but aids in their removal. Nujol can't possibly upset or disagree with you, because it contains absolutely no medicine or drugs. It is simply a pure natural substance. Perfected by the Nujol Laboratories, 26 Broadway, New York.

Start Nujol today. Give it a fair try—for the next three months, anyway. By the end of that time—even before then perhaps—see if you don't feel much more all 'round fit.

You can buy Nujol at all drugstores for a small sum. Worth trying, isn't it? Nujol is sold in sealed packages only. Stop and buy a bottle on your way home tonight.

INSTITUTE HEARS TALK ON COURSE

Millbrook Branch To Hold Social Evening Later in the Year.

MILLBROOK, Jan. 16.—(Examiner Correspondence)—Mrs. H. J. Armstrong was hostess for the January meeting of the Women's Institute, held at her home, Union street, on Saturday, January 12, at 2.30 p.m., the president, Mrs. T. G. Harkness, being in the chair.

The attendance was encouraging, but there are still many members of the Institute who do not show that they have any active interest in the organization, since there is practically never any regular meeting at which they may be marked present.

The response to the roll call at Saturday's meeting was with a New Year's resolution, but it appeared that not many of those in attendance were prepared to make their resolutions public; however there was considerable interest shown, and some novel ideas were suggested.

The matter of holding a social evening came up for discussion during the business period, but as the town hall is in use all this month for the Agricultural Short Course, and the Institute is interested in furthering the success of this fine venture for the young people of the district, it was decided to wait until its conclusion before proceeding with a public gathering.

A reading detailing in an interesting and instructive manner the many activities now sponsored by the Women's Institutes of the Province, was given by Mrs. John Lunn, who also contributed a solo, "Pal of My Dreams," both selections being much enjoyed.

The committee in charge, Mrs. J. Lunn, Mrs. W. West and Mrs. Geo. Fallis served home-made candy and apples during the social hour at the close.

The invitation of Mrs. Thomas Ingram to hold the February meeting at her home, Anne street, was accepted. The January meeting was to have been held at Mrs. J. L. Byam's, but owing to illness in the family the change was made to Mrs. H. J. Armstrong's. Mrs. Byam's invitation will stand for a later date.

The secretary, Mrs. Will Armstrong gave some interesting details in connection with the Short Course in Domestic Science and Household Economics which is now in progress in the village, the first of its kind to be held here. Mrs. Armstrong has attended some of the lectures; the course is under the Department of Agriculture, and while this is the initial venture for girls, locally, the agricultural side for boys has been emphasized on three or four previous occasions. All the women of the community are invited to attend the demonstration of electrically-operated sewing machines which is to be a feature of the second week of the course, the date to be announced in the immediate future.

Mrs. A. M. Owens, of Kinburn, is the sewing instructress.

Hold Literary Meeting.

The first of the Friday afternoon literary meetings, in connection with the Short Course in Agriculture and Home Economics now being held here, took place in the auditorium of the Town Hall beginning at three p.m., the president, Archie Matchett being in the chair.

Mr. Kellough, Agricultural Representative, and other instructors, were present, the first-named addressing the students briefly emphasizing regular attendance, and other points, as necessary to getting the greatest possible amount of good out of the lectures and demonstrations during the month the course lasts.

Mr. Kellough expressed himself as being well pleased with the progress made so far, but urged an increased enrollment both in the boys' and girls' classes.

The program included a brief speech by the chairman; a reading by Elmer Scott; a piano solo by Mrs. George Fallis; an essay on "Beet Sugar," by Mary Sanderson; a violin solo by Harry McArthur, Miss Annie McMahon playing the piano accompaniment; an essay on "Tapioca," by Hazel Armstrong, and a violin duet by Harry McArthur and Ernest Powell.

As Mr. Matchett explained that he would not be able to continue in the office of president, Lawrence Dunbar was elected in his stead; Miss Verna Fallis is the secretary.

Similar literary gatherings will feature the Friday afternoons each week while the Short Course is in progress, debates being a possibility looked forward to as soon as arrangements can be made, and subjects chosen.

REV. DR. CLEAVER SPEAKS AT ST. JAMES

Noted Preacher is Conducting Week of Special Services in South-End Church.

A large and appreciative audience greeted Rev. Dr. Cleaver on Monday night in St. James' United Church, where he is conducting a week of special services. His sermons each night will deal with "The Problems of Life and How to Deal With Them."

As always, Dr. Cleaver held his hearers enthralled with vivid word pictures. "Prayer" was the keynote of Monday night's sermon. It is the link which connects us with Him Who alone can supply our need. No prayer, Dr. Cleaver maintains, is ever unanswered, proving this by Jesus' own words, "Ask anything in my name and I will do it." In defining prayer Dr. Cleaver quoted the words of an old hymn:

"Prayer is the soul's sincere desire Uttered or expressed."

emphasizing that prayer does not depend upon words, which are simply its clothing and not its real self. Too many prayers are like letters, most of which have a postscript. In a prayer this means asking for something and adding a "condition," as the postscript. Instead, we should say "Not my will, but thy will be done."

The message showing how prayer can open the way between us and God in meeting our need and solving the problem of life, was painted so clearly and so impressively that those hearing could not but catch the vision; understand as never before the value and the power of prayer.

During Dr. Cleaver's last prayer the choir led in softly singing the hymn "Prayer changes things," leaving this thought in each one's memory to carry away.

Obituary

MRS. NELSON WINDOVER

HALL'S BRIDGE, Jan. 16.—The death occurred Sunday morning of Mrs. Mary Windover, aged 46, beloved wife of Nelson Windover of Lakehurst, at the home of her sister, Mrs. Harry McIlmoyle.

MRS. THOMAS EASTWOOD.

HALL'S BRIDGE, Jan. 16.—The funeral of the late Mrs. Thomas Eastwood was held on Saturday from her late residence, Buckhorn House, to Ray's Cemetery, Lakefield, the Rev. R. T. C. Dwelly officiating. A large number from the vicinity were present at the funeral, showing the deep respect in which the late Mrs. Eastwood was held.

MRS. ELIZABETH NORISH

LAKEFIELD, Jan. 16.— (Examiner Correspondence).—The passing of Mrs. Elizabeth Anne Norish at the home of her daughter, Mrs. Bruce Preston, concession 12, Smith, removes another of the old timers of the community. For many years Mrs. Norish resided in Lakefield, in fact until increasing years made it inadvisable for her to be left alone and she moved out to North Smith. Mrs. Norish was a member of one of the old pioneer families of Smith, the Bickell family and was possessed of the kindly qualities of heart that characterised the family. For four generations the Bickells have lived in Smith on the Peterborough road and are a highly respected family. Mrs. Norish, although nearly eighty years of age, retained her faculties and took a keen interest in the community where her life had been passed.

MRS. WILLIAM BRUMWELL.

Following a lingering illness, Mrs. William Brumwell (nee Ruby Northcott) passed away on January 2, 1929, at the residence of Mrs. W. H. Hunter, Guernsey, Sask., in her forty-fifth year.

The late Mrs. Brumwell was born at Lakefield, and came west nearly eighteen years ago, and had resided at Plunkett until quite recently when Mr. and Mrs. Brumwell removed to Guernsey. She leaves to mourn her loss, a sorrowing husband, one son, J. H. Brumwell, of Plunkett, and two daughters, Mrs. F. V. Shantz, of Guernsey, and Mrs. W. H. Mundell, of Leroy. She is survived by her mother, Mrs. Wesley Northcott, of Lakefield, Ont., and three sisters, Mrs. Stanley Rosborough of Smith Township, Mrs. Douglas Logan, of Pontypool, and Mrs. Jas. Galvin, of Plunkett.

The funeral was held the following Friday, services being held at the home of Mrs. W. H. Hunter. Rev. D. A. MacLean, of Viscount, and Rev. W. H. Walker, of Guernsey, officiating. Interment took place in Guernsey cemetery.

AMOS SHEARER

ROSENEATH, Jan. 16.—(Examiner Correspondence)—A large number of friends and neighbors gathered at the home of the late Amos Shearer on Saturday afternoon to pay their last tribute of respect to a man who was very highly respected by the whole community.

Mr. Shearer was in the village on Saturday afternoon, apparently in good health but on Monday he contracted a cold which developed into pneumonia and he passed away about noon on Friday.

Rev. M. R. Brown conducted the service, speaking briefly of the life and activities of the deceased, his love of nature how much he enjoyed God's own beauty, the trees, waters and all things given us to work with. His happy and contented life that he took pleasure either in his launch on the water or to roam through the bush and listen to the songs of birds. Although Mr. Shearer was not in good health for some time he remained bright and cheery always. Rev. Brown conveyed the assurance to those who are left lonely by saying "We mourn not as those without hope of the resurrection of the body and of life everlasting" but through death of the body we gain life everlasting in the Kingdom of God.

Messrs. Frank and Earl Shearer, his sons, and his wife and her sister Mrs. J. Braithwaite, motored to Clarkson on Sunday with the remains.

MRS. LETITIA DROPE.

(Examiner Correspondence.)

ROSENEATH, January 16. — In the sudden passing of Letitia Drope, widow of John Coyle, the community sustained the loss of one of her pioneer citizens. The deceased lady had reached the ripe old age of 82 years and 4 months, and although unable to be out and around for the past year, she retained all her faculties until the last. Before being confined to her house, the late Mrs. Coyle devoted a great deal of her time in parish activities, a most faithful worker in the Woman's Auxiliary, she radiated a spirit of cheerfulness wherever she went, making a host of friends. Her husband predeceased her several years ago. During the years of widowhood, she has striven to make the influence of the home, in the church, and in the community as strong as in former years, even in declining years by kindly words, timely advice, and wise counsel given to those of her own connection and friends of the neighborhood. She can truly be called a virtuous woman.

The service on Tuesday afternoon was largely attended, and was conducted by Rev. Mr. Battersby, rector of St. James' Anglican Church, who eulogized the life of this fine old woman, who even during her last days had been cheerful, a shining example to all who knew her, she had lived a noble life, and her loss will be felt greatly by all who had known her and derived benefit from association with her.

Those who will deeply mourn her loss will be her daughter Elizabeth and son Harry, with whom she lived, also a son William who lived near and attentive always to his mother. Besides these three of Alnwick Township is a daughter, Mrs. Alex. Moyer, of Winnipeg, Man., and a son Thomas of Saskatchewan, three sisters, Mrs. T. Cuff, Peterborough, Mrs. Jennie Williams, Toronto, and Mrs. McConnell, Rochester, U.S.A., and one brother, Thomas Drope, of Alnwick Township.

Paraguayan demobilization in the Chaco district is expected to be completed this week.

Mystery Surrounds Death Of London Specialists

LONDON, Jan. 16.—(Canadian Press)—A crime mystery in high quarters was presented to Scotland Yard this afternoon when two Harley Street specialists brothers, were found dead under strange circumstances in a service flat in the fashionable west end section.

One was Dr. Arthur B. Smith, a specialist in radium treatment, and the other was Dr. Sydney McKendrick Smith. One brother had his throat cut and the other appeared to have died of poison.

The police were frankly uncertain whether a suicide pact existed or whether some other tragedy had been enacted.

DISTRICT CHURCHES

MILLBROOK, Jan. 16—(Examiner Correspondence).—"The Divine Order of the Lamplighters", was the subject of the New Year's message delivered to his people by Rev. W. W. Jones, at morning worship in the United Church, on Sunday, January 13, the text being chosen from Exodus 30:7: "And Aaron shall burn thereon sweet incense every morning; when he dresseth the lamps, he shall burn incense upon it."

"The fragrance and sweetness of the incense typified the beauty of prayer ascending to God, and was a symbolism not Jewish only, but belonging also to the ancient Egyptians; the Babylonians; the Assyrians; and the Phoenicians, who all followed the custom of taking sweet spices and gums and burning them in religious rites as an offering to some deity.

While the work of trimming lamps in the tabernacle, which was Aaron's duty, was not a very inspiring one, the fact that he could say 'this is by God's command' lifted the duty above the ordinary. Some 'lamps' of life that need to be trimmed and kept burning brightly include the lamp of ordinary duties, and especially of prayer; if there is a realization that even the most menial, and possibly disagreeable of tasks, are our work, and we can say 'This is of God', this consciousness will redeem even a drab life and make it into a glorious thing.

Life has not many glorious moments; Jesus had only one Mount of Transfiguration; but keep always the lamp of the superiority of the spiritual interests of life over those of the temporal, seen, and material, burning brightly. A life lived for others is immeasurably superior to the one lived only for selfish interests.

The lamp of friendliness is a fine one for a church to keep burning; and after all Christian missions are friendliness in the name of Him Who is the Friend of sinners. Light, too, the lamp of New Testament faith, and the power of Jesus Christ to redeem the guilty soul from sin; keep it burning in practice and teaching for it is a beacon of hope that epitomizes the good news of the gospel."

The lamps of true happiness, and of good cheer, were mentioned in closing, the habit of seeing the silver lining of every cloud, and turning the back upon pessimism being commended strongly.

"Let us seek communion with Him in all our undertakings, and He will give us the victory. Making this our practice, we shall have nothing to fear and nothing can tear us down from that high place."

TRENT RIVER, Jan. 16.—(Examiner Correspondence).—Rev. W. R. Archer was preacher at the United Church service on Sunday, January 13. He chose his text from Mark I:17: "Jesus said, Come ye after Me and I will make you to become fishers of men."

"The promise Jesus gives to followers is the most important part. When Jesus came to the men at the shore of the lake, He said He would teach them how to be fishermen of men. They didn't offer any excuse but forsook all and followed Jesus. They were pioneers in the business of following Him. Little folk can become fishers of men, and bring older ones to Jesus. A story was told of a scoutmaster, who was discouraged in trying to organize the scout boys. He left and returned later to find two hundred and fifty boys ready for organization. He wanted to know how it came about and one little fellow spoke up and said, 'Everyone asked another fellow.' More personal workers are needed in the church." The pastor spoke of the Rev. Dr. Campbell, of Ottawa, who is coming to assist with the special week of prayer, as one of the best fishers of men of whom he knows. "When Jesus talked to His disciples on the Mount, they wanted to keep close to Him as He read the book. We forget to take Jesus at His word. We forget His promises to us. Faith without work is dead. We are to do everything we can to assist in an answer to our prayers."

At the close of the service, Rev. W. R. Archer made an appeal to those of the congregation who would give toward the Christmas donations, to do so as soon as possible.

FIVE PAIRS OF SCISSORS NOT TOO MANY FOR 'POINSETTA'

MARION'S MAIL

Address correspondence to Marion at The Examiner Office.

"Dear Marion,

I just thought, since I have an hour to myself, that I would sit down and write you a letter. I have enjoyed so much the letters from other neighbors, that I feel I just must contribute my little share.

Not that I have anything much to write about; I never have brainy ideas like some of your correspondents. The letter, however, will show my good will.

Some time ago you wrote something about a woman who kept a comb in the kitchen, and other combs throughout the house, so that wherever she might be she could give her hair a dressing. Now, I'm something like that woman, only my weakness is scissors. I have five pairs in the house, which may seem a lot, but I can tell you it is a good thing to know where to lay one's hand on a pair when needed! There is a sixth pair, with blunt ends, for the children to play 'cut-outs' with.

I have one pair on a hook at the end of the kitchen cabinet, where they are handy for cutting oil-cloth, shelf paper, clippings for my recipe cabinet (yes, I keep all of yours), stems of flowers, and for shredding lettuce, cutting mint, celery and peppers. Does every neighbor know how handy scissors are for chopping parsley, and how appetizing chopped parsley makes many dishes? Did you ever try clipping parsley (with scissors) over a dish of potatoes? Or into white sauce? Or over poached eggs, on fish, on macaroni and cheese, over the salad, or into the omelet? I use it wherever chopped parsley will add to the relish or appearance of the dish.

I'm afraid I'm wandering from my subject. I have another pair of scissors in my work box, of course, and these are my very best, "ownest' scissors. My work box is home-made, with drawers for thread, needles, scraps, etc. (but there, I am again wandering!) The scissors are in a little case fastened to the inside of the lid.

Then I have a pair in the living room, hanging on a hook hidden behind the book case. They come in handy for many things—clipping flowers, clipping magazines, etc.

In my bedroom, I have another pair and the usefulness of these will be apparent to every woman. There's scarcely a day that I don't use this pair—and what a saving of time and steps not to have to run downstairs every time!

Lastly, I have a pair of barber's scissors in the bath room, where I can trim the children's hair—and occasionally snip a tab off my own.

Well, if I haven't established a reputation for the number of pairs of scissors in the house, I have at least won an endurance contest in writing! I hope you have been patient, Marion.

Most sincerely yours,
Poinsetta."

* * *

Yours is a very interesting letter, "Poinsetta," and I am truly glad you digressed to tell us about the variety of uses for parsley. I am doubly sure the neighbors will wish to clip this letter, and I hope they all have scissors handy! I think your idea about having scissors handy is just splendid, and I know I am voicing the desire of all the neighbors when I say "Write again, Poinsetta."

"Dear Marion:

I am a constant reader of your page and would join the voices of comment on its contents, as I know the 'cap fits'—but how does your head feel, is the cap getting tighter? Just to give you a little ease—will say I think the Daily Readings are too lengthy. There is so much else in The Examiner one wants to read when time is limited.

City. Meta."

Thank you, "Meta" for your tip—I think perhaps the readings have been a little longer than is good. But what can one do to "trim" a story by one of the world's great writers? It is SO difficult to cut down a whole book to the space we can afford!

Now, "Meta," I can make my mob cap a half-inch smaller!

"Dear Marion:

I am a reader of your page and I certainly do enjoy it. I like the Whatnot especially well.

What I am writing to ask you is Don't you get fed up (to use your own words) answering letters such as Orchid writes? That girl is silly and she should keep her mind on her school work instead of on a fellow who ignores her. I guess he wouldn't mind going with her if she wasn't so silly.

Well, Marion, I have said all I want and I will close now, wishing you all the luck in the work with your page, I remain,

Chiquata."

No, "Chiquata," I don't. I like to see letters from girls like "Orchid," because if there is one which appears "silly," there are a dozen that are real inquiries—and the one we think silly may be sincere, really. Write again, "Chiquata."

"Dear Marion,

I'm just another reader of your column. I must say I'm just crazy about your page. It's the first page I glance at every night.

I am just wondering if you would accept any little poems on your page.

I will call often now once I'm started.

T
Lenora."

* * *

Thanks for your enthusiasm, "Lenora." I'll be glad to look over the poems, and I will be looking forward to receiving the other letters you promise.

CARROT PUDDING

(Contributed by Vonny, Burleigh Falls.)

1 cup ground apples
1 cup grated carrots
1 cup raisins
1 cup brown sugar
1 teaspoon of soda
Salt to taste
Flour to stiffen
Spices if required.

FAVORITE COOKS.

(Contributed by Mrs. L. J. S.)

Two cups sugar; cup (heaping) butter; 2 eggs (beaten); nutmeg or other flavoring; 1 cup of sweet milk; 3 cups of flour; 2 teaspoons (rounded) baking powder.

Cream together in a large bowl sugar and butter' Add the eggs well-beaten. Grate in a little nutmeg or use any other flavoring preferred. Gradually pour in the sweet milk and flour which has been sifted three times with the baking powder. Roll out quite thin and use a small cutter (I could not get a small enough cutter and punched some holes in the bottom of a very small baking-powder can). Bake in rather quick oven and let the cookies get cold and hard before putting away. These will keep good and remain crisp almost indefinitely, and therefore are good to make up in large quantities.

Note.—The above recipe makes splendid lemon cookies by the simple addition of the rind and juice of one lemon, omitting all other flavoring.

That Body of Yours

By Dr. J. Barton

THE MUSCULAR POWER OF STOMACH IMPORTANT

In my student days at medical college the whole thought in a test meal was the way the stomach was secreting or manufacturing the digestive or gastric juice.

Accordingly a test meal was given which varied somewhat with the research man. The Leube meal was a plate of soup, beefsteak, a roll, and a glass of water. Six or seven hours afterwards any of this meal that was left was removed by the stomach tube. Rigel's meal was a good half pint of beef broth, a third of a pound of beefsteak, some mashed potato and a roll.

The Ewald test breakfast consists of 1½ slices of stale bread, and 1½ glasses of water. The stomach contents are then removed at end of fifty or sixty minutes; some times at end of two hours.

These meals were given and removed to give an idea of how far digestion had progressed by the action of the gastric or digestive juice of the stomach.

However, our stomach specialists nowadays are more concerned with the ability of the stomach walls to churn up its contents. In other words the actual muscle power of the stomach is considered the most important factor about the stomach.

One of the simplest tests for the muscular or motor power of the stomach, showing its ability to get its contents out of the stomach into intestine, is to give patient a handful of seedless raisins or a saucer of stewed prunes twelve hours before the test breakfast (say at 9 o'clock the evening before). The test breakfast is then given. If when it is removed, in say 50 minutes to 2 hours afterward, there is some of the raisins or prunes in what is removed from stomach, then there is something disturbing the motor power of the stomach; something is wrong.

Now while that "something wrong" may be due to stomach or intestinal ulcer, in the majority of cases it is due to a sluggish liver and constipation. In other words lack of exercise is the big factor in "slowing up" the action of the stomach.

You will remember the simple exercise of bending the body from side to side with knees straight, or any bending exercises with knees straight.

Exercise makes your stomach do its best possible work.

Did you ever have trouble cleaning a grater after you had used it for cheese or chocolate? A good trick is to grate a little soap over the used portion of the grater and then let it soak for ten or fifteen minutes in warm water. Then sozzle the grater up and down in the dish pan, let hot water run over it and you will find it quite clean.

WHAT IS CORRECT?

CONDOLENCE NOTES.

C. B. Q.—Would it be correct for me to write a note of condolence to my employer, who has just lost a member of his family by death? Or would it be better to speak to him?

A.—Yes, a short, sincere note of sympathy would be correct, and very nice. Do not speak to him of his loss, as most people, men especially, do not like to talk of such losses. Perhaps this type of note will suggest something to you:

"Dear Mr. Blank,

Will you please let me tell you of my deep and most sincere sympathy for you in the loss of your sister? I know how dear she was to you, and I realize, therefore, what her passing means to you.

Sincerely yours,
C. B."

THE ANXIOUS DEAD.

January 16, 1929.

(Lieut.-Col. John McCrae.)

O guns fall silent till the dead men hear
Above their heads the legions pressing on.
(These fought the fight in time of bitter fear,
And died not knowing how the day had gone.)

O flashing muzzles pause and let them see
The coming dawn that streaks the sky afar!
Then let your mighty chorus witness be
To them and Cæsar that we still make war.

Tell them, O guns! that we have heard their call;
That we have sworn and will not turn aside;
That we will onward till we win or fall;
That we will keep the faith for which they died.

Bid them be patient and some day anon
They shall feel earth enwrap in silence deep.
Shall greet in wonderment that quiet dawn
And in content my turn them to their sleep.

Assets and Liabilities

By H. IRVING KING

Everybody said she was going to marry him for his money, and in the face of it the statement seemed very like the truth. For what other conceivable reason should she marry him? He was forty-five and she was not yet thirty. He was a stolid business man, moving but little in society, while she was a beauty to whom society seemed to be the very breath of life. She was poor and he was rich. Anita Champlain's parents belonged to the "has-been" class, and though they still kept up a considerable show of prosperity one the conundrums with which her acquaintances amused themselves over the teacups was, "How in the world do the Champlains manage to get by?"

That Anita had been in the market now for many seasons, with no takers, was another of the pleasant little things people said about the Champlains. The rumor that she had, in spite of the storms and tears of her parents, refused several very advantageous offers was scouted by the well-informed as being altogether too preposterous for credence.

In spite of her beauty and her charm of manner there was an indefinable something about Anita that was cold and calculating.

So when Anita's engagement to the wealthy Roger Carwood was announced everybody said: "Well Anita has hooked her fish at last. What a relief!"

Roger Carwood was not so much out of society as not to hear something of all this.

Many and facile are the ways by which the unpleasant and malicious things said about us and our affairs come to us, while the kind and pleasant things seem to encounter blocked roads and impenetrable paths to our ears. And Roger Carwood in his secret heart feared that it was true—that Anita was going to marry him for his money.

It would not be true to say that he didn't care—he cared a lot—but he resolved to marry her just the same, for he was very much in love with her. And he thought—he hoped, as all men do under such circumstances—that in time she would come to love him in return. Anyway, he felt that he could make her happy by supplying her with all the ease and luxury which seemed so much a part of her life and which she now enjoyed upon such precarious tenure.

Such was the condition of things when the fickle jade Fortune began to play pranks with Roger Carwood. You have heard that old saying that riches have wings. It is true—they have, and they spread those pinions at the most unexpected times. Carwood's riches went into the aviation business and left him from being a very rich man a comparatively poor man.

There is no need to go into the details—unfortunate investments, the failure of a bank, the collapse of a railroad.

Anita's parents were properly shocked at the wickedness of Carwood in losing his money, and Mr. Champlain wrote him a stately and indignant letter, in which he informed him that after what had happened all thought of a union between himself and Miss Champlain was out of the question. Anita, he said, fully agreed with her parents.

Roger's anger at the hypocritical conduct of Champlain so enraged him that it partially mitigated the sting of Anita's defection. But only for a moment. Then came upon him with full force the realization of his added loss. He had lost his wealth and, what was of greater moment to him, he had lost Anita—lost her forever.

He tried to tell himself that it was better so—that he had found out in time the truth of the fear that had always haunted him—the fear that it was his money and not himself for which the girl cared.

Wearily he turned to his desk and tried to fix his attention upon the documents which encumbered it—papers relating to his tangled affairs. That he still had a comfortable fortune left was evident. But the great bulk of his wealth had gone—and with it Anita. If only Anita had really cared for him now what an ideal life they might have lived on what of fortune still remained to him.

"Bah!" he exclaimed. "Dreaming again!" And turned once more to the papers on his desk. He heard a step outside his library door, the door opened and there stood before him the central figure of his dreams.

"Anita," he cried.

"Yes," she replied. "I told Robert I would come right up, not to announce me. I wanted to—to take you by surprise."

"Please be seated," said Carwood. "I have just received your father's letter, in which he informs me——"

"Yes, I know," interrupted Anita; "I know what he wrote. I came to explain."

"There does not seem to be any necessity for explanation," replied Roger. "Your father's letter was sufficiently explicit."

"Poor papa," sighed Anita, "he is very much disappointed."

She had risen and now stood as if wanting to say something and not knowing exactly what to say. On the desk before her lay a written statement divided into two columns, one headed liabilities and the other assets. Anita glanced down at it, reached over and took a pen and wrote at the foot of the column headed assets, "Anita Champlain."

"There," said she, "perhaps I have entered that in the wrong column—perhaps I shall be a liability instead of an asset to you, Roger, but I'll try not to be."

THE MIRROR OF THE MODE

By Mary Marshall.

This cape ensemble for sports or travel is of solid blue and blue and beige plaid woolen materia..

We shall none of us probably live to witness a revival of the fashion for capes comparable with that which flourished during war days.

The fashion was launched then because the Paris tailors were men and they went away to join their colors—some in Germany, some in Italy, others in Austria and thousands of them in France. Incidentally they proved that a man who has spent his days sitting on a tailor's bench may make as brave a soldier as a man who has been trained in a military academy. But they left the women in the dress-making establishments to make the wraps. So instead of trying to make coats which required the skill of a tailor these women chose to make capes, and other women were glad enough to wear capes because they were relatively inexpensive, they made gloves unnecessary and they covered a multitude of small bundles if one felt that it was not patriotic to have one's small purchases sent home.

But capes have decided charms and they have never entirely gone out of fashion since the war. Certain well-dressed French women favor the long, wide cape of tweed for motor or travel and there are charming travel ensembles consisting of jacket costume with matching cape.

WHEN I started to use the touch system on the typewriter my efforts looked something like this: Now iz tthe timme fpr all goob men to cume to thz ayd ov their pazty.

Then I gave up the touch system, and I use my eyes and two fingers; sometimes three or four.

* * *

But what I wish to write about to-day is the other kind of touch system—you know there are two kinds!

* * *

Included in this other touch system is the man who comes to the door selling a useless gimcrack in the name of charity. We have had a lot in Peterborough this fall and winter.

* * *

These men are more highly skilled in their touch system than I was in mine before I gave it up, and they apparently make a success of it.

* * *

My personal opinion is that such men are not to be encouraged. If they make useful articles for the home, such as wire sink strainers, pie plate holders, mousetraps, and so on, by all means let us help them out. But when it comes to useless articles, encourage them to get into real work.

* * *

Opposed to these you have the woman who labors long hours over embroidery, or knitting, or crochet work, and endeavours to sell the products of her efforts from door to door. Lots of us can't do the work she does, or have not time, and to us her advent brings something we NEED.

That is a case in which we can well combine charity with good sense, and take the goods she has to offer. I know one woman who does the most exquisite work in quilting and embroidery, and has a wide circle of patrons in the city.

* * *

If you wish to avoid being "touched," buy things you need from people you know to need the help.

* * *

At a private bridge party last week the hostess had what was to me a new idea. She had four tables, with white, green, blue and black covers, all nicely embroidered in suitable colors. Instead of having numbers, the tallies were colored the same as the table covers, the "black" tallies being in the form of school slates.

* * *

Little changes like this add interest to the bridge party without much trouble.

* * *

And now, neighbors, what do you think of the entries in the New Year Resolution competition? I expect all will be printed this week, and I want you to write your comment on them.

* * *

Are there any you specially like? Or any of which you disapprove? If you didn't enter the competition, why didn't you? Don't you believe in making resolutions?

* * *

Your letters will be interesting to other neighbors, and I will thoroughly enjoy reading them.

* * *

How about making a pretty little cap this week—one that can be utilized for hours of work, or for hours of leisure? I have a diagram for a cap that is equally appropriate, made in net or crepe de chine, for a boudoir cap, or made in muslin for a workaday cap.

* * *

It is easily made, too, and you will be able to run it up in a few minutes. The diagram-pattern is free, with full directions, if you just return the coupon filled in.

* * *

There are still a few copies left of the instructions for wool and velvet trimming, the baby bunting bag, the corduroy beret, and the crush collar. All other helps previously offered are out of print.

* * *

The demand for these helps is gratifying, since it shows the interest you neighbors take in reading our pages, and indicates that the helps are really valuable to you.

* * *

Since the first help was offered last June, upwards of 6,000 have been sent out to neighbors. The service is altogether free, except for the two-cent stamp to cover postage.

* * *

I just hope that every neighbor who has any use for the articles on which help is given, will take advantage of my offer.

My New Year's Resolutions

The following have been entered in a competition, the result of which will be announced on Saturday.

(By "Ruralite")

As the bells ring out the old and ring in the New Year, we experience a feeling of solemnity as we realize that we have finished another volume in Life's History.

We take a retrospect of the year just gone, with its joys and sorrows, success and failure: the many things left undone, and the many, many things said and done which had been better left undone, and realize that it has gone forever, it cannot fail to bring a feeling of regret, that we had not better used the time given us.

But, then, there comes the glad thought—"God has given us the privilege of entering upon another year.

With the New Year, we begin a new volume of Life's History, with its pages clean and unmarred.

Let us resolve to try to so write them that they will not cause regrets, if we are permitted to finish them.

Let us resolve to banish unkind thoughts, envy and jealousy;

To help every good cause in so far as we can. If we cannot help, neither should we hinder.

Let us resolve that our criticism be constructive, not destructive.

Let us resolve to look for the good in our friends and neighbors; speak kindly words of encouragement and strive to make the world a little brighter and better because we have passed this way.

This can be done if day by day we make the Golden Rule the standard by which we measure our conduct.

"Do unto others as ye would that they should do unto you."

Dear Marion,—

Another year untried and unspoiled before us to make a success or a failure!

In these first moments of a New Year one wonders what new experiences, what joys and griefs await for each of us. Or will it be the same old story oft told?

I can remember that as a child I used to sit up with the older folk to watch the old year go out and I never failed to miss that thrill: sadness, solemnity and excitement combined when I heard the whistles blow and the bells ring at the stroke of twelve. "Many a summer the grass has grown green," since those days yet I still keep up the habit of reviewing all that has past in the old year and making new resolutions for the one which is to come.

Too many times I have seemed to be right where I was at the beginning, just a little older that is all. I have even made up my mind not to make any especial resolves this year, because though I start out with a fixed determination and sincere desire to do or be a certain thing I can just feel myself getting down before the year is many months old. This may show a lack of concentration or a weak will but however "she comes up smiling" every year end again, well to the front and very much in earnest, ready for another try.

One thing I always put first, perhaps because I am in need of it most, a resolve to be patient under the trials that come to us all, a desire to accept the annoying and disappointing things of life with a cheerful philosophy. I tell myself it is selfish and unreasonable to expect my particular path to be always strewn with roses as it were, that I would not expect to be exempt from troubles any more than the rest of my fellow beings. So this year I start with the lame old resolution to try harder than ever to like what I have if I cannot have what I like, to dwell less on my own wishes and wants and think more of trying to make others happy. My own mother always tried to impress upon me the truth of this being the only true way to real happiness and contentment. I have seen it worked out in her own life and although she has been a woman "acquainted with much grief," with more than the usual amount of sickness and loss of kith and kin, yet she is cheerful and content. I think she is to be envied in that she has learned the secret of happiness, and the way to make life really worth while.

It seems to me that we miss so much by constant reflection on the past. Like plain John Brown "I hate the constant whine of the foolish who repine," and yet surely it is well to remember the regret we felt over past mistakes so that we may not be so ready to make new ones if a little forethought will prevent it. The old impulses die hard Marion.

One thing must not be forgotten, that, although the most of our resolutions, my own among them, are meant to work for the benefit of ourselves and of others, yet are they bound to come to grief unless we seek wisdom and help from the source that is never failing, "if with all our hearts" we seek it.

I want to learn how to live with "charity for all and malice toward none." Every year I have to renew my vows to try. I would a more "understanding heart," to excuse the faults of those I cannot love, even "Thinker's," and I hereby resolve not to let that man rule me any more. (This is by the way, of course).

In my younger days I used to feel a certain exaltation of spirit when reading the lines—

Resolve to some high and holy work of love
And then an angel's happiness shalt know.

Not so inviting was the idea that "the trivial round and common task, should furnish all we ought to ask." All my life I have had to struggle against my hatred of monotony. I daresay I'm not alone in this.

So that brings me back to where I started from. The resolution that I would try to accept life as it comes to ordinary mortals like myself, more or less a repetition of events.

I hope all this talk about myself and things pertaining to myself will not make me seem a self-centred egotistical creature with an "I" complex. It's hard to avoid appearing so and tell at the same time what thoughts this New Year's eve brings to oneself.

Yours sincerely,
"Adastria."

Dear Marion:

What a splendid lesson you have given me regarding failures. The idea is not new, I was trained to it in early childhood, but just now I need it, and was forgetting.

What a word picture of envy! It is only evil. You ask us for our New Yeas resolutions. Do you know, resolutionr are such intimate things that the most necessary ones cannot go on paper, anyone, even though unknown. So there is so much I long to do and to be and truly it is hardly New Year longing, but all the time. I cannot even realize that the New Year has intensified the resolutions. All I can honestly say is that there is an intense hope and longing that shortly I shall win out. I wish to be of more use in the community, and physical infimities seem to make me less. It is a trial; these same infirmities keep me from doing as I wish in our home. I cannot be airing my pains, when they do not affect my health, but the pains do make me cranky. I endeavor, resolve if you like, to exercise well enough ignore the pains. I also resolve to conquer the crankiness. I know that is intensified because those around me do not realize how hard some things are. Why should they? I could make them if I would, then they would be unhappy. Why make them? The fact I cannot, and never can do what I used to is irritating, and the biggest resolve is to take it all and remember, as I have been told, that I am no longer in my teens. Before coming to my own home, so very often I boiled all inside, but had to appear sweet and pleasant, it made dealings with others easier. Now it seems so hard to gather up all the strings and hold them firmly and evenly. I am gaining, but, Marion, I cannot do it alone. No matter how strong one's will is, it cannot always win and no matter how much we intend to remember our Heavenly Father, and our Elder Brother, we just forget sometimes, and down we go.

One big resolution, not so much because of the New Year, as because it has been brought home to me, is to overcome that increasing nervous irritation.

You give us things to think about, surely. We were brought up not to have special days for starting things, but if we saw a thing was needed, if we saw some fault in ourselves, to get after it at once. Birthdays, and New Year days were milestones. Not starting points. We could hope to have accomplished more, done better work, been better by the time the next was reached, but to do our very best all the time, then there would be no sudden spurts, but a gradual, and ever-increasing gain. Not that we always accomplished it, oh, no, but it was generally some circumstance, or condition that gave us a halt, rather than a time. Perhaps I have not made myself clear; but there are so many New Year and birthday resolutions that are forgotten very soon, and so much of "I will do differently next year," and they do for a time then it is all forgotten. So many resolutions (?) are thoughtlessly made that I feel inclined to hold to my childhood's training.

Do not print this, if it is a useless jumble, or if you think it will do any one any harm, or even will not do good. We wish to be of a little use, and there is no use cluttering good space with useless words.

Resolutions, as such, are things I have not bothered with much. I have made enoughof them, and generally stuck to them.

Sincerely yours,
"Quid Est."

If Stomach Hurts Drink Hot Water

Neutralize Stomach Acidity. Prevent Food Fermentation. Stop Indigestion.

"If those who suffer from indigestion, gas, wind, or flatulence, stomach acidity or sourness, gastric catarrh, heartburn, etc., would take a teaspoonful of pure Bisurated Magnesia in a half glass of hot water immediately after eating they would soon forget they were ever afflicted with stomach trouble, and doctors would have to look elsewhere for patients." In explanation of these words a well known New York physician stated that most forms of stomach troubles are due to stomach acidity and fermentation of the food contents of the stomach combined with an insufficient blood supply to the stomach. Hot water increases the blood supply and Bisurated Magnesia, which can be readily obtained at any reliable drug store, in either tablets or powder, instantly neutralizes the excessive stomach acid and stops food fermentation, the combination of the two therefore, being marvelously successful and decidedly preferable to the use of artificial digestants, stimulants or medicines for indigestion.

The Local Council of Women holds its annual meeting this week for election of officers and for hearing reports from the affiliated societies. Many people have a hazy idea about the Local Council. It is regarded by them as a separate society altogether, where as it is really a clearing house for the activities of all the societies in the city. With its organizations of many types, all of them sending representatives to the monthly meetings, it gives a bird's eye view of the work of various sorts that each society is doing.

To the meetings come women who represent purely political organizations, like the Women's Conservative and the Women's Liberal Clubs, or those who have a patriotic and civic idea behind their endeavors, such as the Women's Patriotic League of Ashburnham, who strive to foster the patriotic impulse and go in for endeavors like that symbolized in Armour Hill Park, with its tree-planting and its floating flags.

Again, there are purely church organizations, like the Auxiliaries and Ladies' Aid Societies, bringing to the annual meetings an account of efforts whereby the various churches of the city are enriched and assisted. By means of concerts, of special campaigns, of teas and bazaars and socials, these women help along the work of God in the community, and their sister societies are those devoted to missions, both at home and abroad.

Then there are societies like those of the Home and School Associations, parent and teacher and pupil get-together efforts that bring into line the many elements of life that go toward the education of the child. The home and the domestic hearth are perhapmost strongly represented in these endeavors.

Charitable associations are numerouss The majority of the women's organizations go in for charity, in some form or another, remembering the Master's great precept in this regard.

There are organizations which are purely professional, like the Graduate Nurses' Association and Nicholls Hospital Alumnae, societies that have culture for their keynote, such as the Women's Canadian Club with its program of lectures and the Women's Art Association, with its many affiliations of Arts and Crafts, Art Study work, weaving and handicraft of various types and French Conversation study classes.

There is the Women's Christian Temperance Union, with its aims and objectives that have to do with the discouragement of drink and tobacco; the Church Women's Associations, that try to create a social atmosphere among church members; the Women Teachers' Guild, another professional organization that also has its ramifications in charitable work; the Ladies' Auxiliary to the Canadian Legion, directing its efforts towards the alleviation of want and discouragement among the families and dependents of returned men, and the Young Women's Christian Association, which has so many endeavors of various sorts, almost too numerous to mention, ranging from the physical welfare of the young girls who come to its classes, down to the educational classes from which they benefit so much and the little club for overseas girls who come here, friendless and alone, and find in it companionship which saves them from homesickness and desolation.

And there are the Chapters of the Imperial Order of the Daughters of the Empire, having as their main object for some years now their vast National Education Fund which provides higher education for children of soldiers of the Empire. They go in also for local charities and for assisting to educate city children who are unable to go into higher classes, unless helped financially.

A glance at the annual reports which will be heard this week at the annual meeting of the Local Council of Women will give a comprehensive idea of the many works and efforts of the women of the city in the societies affiliated with the Council.

VOICE OF THE PEOPLE

THE CITY LEAGUE.

Editor, Evening Examiner.
Dear sir:

In last evening's issue it appeared in the Views of Sport column that several players were playing in junior and senior City League, which was strictly against the rules. Permit me to say that such rule was never passed at any meeting and now that the league and clubs are nicely organized some one has to try to bring in this rule. Why? Just to upset the league and clubs. Players need not be afraid to play; the rule is not in effect and therefore no player can be suspended. The president and executive of the league will look after the affairs of the league.

Yours truly,
AN ENTHUSIAST.

FAMOUS HOCKEY GAMES OF PETERBOROUGH TEAMS

By F.D.C.

As has already been pointed out in these articles Peterborough had three teams in the O.H.A. in 1917 and the only outfit to win their district was the intermediate team, from which little was expected.

The team was made up of the surplus senior players bolstered up with graduates from the junior team of that season and had a merry series of battles before finally grabbing the group title.

One of the toughest of these struggles was the game in Cobourg which was won by the Lakeshore team after a spectacular argument. Had the Petes won this game they would have been district champions and the Cobourg victory necessitated a sudden death game in Port Hope, which will be a story by itself.

That Cobourg fixture was a real old-fashioned hammer and tongs argument. Cobourg finally won by 5 to 4, but only after a barrel of excitement.

The Petes took an early lead, Art Hall scoring on a pass from "Hounder" Ross in two minutes and adding another 22 minutes after from a scrimmage in front of the Cobourg nets.

Before half time Cobourg had tied the score, the first goal credited to them being disputed.

The real fun came in the second half. First Bearss, the Petes' defence player, was benched and Freeman of Cobourg followed for slashing. Niles of Cobourg was hurt and retired taking Halpin of the Petes with him and Bond got the gate for tripping the Cobourg man, leaving the Petes playing four men to five. With the one man advantage Cobourg took the lead, although the Petes protested vigorously that the puck had not entered the nets.

Kenneally of the Petes broke his skate and had to leave the ice. Freeman going with him and with the teams five a side Ross tied the score on a pass from Bearss.

More excitement followed. Bond and Guy mixed it and both were chased and right after Ross started a fight with Patton the Cobourg goalie and they were banished, leaving the teams with only three men each, and Cobourg without a goal tender. Art Hall went in alone to score for the Petes and put the visitors ahead.

Then Bearss was sent off for tripping and the Petes only had Goalkeeper Flowers and Art Hall, the centre player on the ice, while Lavis, Gliddon and Payne were all that were left of the Cobourg crew. Hall, the only skating player out there for the Petes tried to check the three Cobourg men but Gliddon got away and beat Flowers to tie the score. Following the next face off Hall was tripped and while he was stretched out on the ice, the Cobourg trio dashed in on Flowers. He stopped the first shot and the puck bounded into the corner. When he left his net to check Lavis the latter passed out in front to Gliddon, who had nothing to do but poke it into the empty net, putting Cobourg in front 5 to 4.

That ended the scoring but not the excitement for as soon as the sides were even Flowers was hit in the face with a swift shot and the game was held up until he had been patched up. As a climax Bearss and Gliddon had a battle and were put in the cooler. Altogether the Petes drew 16 penalties while 9 of the Cobourg team were chased.

Cobourg— Goal, Patton; point, Payne; cover, Guy; rover, Gliddon; centre, Lavis; right wing, Niles; left wing, Freeman.

Referee—Glen Caldwell, Barrie.

SIXTEEN RINKS ENTER BONSPIEL

Consolation Play Already Started By Campbellford Curlers —On Second Round.

RESULTS GIVEN.

(Examiner Staff Correspondence).

CAMPBELLFORD, January 16. — So great was the interest created in local curling circles by the original local bonspiel which was used as a means of officially opening the curling season here, that the club has decided to hold a second bonspiel, and this is already under way. This time it is both bigger and better. Last week there were only fifteen rinks entered, and there was no consolation as it was originally thought there would be. This time there are sixteen rinks and the consolation has already been started. The first round of the primary has already been played and only one game is still waiting for the second round to be complete. The third round will go on Thursday night, starting at seven o'clock. To-night the ice will be used in the consolation series. Harry Denike, whose rink won the safety razors, the prizes for the first bonspiel, was eliminated from the list of primary winners last night by James Gay, with the score of ten to four. All games are eight ends, and there are two games on each ice each evening.

First Round.

In the first round, F. C. Bonnycastle won from W. S. Wiggins by refault. P. J. Sarginson defeated J. P. Archer, nine to five. C. W. Palliser won from F. J. Smith, seven to four. John Gay won from Joseph Poulton, seven to five. George Haig won from Marshall West eight to four. D. E. Tait won from R. H. Cole, eight to four. H. Denike defeated A. J. Meyers ten to five. James Gay won from S. J. Moore, but the score was not recorded.

Second Round.

F. C. Bonnycastle to play P. J. Sarginson.

John Gay 10	C. W. Palliser 8
D. E. Tait 12	George Haig 6
James Gay 10	Harry Denike 4

Third Round.

The games in the third round and the remaining game from the second round will be played on Thursday evening. John Gay will meet the winner between F. C. Bonnycastle and P. J. Sarginson. D. E. Tait will meet James Gay. The finals will be played on Friday if the other games are run off as per schedule.

Consolation.

So far only one game has been played in the consolation series. There are three other games scheduled for to-night, F. J. Smith and Joseph Poulton, Marshall West and R. H. Cole, and A. J. Meyers and S. J. Moore. The game played to-night gave J. P. Archer a victory over W. S. Wiggins with a score of eight to seven. Archer is now scheduled to meet the winner of Smith and Poulton.

Joe Robinson, veteran outfielder, has made application for the management of the Fort Smith team of the Western Association. Runt Marr recently became president of the club and it is understood he will appoint a man to look after the team on the field. Robinson, an Indian, is said to be more than 45 years old, but played a strong game with Joplin during the 1928 season.

SKI-ING IS FAST BECOMING CHIEF WINTER SPORT

Dept. of Natural Resources Asserts Ski-ing Has Advantages Over Skating.

10,000 SKIERS IN CAPITAL.

Bobsleighing and Tobogganing Are Also Losing in Popularity.

OTTAWA, Jan. 15.—(By Canadian Press)—What is Canada's most popular winter outdoor sport? A few years ago there would have been no question about it. Skating and its associated game of hockey would have been given the decision. Times have changed and the Natural Resources publication says: "Skiing is undoubtedly Canada's most popular outdoor winter pastime and year by year he number of its devotees steadily grows."

There has been much written as to whether skating has to take second place to the Norwegian pastime in popularity among Canadians and many writers have expressed the opinion that the steel blades are steadily giving place to runners of ash and hickory. Some have foreseen in this a dearth of hockey players in future because a person has to be an outstanding skater before he can be of much use in chasing a puck. However many of the young people both ski and skate. Certainly the school rinks where hockey starts are still a big attraction and nearly all the youngsters who throng them also are fairly proficient on skis.

"The great outdoor sport of skiing" says the Natural Resources circular, "has the immense advantage that it can be enjoyed in as leisurely or strenuous a fashion as the participant desires, and on that account almost as many past the age of 40 years as under are among its devotees. Although all may not become proficient in the art of ski-jumping and consequently quite a number turn out to watch these displays of skill and daring, there are no spectators at a ski hike or cross country run, when novice and expert each derive a maximum of enjoyment from the outing. However the craft of skiing does not end with the ability to travel quickly over the snow, fascinating as that is, but just as the expert skater goes on to greater development of his skill so the earnest student of skiing has before him the technical side of the pastime and scores of difficult feats."

10,000 Skiers in Capital.

While snowshoeing is still useful in many occupations it has surrendered absolutely to skiing as a sport. Bobsleighs and toboggans are also losing in popularity before the Norse pastime. Ottawa has one ski club with 2,000 members which is claimed to be the largest in the world and it is estimated that there are 10,000 active skiers in the Capital. They mostly hike in the Gatineau Hills north of the city. The rolling Laurentian country near Montreal makes skiing a great sport there and the city of Quebec is famous for its ski trails and slides. Many of the smaller towns of Ontario and Quebec also have growing clubs. Out in the Rockies and Selkirks skiing has been popular for years and the carnivals there, at Banff and Revelstoke, are world famous.

This winter more people are following the ski-trails than ever before. They got an early start in this region; considerable snow fell about the first of December in East Ontario and Quebec. However mild weather interfered later, but with the turn of the year more snow came and the hills were soon thronged with boys and girls, men and women, rushing along the trails dodging the trees, and doing breath taking turns.

HEARS CALL OF THE RING

NEW YORK, N.Y., January 15 (Canadian Press). — Tom Heeney, the "hard rock" Gene Tunney blasted in his last heavyweight title defence, has heard the call of the ring again. The New Zealand warrior is busy training for a come-back effort he hopes will land him another chance to win the title.

He may fight Paulino again for the right to face the winner of the Sharkey-Stribling match in Miami Beach on February 27.

BISONS BEAT BULLDOGS.

Flying Dutchmen Battle to Five-All Tie With Lalonde's Cataracts.

LONDON, Ont., Jan. 16 (Canadian Press).—With the count knotted at 1 all at the end of the third period of last night's exciting Canpro game here between the London Panthers and Hamilton Tigers, Corbeau's locals only took 38 seconds of the overtime to break the deadlock; only four minutes more to clinch this with another; and then they successfully staved off the Hams' furious attacks in a wild finish that had the small crowd standing on the seats.

Bisons Win Out

WINDSOR, Ont., Jan. 16 (Canadian Press).—The Buffalo Bisons, led by Percy Lesueur, Windsor's first pro. hockey manager, finally took a verdict over the hirelings of Herb Mitchell here last night, 2 goals to 1. The defeat put an end to the Bulldogs' winning streak, which they had stretched to four games since the New Year dawned.

Battle to Tie

NIAGARA FALLS, Jan. 16 (Canadian Press).—The Green shirted Flying Dutchmen of Kitchener invaded "Newsy" Lalonde's camp last night and held the Cataracts to a five-all score. The contest went into overtime, but without further scoring. The games was a fast exhibition, and was exciting as any Canpro tilt played here to date. It was the first Falls' home fixture in three weeks and was witnessed by some 1,500 fans.

Bill Hunnefield, second baseman of the Chicago White Sox, was slightly burned about the hands on December 23, attempting to save a new automobile from destruction by fire in the garage of his father-in-law. The latter was in the garage when a small oil heater exploded, setting the car on fire. Hannefield ran in and drove the machine out in spite of the fact that it was on flames.

"Frenchy" Belanger Plans For Future, Canadian Lightweight To Enter College

Too often the boxer who meets with success in the ring profession is satisfied with that success and gives but scant thought to the future. Many boxers who in past years were enormously or, at least, reasonably wealthy, are to-day suffering the effects of penury. On the death of the late Tex Rickard it was recalled that his generousness had kept many a former great of the boxing game from near - starvation. "Frenchy" Belanger, a youngster in years, but one of the outstanding figures in the flyweight class, has the wisdom to look to the future. Belanger, after holding the world's championship, neglected his training last spring, and lost several decisions to men who had no license to beat him. He appears to have learned his lesson thoroughly. Not only is he now satisfied to go through the rigors of training necessary to keep him at his best boxing form, but he is looking ahead to the time when he will have forsaken the ring for another walk of life. Belanger has made many thousands of dollars through boxing, and will probably make many more, but he is not content with this. According to present plans, the Canadian flyweight champion will next year better his education by attending St. Michael's College. A thorough education is the local boxer's aim, and his enterprise is surely to be commended.—Toronto Globe.

McGILL WANTS FORWARD PASS

When Frank Shaughnessy was coach for the McGill University football team, he was censured at times for trying to have American rules adopted by the Canadian Union, but now that he has severed his connection with that college, his ideas still linger around the seat of learning.

Art Burridge, assistant physical director, has sent circulars to coaches and football authorities throughout the country outlining some changes that McGill would have made in the rules.

There is a feeling that under the present code the teams present a defence which is much stronger than their offence and the patrons do not get the thrills which result from scoring as a result.

At the annual meeting of the Rules Commission, which will be held next month, Major Forbes, one of its members, will suggest that the forward pass be used, but that the rules governing the play be different to those used across the border.

Following is the McGill idea of how the pass should be governed:

1—The pass must be thrown from a point at least five yards behind the line of scrimmage. Penalty, loss of one down. This is to prevent its being used indiscriminately with the chance of its replacing end runs.

2—The pass may be thrown or received by any back or outside wing. All players of the defending team are eligible to receive the pass.

3—The pass may be thrown only once during any scrimmage. Penalty, loss of one down and 10 yards, as at present. The object of this to retain the general characteristics of our game.

4—The pass may be used on the first or second down only. Penalty, loss of ball. This to prevent its replacing our kick, which is the great feature of our present game.

5—Definition: A completed pass is one that is thrown from a point at least five yards behind the line of scrimmage and is cleanly caught by one of the eligible men of the offensive side in the prescribed area without the ball having touched the ground or ineligible men.

6—The pass must be completed within the 70-yard area from the passer's goal-line. Penalty, if first touched by the thrower's side after crossing the 70-yard line, a scrimmage by the defending team on the 40-yard line. The distance was chosen (a) to prevent making it worth while to specialize on onside passes at the expense of other plays. If a team could score by using onsides anywhere close in, they might stress this play to the detriment of other features of our game. (b) Because 40 yards from opponents' goal line is approximately the distance from which a team could score on kicks.

7—If the pass is incompleted, the players of the thrower's side become ineligible and the ball will be treated in all respects as if it had been punted instead of passed, and yards must be given as after a kick now. This is to do away with the long delays caused in a somewhat similar play used in the United States.

8—If a pass is thrown out of bounds: (a) First offence, ball brought back, rescrimmaged; (b) second offence, loss of ball.

9—The good points of the above plan are: Weakens the defence by introducing a new threat in the mad-backfield which must be covered; permits of greater success in our end runs and increases the chance of plunges breaking into the open and becoming spectacular; introduces a new, thrilling play; offers more tactical choice to the quarter-back; increases the number of players who will be handling the ball as compared to the present methods; permits of the elimination of the onside kick, which is so dangerous and much criticized, although kicker might still be permitted to recover his own kick.—Hamilton Spectator.

BALL VETERANS SIGN CONTRACTS

PROMISING RECRUITS.

NEW YORK, Jan. 16.—It's a dull day at Giants' headquarters when at least one member of John McGraw's class in primary and advanced baseball fails to enroll for the big food rodeo which opens in mid-February down near the Alamo. By mid-Summer the appetites will be scattered all the way from Bridgeport to the Three-I League, but let the more distant future take care of that. Just now the boys are getting the molars in trim for the encillades, frijoles and tamales, with a little Mexican pastry on the side, at San Antonio.

Wintering in South

In yesterday's batch were two outfielders. One of them may be classed as the youngest landmark at the Polo Grounds. He answers to the name of Melvin Ott and he was so young when McGraw grabbed him that he had to get parental and his teacher's permission to become a ballplayer. Melvin is Wintering down in Gretna, La., and even Gertna must have been more pleasant yesterday than the wide open spaces of Broadway.

The other contract in yesterday's mail was officially autographed by Tony Kaufman, a reformed pitcher, who has turned straight and become an outfielder. Tony has flung many a game against the Giants, but apparently he was none too hot out there on the hill. Otherwise he would not be nurturing ambitions as an outfielder. Last season he was with Rochester, which means that Branch Rickey did not want him. The Cards plucked everything they needed from Rochester store, the largest in the chain.

With these two players added to the list the Giants have fourteen players in line. Perhapes it would be better to call it thirteen players and one coach. The Giants rate Ray Schalk as a player, but it will be quite a trick if Raymond proves it.

Many Signed

The signed Giants include Pitchers Benton, Genewich, Walker and Boney, and Catchers Hogan and Witry. The infield talent is represented by Andy Cohen and Baxter Jordon. Five outfielders—Roush, Ott, Fullis, Kaufman and Veltman—are also in line, leaving only Jim Welsh and Fred Leach outside the fold.

These are not all who have signed, according to Mr. Tierney, but these must suffice until some more names come to mind. It would not do to give out all the names at one time. No ball club does that these Wintry days. By the end of the month all the contracts will be in the safe, says Jim.

MANUFACTURERS' LEAGUE

C.G.E. Bowlers put a crimp in the Ontario Marble Co. team this week by garnering 6 out of 8 points. The heavy gunning of Weese and Playford for the winners was a feature of the battle. Playford 218, 214, 209—641; Weese 186, 233, 217—636. Ed. Leonard copped the high single with a total of 268.

Stocks Breadmakers slipped the rollers under the Canadian Woollen's aggregation for a 6 to 2 victory in a battle that was a good exhibition of consistent bowling. Gray and Sproats both made 581 in total pinnage, while their teammate, W. Pallant, took high single with 236.

The Peterborough Canoe Co. gang of hitters are beginning to look like dangerous contenders for the championship of the second half. They cleaned up on the Merchants Press this week, 6 to 2, and seem to be improving steadily. T. Taylor spurted away to a high three total of 678, which was also high for the night. His high single total was 293.

Ackerman and Co. pin topplers blanked the Fitzgerald and Co. crowd who were away below their usual style. J. LeBarr and R. Everett were the feature performers for Ackerman's, the latter taking high single, 216.

C. G. E. SHOP LEAGUE

The Fitters No. 3 team in Group 1 of the C.G.E. Shop League shut out Machine Shop No. 2 this week in every game, having a comfortable margin of 300 pins in total pinnage. F. Wade was the heavy hitter with 619 for high three.

Meter Winding took the odd game from Armature Assembly. Watkins chalked up 275 single and 606 high three.

King's crew of Alley bumpers on Tool Room No. 1 team have a fine record so far, having been able to cop 34 wins in 39 starts and have an average total pinnage for each night of 2581 pins.

Hockey Magnates Plan League For Havana

HAVANA, Cuba., Jan. 16 (Canadian Press).—Benny Leonard, retired undefeated lightweight champion, and Colonel John S. Hammond, acting general manager of Madison Square Garden, are in Havana on a give-and-take proposition. They are looking into the possibility of establishing hockey at Havana and in taking back to New York several teams of Jaialai players. Leonard is owner of the Pittsburgh Pirates of the National Hockey League.

WILL MEET BELANGER

The recognized champion of the flyweights so far as New York is concerned, is Izzy Schwartz, who is pictured above. Schwartz was to have met Frenchy Belanger, the Canadian champion, in Toronto next Wednesday night, but the bout was postponed because of the illness of Belanger. Dr. Barton, the Ontario athletic commissioner, examined Belanger Saturday, and reported that he would likely be around on Tuesday ready to resume training. He has shaken off the flu and the twist in his back is nearly better. Belanger will probably meet Schwartz before the end of the month, according to present reports.

VIEWS ON SPORTS

The fans should be on hand to see the four big games of the City Hockey League at the Brock to-night.

Dick Butler, the jovial president of the O.H.A., was in to see us yesterday. Dick was skipping one of the Lindsay rinks in the Tankard played here, and he throws a mean rock.

* * * * * * *

Lindsay won the district Tankard played on the ice of the local Curling Club yesterday, defeating Fenelon Falls by 4 points and the Peterborough Curling Club team by 9 points in the last game. The games were featured by some very close games and some splendid curling.

* * * * * * *

The Peterborough Curling Club are developing some fine young curlers in their junior club. Practically every afternoon these young chaps are out playing, and they are coming along fast under the careful tuition of some of the older players.

* * * * * * *

Most of the talk around the curling rink is of an artificial ice rink in the near future. The rinks in Toronto and many other centres have artificial ice on which to play. In beginning their season much earlier, they get a more finished brand of curling; and it is believed here that the artificial ice helps the club in that good ice can always be expected, there being no breaks in the season bcause of thaws.

* * * * * * *

The Maple Leafs on their scoring record should be standing at the head of the N.H.L. They have scored more goals, had more assists, and, one of the features of their season, have had no tie games. The scoring and penalty records by clubs is as follows:

	G.	A.	Pts.	Pen.
Maple Leafs	46	35	81	309
Detroit	41	27	68	190
Montreal	41	24	65	330
Rangers	37	21	58	173
Boston	36	19	55	245
Canadiens	34	17	51	228
Americans	28	11	39	303
Ottawa	25	13	33	237
Pittsburg	23	10	33	190
Chicago	20	11	31	180
Total, Canadian Group	174	100	274	1407
Total, American Group	157	88	245	978

* * * * * * *

There promises to be some hectic hockey played in the City Hockey League's big program of four games scheduled for this evening.

It looks as though the two university teams, Varsity or Queen's, will be fighting it out for the Senior O.H.A. championship this year. Both teams stand unbeaten after having played the other two clubs in the group, St. Michael's and Preston. Dad Ashley's team put the St. Miches in the cellar position by their 4 to 1 victory last night.

Rumor has it that there will be several new faces on the Peterborough Central Ontario ball team next spring, in the shape of a new first sacker and third baseman. Fred Ash, although a corking good first sacker, is worth more to the team out in the field pulling down hard hit flies and it is expected that he will be moved back to his old position.

Canadian Challenge Refused By Rochester

TORONTO, Ont., Jan. 16 (Canadian Press).—The challenge of the Royal Canadian Yacht Club for Canada's Cup, held by the Rochester Yacht Club, cannot be accepted this year, and the contest for the cup will have to be postponed, officials of the Canadian club were informed yesterday by the Rochester club. There was not sufficient time for the construction of a ten metre or an eight metre yacht and use of present boats would be unsatisfactory, said Rochester club officials. The suggestion of the Rochester club was accepted.

ADELAIDE, Australia, Jan. 16 (Canadian Press Cable).—Australia will give a tryout to A. Jackson, a new batsman, when they meet England in the fourth cricket test match here beginning February 1, it was announced to-day by the board of control. Mr. Jackson comes from New South Wales. He will replace Victor Richardson, South Australia, who played in the second and third games and who failed to show his best form in these matches. The board of control announced that the balance of the Australian side will be the same as that which put up such a splendid fight and just failed to save the rubber in the third test at Melbourne.

Adds Touch of Humor to Screen Version of "The Whip"—Color Etchings of Famous English Race Horses in One Set.

A series of interesting color etchings, authentic copies of the works of leading English artists, make up the decorations of one set in "The Whip," the First National picture featuring Dorothy Mackaill, which comes to the Capitol Theatre here, beginning to-morrow.

Horses figure in every etching, for the English are great lovers of riding and racing. The pictures are from 30 to 50 years old. They show a party of horsemen "going to clover," the Westchester Hunt, the high jump, the steeplechase, the polo match and a race of polo ponies.

One of the most humorous shows an umbrella race. This is a competition in which the riders must carry an open umbrella the distance of a half mile. If the wind caused by a fast ride turns the umbrella inside out, the rider must return to the starting point and begin again. Frequently every entrant suffers a collapse of his umbrella, which adds greatly to the thrill and uncertainty of the race, particularly when one is wagering on a favorite.

"The Whip," a famous old English melodrama, was directed by Charles Brabin, and has Ralph Forbes, Anna Q. Nilsson, Lowell Sherman, Marc McDermott and others in the cast.

HAS HARD LUCK.

Lorne Chabot, brilliant net guardian of the Maple Leafs, in the N.H.L., who had hard luck on Saturday night, when warding off 50 hot shots and holding the New York Rangers scoreless, he was served with a swift angle shot from close in during the last moments of an overtime period, and let in one goal required by the American team to give them the game. It was recognized as being an impossible shot to stop, and Chabot continues to enjoy the unbounded favor of the fans and of his team by whom he is regarded as an invaluable player.

FOUR CITY LEAGUE GAMES TO-NIGHT

Four fast hockey games will be staged by evenly matched teams in the City Hockey League at the Brock Street Rink this evening. The first game begins at six o'clock, and the big program is over at ten.

Barrie's and All Saints' meet in the first struggle in the Junior series, and this promises to be a tidy argument. Both teams have lined up strong junior players, and have had many practices.

At seven o'clock the De Laval and Cognawagas will be thrown the puck. The Cognawagas will be on their toes, smarting from 3 to 2 defeat suffered at the hands of the C.G.E. in the first game.

The second Senior game in which the Tool Room do battle with the team from George Street should be a treat. Both these teams dropped their first games and will strive to keep up with the leaders by winning this game. George Street have been practising hard all week to catch up on their form and they should ice a strong, well-knit team to-night. The Tool Room can always be depended on to give a great exhibition.

In the final game the C.G.E. and Harrison's do battle. Both are strong teams, with a galaxy of stars on their rosters, and this game should prove the tidbit of the big evening of hockey.

Uncle Wiggily

A Bed-Time Story by Howard R. Garis

UNCLE WIGGILY'S ICE BUBBLES.

(Copyright, 1929, by McClure Newspaper Syndicate.)

Once upon a time Lulu Wibblewobble, the girl duck, caught the measles. And she caught them without running after them on her webbed feet. It was like this:

One morning as Lulu was in the kitchen, watching her mother look at her sister's ears, to be sure they were clean before going to school, all of a sudden Mrs. Wibblewobble looked from Alice (whose ears she was turning inside out) over toward Lulu.

"What are all those red spots on your bill, Lulu?" asked the duck lady mother.

"Are there red spots on my bill?" quacked Lulu.

"Just look in the glass!" laughed Alice. And when Lulu looked she saw the spots and said:

"Oh, I guess somebody must have splashed red paint on me."

"Red paint!" quacked her mother. "Nonsense! Those are measles!"

"Oh, if I have the measles I don't have to go to school, just like the boy

"Oh, dear!" quacked Lulu.

in the story!" quacked Lulu, flapping her wings for joy. "Hurray! No school for me!"

"Maybe I've got the measles, too!" quacked Alice, but when she looked in the glass her bill had no red spots on so she didn't have the measles and so she had to go to school, but Lulu didn't. Lulu went to bed in her room which was on the first floor of the duck house toward the back and when Dr. Possum came he said:

"Ho! Hum!"

"Oh, dear!" quacked Lulu. "Have I got the Ho Hums as well as the measles?"

"Oh, no!" laughed Dr. Possum. "I just said that because I was up late last night. No, you have only the measles. But you must stay in the house and keep warm."

So Lulu stayed in bed and after a while she began to get lonesome, for her mother couldn't be with her all the time and Alice and Jimmie were in school and Lulu felt quite "mizzable," as she called it.

"Couldn't Uncle Wiggily come to see me and cheer me up?" quacked poor Lulu to her mother, who was making corn meal cakes for tea.

"I'll telephone and ask him," said the duck lady. And when Uncle Wiggily, in his hollow stump bungalow, got that message he said:

"Why, of course, I'll hop over right away and cheer up Lulu."

But his wife said: "Oh, you mustn't go in the room where Lulu is. She has the measles."

"Pooh! I'm not afraid! I've had measles!" said the bunny uncle.

"Yes, I know," spoke Mrs. Longears. "But you might bring them back here to your sixteen twenty little rabbits. No, it will be all right for you to stand outside Lulu's window and cheer her up by twinkling your pink nose at her through the glass, but don't go inside."

"All right, I'll do that," said Mr. Longears. So he hopped to the duck house and oh! how glad Lulu was to see Uncle Wiggily even if it was outside the window. Uncle Wiggily could look in and see Lulu's red spots and she could look out and see the rabbit's nose twinkling.

But after a while Lulu wanted to be amused more than that, so she sadly quacked:

"Couldn't you blow me some soap bubbles? I could watch you through the glass and make believe I was doing it. Please blow bubbles!"

"I will!" offered Uncle Wiggily.

Mrs. Wibblewobble brought him out a bowl of soapy water and an old pipe the children had used for making bubbles the last time they had a surprise party. Uncle Wiggily dipped the pipe in the suds and gently blew a large bubble. But, when it floated off the end of the pipe bowl, when it was about as large as a grape fruit, why that bubble didn't burst! Instead, it floated through the air and even when it struck gently against the window, behind which sat Lulu, the bubble did not burst. Instead it made a funny tinkling sound.

"Oh, how funny!" quacked Lulu. By this time Uncle Wiggily had blown more bubbles, which he tossed off the pipe. But each bubble, instead of bursting, sailed over to Lulu's window, tapped a tinkling sound against the glass and then floated gently down to the snow. And soon there was a large pile of bubbles beneath Lulu's window. Each bubble was colored red, blue, green, purple and golden.

"Why don't the bubbles break?" quacked Lulu, who was forgetting all about her measles. "What makes them make the tinkling sound?"

"Because," said Uncle Wiggily, "they are ice bubbles. As fast as I blow them the soap bubbles, which have water in them, freeze and become ice bubbles. And, being of ice, they tinkle when they hit your window."

"Oh, I think ice bubbles are lovely!" quacked Lulu. "They last so long." Then Mr. Longears blew more and soon Lulu fell asleep.

FUR ANIMALS ARE SCARCE IN DISTRICT

Fabulous Prices Are Being Paid for Mink and Other Furs.

FOXES $60 EACH

Fur Farm is Only Remedy, Declares T. B. Brightman, Local Pelt Buyer.

"The supply of fur-bearing animals in this immediate section is certainly greatly reduced from what it was ten or fifteen years ago, and there have never been so few foxes killed as in this season," said T. B. Brightman, a fur buyer of over fifty years' experience, in an interview with The Examiner on the question of furs and fur prices. "The skunks are still rather plentiful because they are such prolific breeders, but the other animals are sadly reduced in numbers. The buyers are increasing every year, and they must seek wider and ever wider fields in which to secure their furs. Fabulous prices are being paid for mink, a little mink of not over eighteen inches in length commanding the price of $30 now, which is the same as the war prices. Every farmer boy, Indian, and squaw are out looking for mink, and someone is on the trail of every little mink in the district. Fox skins are worth $60 apiece, and I remember, not so long ago either, when at $4 each we could buy them in great quantities; in fact, in the old days at $4 apiece we got twenty fox skins where we get only one now at the big price of $60.

Fur Farms the Answer.

"It seems that fur farms are the only answer to the rapidly dwindling supply of furs, because very soon all the animals will be caught. The fur farms are increasing, and the quality of the fur raised on these farms is every bit on a par with that obtained from the animals in their wild habitat.

"The quality and quantity of fur on each animal is normal this season. The mildness or cold weather does not affect the depth or thickness of the fur. When the season arrives, the animal's coat becomes prime and the quality of the fur never varies. The coat of the weasel might be affected to this extent, that it might be a week or so later in turning white because of the absence of snow early in the winter.

"The prices of furs have been a good deal higher than they were last year, and we, nor the other fur buyers, are not going to pay high prices if the furs are inferior in quality.

Prices Falling.

"The prices of furs are beginning to fall now because most of them are past their prime. Nearly all of the fur-bearing animals become prime in November and December, and after that they begin to deteriorate. There is something else, too, however, that is having a big influence on fur prices and causing a slump. The American Government is considering increasing the tariff on Canadian furs going into that country, and all the buyers are hesitating to buy. If this threatened raise occurs it will mean a great change in the fur market, because Canada produces more furs than we use in this country, and annually great numbers are sent to the States, where they command top prices.

"We in Canada know nothing about the manufacture of furs as it is carried on in the big establishments in the United States, as, for example, the Hollander's Establishment in New York City. I made a tour of their plant, and saw them make fine white fox out of some foreign sheep skins. Take the goats of Robinson Crusoe, they can manufacture almost anything out of them. However, this year every debutante in the United States is demanding a mink coat, and this has shot the price away up. Mink coats of good quality were selling at prices from $5,000 to $8,00 in New York last fall.

Leather Market Dud.

"The leather situation is the worst it has been for years. The report was circulated about two years ago that leather was scarce, and forthwith the price jumped away up until it reached $20 a hundred pounds. Then it was found that the supply of leather was normal, and the price has dropped now until it is $12 to $10 a hundred pounds; but the tanneries are so full of the high-priced leather that they will not buy any now. Many of the tanneries are closed down altogether waiting for a change. Another thing that caused the absolute deadness to the market is that during the scarcity many manufacturers started to use substitutes, which have proved so successful that they are continuing their use and this has decreased somewhat the demand for leather. The price started to tumble in 1927, and it has been tumbling ever since."

The reporter was shown 30,000 hides piled in the Brightman warehouse, bought at high prices, and which the owners don't seem to be able to find a market for even at the low prices now existing. It was stated that none of the tanneries are on the market for hides.

At the opening of the conference at Ottawa on January 8, at which Canadian and United States representatives considered revision of the anti-smuggling treaty of 1924 between the two countries, Dr. O. LIEUT. DRUMMOND'S DEATH REPORTED

Mrs. T. A. S. Hay, of This City, Is a Cousin of Officer of Coldstream Guards.

Mrs. T. A. S. Hay, whose husband, before his death, was for seventeen years city engineer, has received word of the death, at Perthshire, Scotland, last month, of her cousin, Lieut.-Colonel James Adam Gordon Richardson Drummond Hay, aged 66 years, of the Coldstream Guards. The funeral took place with full military honors, officers of the Black Watch being the pall-bearers.

Lieut.-Col. Drummond Hay, a typical Scottish laird, had been a noted military figure, having been identified with the Coldstream Guards since 1884, and serving in the Great War.

Since returning from the war, he has devoted most of his time to his place, Seggieden and Aberargie, held since the time of Robert Bruce, and on occasions, the daughters of Mrs. Hay have been his guests.

The late Mrs. J. D. Collins was also a cousin of Lieut.-Colonel Drummond Hay.

URGES SUBSIDITY ON SERVICE BASIS

Victoria Order of Nurses Holds Regional Conference in Hamilton.

HAMILTON, Ont., Jan. 16.—(Canadian Press.)—Dr. G. Fleming, Montreal, a member of the National Education committee, in an address yesterday at the Regional Conference of the Victorian Order of Nurses, urged that the Order be subsidized by the Dominion and Provincial governments on a service basis.

Voluntary organizations, he said, can play a vital part in enabling the State to relieve its responsibilites. Research organiaztion: were necessary to establish better methods of carrying out health work.

Dr. Helen Reid, Montreal, urged the necessity of a Publicity committee for each branch.

Delegates were present from Ottawa and many sections of Ontario and Quebec.

Scout News and Notices

ST. LUKE'S TROOP.

St. Luke's 2nd Armour Troop Boy Scouts met at the Parish House on Friday evening and in spite of the weather 12 boys responded.

The flag break started the evening and the Scoutmaster was presented with a Scouts' Bible by Henry Nokes on behalf of the troop. This was a surprise for which the Scoutmaster thanked the boys for their mark of appreciation.

After a brief talk a live game followed, the points being about the same all round.

A pleasant evening came to a close with a long sing-song round the piano in the school room.

The boys wish to thank all those who had been kind enough to supply papers during the recent appeals and would further request that any one having paper they wish to subscribe kindly phone 567W and arrangements will be made to collect same.

5th PETERBOROUGH TROOP

The 5th Troop held their usual weekly meeting on Tuesday last.

Sharp at 7:30 the troop fell in and after remarks the scoutmaster took the troop in second class work, and a number of tests were passed. Scouts L. Galley and J. Burnham passed the second class first aid and Kims game, Scout D. McKay also passed Kim's game and the theory of the second class ambulance, proficiency badges were then taken up, instruction in the five man and missioners was then given by the S. M., and we hope to pass these badges next week.

The troop then fell in for some games, the fire game doge ball, was very exciting, and No. 2 patrol run off winners. The next game was "run and catch", and No. 3 patrol were the winners.

The camp fire was called and the following proficiency badges were presented; Scout V. Howard, musician and athlete badges; P.L. Bill Barry, King Scout Ambulance Badges, Clerks Badge and Athlete Badge; P.L. Roy Hofe, King Scout Ambulance Badge and Athlete Badge; P.L. Garry Johnson, King Scout Ambulance Badge; Scout V. Millard, King Scout Ambulance Badge and Cyclist Badge; Scout L. Wells, Cyclist Badge; Scout F. Williams, Cyclist Badge.

Now then, what about 12 more Proficiency Badges next Tuesday? Don't forget Scouts, Monday night for Fire Mans and Missioner's Badges. This will be the last instructions in these Badges, so do your best scouts.

The 5th Troop played their first hockey game on Thursday night and were beaten 4-3 by the 6th Troop. Bill Barry played a fine game in goal; Garry Johnson played a fine game and scored two goals. R. Walsh was the star player on the ice, getting the puck behind his own goal, went clean through and scored two great goals. L. Pratt played a fine game and was very unlucky not to score. Bill McPherson, D. MacKay and F. Dyer played hard. Captain Garry Johnson hopes to have a stronger team next Wednesday night, so come on 5th. we have got to play hard from this on.

"Our Own" Motto

Here is a good motto scouts; the troop artist can copy it on to a piece of white board and hang it in the clubroom.

The 5th Motto

Boy Scouts this motto should Ever be with those who would,
Pluck and coolness both possess,
Remember it in time of stress,
Early wisdom sows its seeds,
Place your footsteps where it leads,
Always bearing it in mind,
Ready, always be kind,
Ever cautious, show no fear,
Do not forget this motto here.

"Be Prepared" is contained in the initial letters of each line.

FINANCIAL REPORTS SHOW INCREASE

Y.W.C.A. English Literature Class is Postponed Until Next Fall.

The regular meeting of the Young Women's Christian Association Board of Directors was held on Monday afternoon with Mrs. R. Harstone, third vice-president, in the chair. The devotional period, taken by the chairman, was adapted from a special Y.W.C.A. New Year service.

The financial reports read by Mrs. W. D. Scott showed an Association increase in each department.

Because of unforseen delay in connection with the English Literature course it was decided that this course be left over until next fall. Other classes scheduled to commence this month are the Home Nursing class with Miss J. Deyell as instructor, a basketry class, wood-carving, ukulele, Junior Cooking class, and an Elocution class.

The Religious Work Committee are also arranging for the World Study Course on the Life of Christ. This 3-year course is planned for youth around the world and is proving very helpful in church organizations, the Y. W. C. A. and Y. M. C. A and student organizations. The Sunday evening sing-songs which have been appreciated by the young people of the city will start this Sunday evening after church, and the regular Friendly Hour and Tea, the first Sunday of February

The Physical Director reported for the Gymnasium Christmas parties enjoyed by each class the week before Christmas. The Junior Party attended by 250 children, including as guests children of the shelter and orphanage, was a great treat and the usual big success. Members of the Physical Committee assisted with the parties.

The basketball league was organized and practice games arranged. The Physical Director announced that the first games of the league would be played this Friday evening. The Annual Big Gymnasium Campaign for new members had been launched and eleven new members already enrolled with the LaSalle car leading, having brought five members for the Elementary Class.

The General Secretary gave an encouraging report of the Club Christmas activities, showing each club interested in serving others, and by their programs striving to grow physically, intellectually and spiritually. Thirty five applications were received through the Employment Bureau. The Christmas Gift Bazaar showed over thirty dollars raised for clubs, members, and the Association Foreign Work. Members of Trinity Choir presented a program of Christmas Carols around the Association Christmas tree on the lawn which was much appreciated and spread a Christmas message to all who passed.

The meeting closed with prayer and tea served around the fire.

KING WILL PAY VISIT TO POPE

be returned by Cardinal Gasparri acting for the Pontiff, there will be no impediment to the Pope's making the call himself if he so wishes. Upon issing from the Vatican the Pope would be entitled to royal honors from all the armed forces of the kingdom of Italy.

No Changing of Residence.

The new dispensation will render much simpler and easier visits of foreign sovereigns and chiefs of state to the Vatican. Settlement of the Roman question will obviate the necessity of their changing residence from embassies or legations accredited to Italy to those accredited to the Holy See before going to call on the Pope.

Settlement of the fifty year old problem also makes possible envisaging the return in person by the Pope of the visits of rulers including King George of England, who called on him a few years ago. The Pope has found confinement to the Vatican particularly trying on a person of his active temperament and mountain climbing zeal. He is understood to have remarked to friends on what a fortunate man Herbert Hoover was to be able to make first hand contacts with Latin American chiefs of state. Naturally for the present this is largely conjecture.

Monsignor Borgongini Duca, Secretary of Extraordinary Affairs at the Vatican, continues to refuse to comment to anybody on the terms of the settlement and also refuses to receive callers.

OBITUARY

KENNETH CLAYTON HOGG

The death occurred this morning of Kenneth Clayton Hogg, infant son of Mr. and Mrs. Kenneth Hogg, 209 Louis Street. The funeral will be held on Thursday afternoon at to o'clock to the Little Lake cemetery from the familyl residence.

MRS. HENRY CHAMBERS

With the strains of her favorite hymn, "Sweet Peace, the Gift of God's Love," echoing in their ears, friends of the late Verna Fell (Mrs. Henry Chambers) followed her mortal remains this afternoon to her last resting place in the Little Lake Cemetery.

In was a long funeral cortege that wound its way over the white snow to the pretty cemetery by the water, and it was a large gathering of relatives and friends that crowded the rooms of her late home on Princess street, as they listened to the eloquent words of her pastor, the Rev. J. H. Dudgeon of St. James' United Church, speaking of the deceased and the life she had lived. Excerpts from the Scriptures were read by the Rev. William McDonald, pastor of Knox United Church, and members of the choir of St. James' Church sang for their fellow singer one of her favorite hymns as she rested for the last time in her home, surrounded by masses of beautiful flowers. Three months ago yesterday, flowers filled the same rooms for her wedding.

Pall-bearers were four cousins: Donald Deyell, Will Chambers, Frank Dawson of Lakefield, and Eldridge White of Bailboro, also two members of the choir of St. James' Church: B. Pitchford and G. Cuffe.

The Rev. Mr. Dudgeon, in eloquent words of sympathy, referred to the blessed hope for an immortal existence which is heard in the words of the Redeemer, promising to His people a future abode in the many mansions prepared for them after this life of tribulation and suffering.

Speaking of the watchword of Christ as "service," and summing up His earthly existence in the words: "He went about doing good," the reverend speaker said at length of life, as promised by the Psalmist, was not lot of all. Many attain to the allotted three score years and ten but others are cut down when their lives seem fully of promise and hope. To these Christ had set an example in the short life He himself lived upon this earth. His hidden life of thirty years was followed by a brief period of only three years when He returned to His Father's home.

"We may well believe, then," concluded the pastor, "that Verna had fulfilled her span of life upon this earth, young as she was, and that she waits in some other blessed sphere for those who loved her and who may expect in some future years a blessed and happy re-union.

"For, "in those future years, again we'll stand together hand in hand, and then we'll understand the measure of His love."

CONGREGATIONAL MEETING.

The old "Tiger" eleven years the Marshal's senior, was suffering from a bad case of grippe, but was expected to resume his work before the end of the week, unless his 87 years should tell too heavily upon him.

Uremia, developing from a kidney infection, which set in after the Marshal's original heart attack, is what the doctors attending him now fear most. In order to watch the kidney complication more closely, Prof. Andre, Nancy University specialist in kidney disease, who attended Foch throughout the war and accompanied him on his visit to Canada, was called into consultation yesterday.

NEXT MOVE IS UP TO GOVERNMENT

Company entered into a provisional agreement with the Hydro-Electric Commission of Ontario to provide that body with power.

Cost is $65,000,000

The cost of the works was estimated at $65,000,000.

The flowage diverted through the canal would amount to 40,000 cubic feet per second, providing for a current of between two and three miles an hour.

Two power companies already operating in that section of the St. Lawrence—the Soulanges Power Company and the Cedar Rapids Power Company—are among the opponents, while the Dominion Marine Association, a federation of the Great Lakes shipping interests, and the Great Lakes and Atlantic Power and Navigation Company, an organization which is applying for incorporation at the next session of parliament, for authority to embark on alternative schemes, not greatly dissimilar from that of the Beauharnois Company—are also active objectors.

The power companies contend that the water diversion would decrease the capacity of their own works in which considerable money is invested, while the Dominion Marine Association asserts that the granting of those rights to the Beauhornois company would make navigation on the St. Lawrence subservient to power development interests.

Evangeline Suggested as New Commander

Scenes are Emotional As One by One Votes Are Recorded on Issue

General Bramwell Booth, Commander-in-Chief of the Salvation Army, Is Adjudged Unfit To Continue in Office By High Council of Army.

EIGHT BALLOTS ARE CAST FOR AGED COMMANDER RESULT IS VINDICATION OF SEVEN COMMISSIONERS

All the Women Members and Many of the Men Were Weeping As the Result Was Announced—All Join in Singing the Army Hymn.

SUNBURY-ON-THAMES, England, January 17 (Canadian Press). — General Bramwell Booth, Commander-in-Chief of the Salvation Army, was adjudicated unfit to continue in that office by the High Council of the Army here last night. The vote was 55 to 8.

One commissioner was absent and not voting because of illness. General Booth needed only 16 votes, twice the number he received, to defeat the motion.

A General can only be removed because of unfitness by a three-quarters majority of the Council.

The Council had sat 14 hours yesterday, debating the momentous question, with adjournments only for meals. No official reports came from the strictly-guarded premises of Sunbury Court, but it was rumored that the argument was at times very heated.

Shortly after 11 p.m. it was understood that a vote had finally been taken. It was midnight, however, before the result was announced.

Immediately after the ballot was taken, members of the Council joined fervently in singing:

"When we cannot see our way,
Let us trust and still obey;
He Who bids us forward go
Cannot fail the way to show."

The scene was an emotional one, all of the women commissioners and many of the men weeping.

Complete Vindication.

An ogicial statement was issued saying, "The result is a complete vindication of the seven commissioners who requested the calling of the High Council. Their action was absolutely unprecedented, but under the circumstances with which they were confronted, they felt that there was no alternative.

"Nevertheless, they have been subjected to considerable abuse from uninformed quarters, where their action has been very unfairly criticized and misrepresented, although they are old and tried officers, with an average length of 44 years' service in the Army."

After saying that the seven commissioners had taken a leading part in the work of the Council at Sunbury, the statement went on:

"Numerous legal and technical questions had to be dealt with, both before and after calling the Council and in these matters the seven commissioners have been guided by independent legal advice so as to insure that their actions were entirely in accord with the deeds of constitution signed by the founder and upon the terms of which the present General accepted office.

Seven Men Foremost in Army.

"These seven men were also foremost in the efforts to persuade the General to retire from office, as nothing was further from their thoughts than anything in the nature of an act of personal hostility towards the General with whom they had been associated for so many years and for whom they had constantly shown the most sympathetic concern.

"It is thought that examination of the names of those voting for the adjudication will reveal the fact that the requisitioning commissioners have been justified in their action by the support of every territorial commander, except the General's daughter, Colonel Mary Booth."

The eight opponents of the resolution were: Mrs. Bramwell Booth, Mary Booth, Catherine Booth, Mrs. Booth-Helberg and Commissioners Laurie, Kitchin, Cunningham and Smith.

Every Member Weeping.

DEPOSED KING REPORTED SAFE

High Official Declares Britain Had Nothing To Do With Uprising in Afghanistan.

DIFFICULTIES AHEAD.

LONDON, Jan. 17. —(By George Hambleton, Staff Correspondent of the Canadian Press). — Authoritative advices received in London to-day state that Amanullah, deposed King of Afghanistan, reached Kandahar in safety after being forced from Kabul, the capital, by rebel forces who are still attacking. The British legation in Kabul, it is added, is in no immediate danger. The legation lies about two miles outside Kabul and in the early days of rebel attacks on Amanullah fighting was around the legation, both sides using it more or less as a protection from the fire of the other side. But active operations have moved into the area around the Government offices in Kabul itself.

Inquiries in official circles here show absolutely that the British authorities are not in any way concerned with the effort to depose Amanullah. "The whole charge is so grotesque that it scarcely merits denial," a high official told the Canadian Press to-day. "Is it reasonable to think that the British authorities would have entertained Amanullah and his queen so lavishly last year if there had been any desire to overthrow him?"

Difficulties in Britain.

"As a matter of fact," he continued, "the situation in Afghanistan means great difficulties for us. The troubles have not spread to our side of the northwest frontier of India but it will obviously be a considerable time before Afghanistan has again settled down. Amanullah tried to reform too fast. He saw what Mustapha Kemel had done in Turkey and thought he could do likewise.

The pretender to the Afghan throne Sirdar Kahomad Sarwar Khan, is held in jail at Allahabad by order of the Indian Government, and four other sons of Ayub Khan, who made several attempts to gain the throne towards the end of the last century, are being taken to Calcutta and will probably be deported to Burma. Prince Abdul Quadier, Afghan refugee, has beeen deported to Burma from Lahore, India.

May Have New King.

Authoritative reports received in London to-day indicate that Bacha Sakao, rebel water boy of the Afghan wilds, may soon be seated upon the throne which King Amanullah has vacated.

Bacha Sakao is merely a nickname meaning water carrier. His real name is Habibullah Khan, which is the same name as Amanullah's father who was assassinated in 1919, although there is no relationship between the two families.

British official advices now state that all Kabul except the Arc or Citadel in the centre of the city, is in the hands of Bacha Sakao. King Inayatullah, who succeeded his brother, Amanullah, is reported cornered in the Citadel, which is the only part of the capital now left in his control.

Five Young Men in Daring Robbery Escape With Gems Valued At $200,000

NEW YORK, Jan. 17.—(Canadian Press).—Five young men, men, working with the precision of apparent long experience, held the Park Avenue jewelry shop of G. Mauboussin shortly before noon to-day and escaped with gems which the proprietor valued at $200,000. They had taken the stones from the safe and showcases.

The robbers left bound and gagged behind them in a rear room of the shop the manager, his girl secretary, a clerk, a special patrolman, and a visiting jeweler. The getaway was made in an automobile which was waiting at the curb.

The robbery was one of the most spectacular to occur here in several years.

FIRE DESTROYS PART OF STOCK IN SHOE STORE

Several Thousand Dollars Damage Is Caused To Stock of C. E. Smith.

NOTICED AT 1.40 A.M.

Police Officers Naples and Piercy Notice Smoke Coming Out of Windows.

A large reserve stock of boots and shoes stored on the second floor, in addition to the even larger stock on the main floor of C. E. Smith's shoe store at 384 George Street, was damaged to the extent of several thousand dollars at an early hour this morning by a blaze which broke out in the centre of the second story, and by water from four lines of hose, trained of necessity, on it, Chief Gimblett believed that electric wires caused the blaze. Though the hose were used as sparingly as was consistent with the fighting of the fire, and despite the use of tarpaulins provided by the fire department, to cover the downstairs goods, the loss suffered by Mr. Smith will reach a formidable figure. He could not give an estimate of the damage. It is understood to be covered by insurance.

Police Gave Alarm.

Smoke sweeping out around the second story windows gave Police Officers Naples and Piercy first warning of the danger at 1.40 a.m., and they immediately sent in the alarm, which, coming from the main business section, called out every unit of the fire department. The big combination pumper immediately went into action, as did the Number 1 chemical, while three lines of hose were run out from the hydrants at the corner of Hunter and George Streets. Two of these were taken up the flight of stairs to the immediate north of the stock-room above the threatened store, a third played through a window, while a fourth was trained from the rear of the building, the blaze being located in the centre of the second story floor. Heavy smoke handicapped the firemen.

A key to the store door being unobtainable, the front door was forced, but by this time the water had come through and much of the stock, especially that on display, was already damaged.

Chief Gimblett, in discussing the fire soon after it took place, could not ascribe with certainty a cause for it. His men had attended promptly, some of them from the day shift as well as those on duty.

TORONTO, Ont., Jan. 17.—(Canadian Press.)— William A. Summerville having disclaimed his right to a seat on the Board of Control, A. C. Rhind's motion to declare Mr. Summerville ineligible on the grounds that his 1928 taxes were not paid when they should have been. His opponents do not agree that Mr. Summerville's disclaimer stops their pending motion. They do not agree, either, that he has even the right to disclaim a seat which they claim he never possessed.

President Coolidge Affixes His Signature To the Kellogg-Briand Anti-War Treaty

WASHINGTON, D.C., January 17 (Canadian Press). — With ceremony appropriate to what he considers one of the principal achievements of his administration, President Coolidge to-day affixed his signature to the instrument of ratification of the Kellogg-Briand anti-war treaty.

The entire Cabinet and a large representation from the Senate were present as Mr. Coolidge signed the document. He used the gold pen which was presented to Secretary of State Frank B. Kellogg by the City of Havre, France, when the Secretary went abroad last summer to sign the Treaty at Paris.

Two copies of the instrument received the President's signature and then each was signed by Secretary Kellogg, who sat beside the President.

Vice-President Dawes sat at the President's right, and Secretary Kellogg at his left, while grouped behind them were the members of the Senate.

Discharges His Attorney After the Proceedings Opened.

GAINED CONFIDENCE.

Insisted On Questioning His Nephew, Sanford Clark, the Principal Accuser.

RIVERSIDE, Calif., Jan. 17. — (Canadian Press). — Gordon Stewart Northcott, 22, was cast in the double role of defendant and defense attorney to-day in his trial here on charges of murdering three small boys. He took over the reigns of his own defense yesterday after a long argument with his counsel and against the advice of Judge George R. Freeman.

The show down with his attorneys came when Northcott, who claims to have a correspondence course knowledge of law, insisted on questioning Sanford Clark, 15, his nephew and principal accuser.

Gained Confidences.

At first terrorized by the necessity of submitting to the question of his uncle, Clark gained confidence and stuck to his story in the cross examination, which frequently was rambling. Although Northcott's questions failed to shake his nephew, the defendant expressed himself as well pleased with the day's events.

Norbert Savay, deposed attorney, later announced he would appear before Superior Judge O. K. Morton and ask that the life sentence imposed of Mrs. Sarah Louisa Northcott, mother of the defendant, be set aside, on the allegation of miscarriage of justice. She pleaded guilty before Judge Morton to the murder of Walter Collins, for which she was indicted jointly with her son, and now is in San Quentin Prison.

PROGRESS IS SATISFACTORY

Most Favorable Bulletin Is Issued By Physicians at Buckingham Palace.

REPORT GRATIFYING.

LONDON, Jan. 17. —(Canadian Press). — One of the most favorable bulletins drafted by the King's doctors since the beginning of his illness was posted at Buckingham Palace at noon to-day.

It described His Majesty's progress as "satisfactory" even if it continued to be slow and palace circles were plainly gratified with the report.

It was pointed out that this was the first time the physicians have thus characterized the King's condition during his long illness and it is taken as an indication that the improvement continues to be of a definite character.

Minister Issues Suit Against Betty Randolph

NEW YORK, N. Y., Jan. 17.—(Canadian Press). — Miss Betty Randolph, former actress and thrice divorced, has been served with a summons in a breach of promise suit fyled by the Rev. Bartholomew J. Chudacek of Philadelphia.

The engagement of Miss Randolph, reputedly wealthy, and that of the minister was announced last June. Three dates were set for the marriage but it failed to materialize. Mr. Chudacek resigned last June as pastor of a church at Johnstown, N. Y.

TENNIS STAR IS GOING HOME

Suzanne Lenglen and Mother Have Booked Their Passages To France.

YOUNG BALDWIN MISSING.

LOS ANGELES, Calif., Jan. 17. — (Canadian Press). — The management of the Biltmore Hotel here to-day confirmed reports that Suzanne Lenglen, French tennis star, and her mother, who abruptly left the Los Angeles home of their hostess, Mrs. Anit Baldwin, last week, had made arrangements to return to France.

It was said at the Hotel that the two women had made steamship reservations through the Biltmore Hotel of New York on a vessel sailing shortly, but that details were not available here.

Whether Baldwin M. Baldwin, son of their hostess and former tennis manager of Mlle. Lenglen, was accompanying the two women, was not known here.

Reports came also from the home of Mrs. Baldwin, daughter of the late E. J. (Lucky) Baldwin, millionaire mining man, that she was attempting to locate her son. Young Baldwin left his mother's home at the same time the Lenglen's departed.

Young Baldwin, who has a wife and two young daughters here, brought Mlle. Lenglen to visit his mother before Christmas. Mrs. Baldwin at that time denied rumours that Mlle. Lenglen and her son were engaged to marry.

CLERGY ARE ORDERED NOT TO MARRY DIVORCED PERSONS IN THEIR CHURCHES

ST. ALBANS, Hertfordshire, Jan. 17 (By Thos. T. Champion, London Manager of the Canadian Press).—Rt. Rev. Michael Bolton Furse, Bishop of St. Alban's, who is noted for bringing a startling vigor to bear on the management of his diocese, has made a forceful statement concerning upbaptized and divorced people. "I have given instructions to the clergy of this diocese that as far as I am concerned they are not to marry in the Church people who have not been baptized," he declared, "and I am not going to be a party, if I can help it, to anyone being married by a Church service, who has been divorced. I am not going to make the word of God a blasphemous farce."

The Bishop added: "I have had letters and seen newspaper articles saying 'he is a narrow-minded ecclesiastical and ought to be stopped.' Well, stop me. I am going on until I am stopped."

Bishop Furse, known to his intimates as "Mike" Furse, has been at St. Alban's for eight years. He is 58 years of age, fourth son of the late Charles Wellington Furse, Archdeacon and Canon of Westminster, and was educated at Oxford. He was Bishop of Pretoria, South Africa, before coming to St. Alban's, and has expressed his scorn for what he calls the "caricature of the episcopacy which does duty in the home church."

Referring to his own appointment as Bishop of St. Alban's, made when Rt. Hon. David Lloyd George was Prime Minister, the Bishop once said: "I could not help it. I was simply thrown at you by a Baptist Prime Minister, and as far as I am concerned I have to sit on your chests for the rest of my natural life. A bishop can't be got rid of unless he gets drunk or becomes bankrupt. I hope you will not get rid of me for the first cause, but you may for the second, unless you pay me more."

MURRAY STREET BAPTIST CHURCH HAS FINE YEAR

Nearly $8,000 Was Raised As Current Receipts and $1,365.35 For Missions.

ANNUAL MEETING.

Total Amount Reported Raised From All Organizations of Church Was $13,061.

Most gratifying reports were heard by the members of Murray Street Baptist Church when they attended the annual congregational meeting held last evening. Supper was served by the members of the Women's Association, the tables looking lovely in mauve and yellow, with silver candlesticks containing yellow candles.

Rev. J. H. Sutcliffe presided, and W. G. Shiner was appointed secretary for the evening in the absence of A. J. Raddon. Reports of the various organizations of the church showed a marked increase in the financial giving, while they also testified to the great amount of physical work put into each organization, thus making it a most successful one.

The report of the treasurer, F. M. Somerville, showed $7,960.38 raised as current receipts, and $1,363.35 for missions, etc., making a total of $9,323.73. The Sunday School report also showed an increase in membership in the smaller classes, while $200 had been raised as collections and given to the church treasurer, outside of the usual offerings for Mission. The total amount, as reported from all the organizations of the church, amounted to $13,061.

The officers of the church, as elected for 1929 are as follows: Clerk, A. J. Raddon; treasurer general fund, F. M. Somerville; treasurer, obligation fund, G. S. Matthews; financial secretary, F. W. Johnson; treasurer fellowship fund, Dr. W. D. Scott; ushers, A. W. Wray, J. Lewis, H. Quinn, S. Cottingham, W. Garbutt, W. G. Shiner, S. Drury, J. Ward, A. H. Campbell, S. Gillespie, K. Routley, A. McNaughton, M. Middleton, and J. Ellis, Jr; Board of Religious Education, A. J. Madill, L. J. Pettit, W. G. Shiner, A. S. Zavitz, and J. Wearing. Writer of Association letter, A. J. Raddon; representative to Nicholls Hospital, Vincent Eastwood; representative to Protestant Home, Miss E. J. Aldridge; representative to William Hall P. P. Trust, R. S. Merrell; auditors, L. H. Ingram and A. J. Zavitz.

Appointed Deacons

Dr. D. W. Scott and A. J. Madill were re-elected as deacons for a three-year term; and Walter Garbutt was elected for a one-year term to fill out the balance of R. S. Merrell's term, who has resigned. Deep regret was also felt at the loss of F. M. Somerville's services as deacon, and a vote of appreciation was extended to these two members who had so ably filled this office for a number of years.

A vote of thanks was also extended to the choir for their efforts during the past year, which were greatly appreciated, and to the members of the Women's Association for the wonderful supper which they had provided.

FARM POLICY IS CRITICIZED

National Farmers' Union of England Meets in Annual Convention.

NO CANDIDATES IN FIELD.

LONDON, Jan. 17. —(Canadian Press Cable). — The Government's Agricultural policy was severely criticized by delegates to the Annual Convention of the National Farmers' Union to-day. The Union has 120,000 members and a political fund of $250,000. The debate covered a wide variety of topics but in practically all were allusions to the Government's alleged failure to fulfill the election promises towards agriculture.

One delegate said Lord Irwin, former Minister of Agriculture and now Viceroy of India, had expressed a desire to see another million acres under cultivation "whereupon the Cabinet gave him the cold shoulder and sent him to a warmer climate."

When it was proposed, however, the Union should submit its own candidates, a majority of delegates declared farmer candidates had never done any good in polotics.

DEATH FROM PNEUMONIA.

CARGILL, Jan. 17. — (Canadian Press.)—That her death was caused from pneumonia following influenza, and not through any ill treatment either from herself or from others, was the verdict rendered here last evening by a coroner's jury investigating the death of Hazel Trumbley, which occurred at the County General Hospital on Dec. 31 last.

High Council Will Choose Successor To Bramwell Booth

Foremost Among Those Suggested in Army Circles For the Generalship Are Commander Evangeline Booth and Commissioner Higgins.

GENERAL'S NEXT MOVE EAGERLY AWAITED FUTURE COMMANDER WILL BE CHOSEN FRIDAY.

Notice Is Posted Authorizing the Chief of Staff To Carry On the Command of Salvation Army—Catharine Booth Made Last Moment Appeal For Her Father.

LONDON, January 17 (Canadian Press). — Peace in the prolonged struggle within the Salvation Army over its leadership and administration may be in sight in the view of well-informed circles within the Army.

While nothing authoritative has come from the deposed General, Bramwell Booth, and the impression all along has been that he was likely to resist giving up his post, the impression was gaining ground to-day that he and his family eventually would acquiesce to the Council's desire that he retire expressed by such a large majority last night.

It was assumed to-day that the High Council of the Salvation Army would choose to-morrow a successor to General Bramwell Booth, who has been voted unfit to command.

Foremost among those suggested in army circles for the Generalship were Commander Evangeline Booth, his sister, who heads the Army in the United States and led the victorious reform element, and Commissioner Edward J. Higgins of London, the Army's Chief-of-Staff.

The General's next move was eagerly awaited, there being indications that it would be to carry the fight for command to the courts.

One of the Army officials at the hotel where Evangeline Booth, American Commander and leader of the "reform" movement is making her headquarters, said however, that the council will meet to-morrow to elect a new Commander and to take legal steps, if necessary, to obtain possession of the Army's huge property now vested personally in Bramwell Booth's hands.

Notice Posted

During the morning a notice signed by the Salvation Army solicitors was displayed outside international headquarters. It touched on the question of authority in the Army during the period between the deposition of General Booth and the selection of his successor. The notice read:

"During the interval between the vacation of office by any General of the Salvation Army and the appointment of his successor, the Chief-of-Staff is authorized and empowered under the constitutional deeds of the Salvation Army to exercise with certain specific limitations all powers and discretions pertaining to the generalship.

The statement was signed by Ranger, Burton and Frost, the Army's solicitors.

It was thought improbable that the question of the new leadership will be decided on the first day of the resumed session, the final decision probably being more likely early next week.

Appeals For Her Father

Mrs. Bramwell Booth, accompanied by Colonel Mary Booth, motored back to Southwold this morning. The General's wife, when approached by newspapermen, as she was leaving Sunbury, appeared distressed. "What can I say?" she murmured, with a rather piteous smile.

During the long night session of the Council there was a dramatic incident when Catherine Booth made an eloquent last-minute appeal for the retention of her father. She was the last to address the Council and, in moving tones, pleaded for the General; but it was an appeal that came too late, as the result was inevitable.

General Is Notified.

Shortly before three o'clock a high army offical acting as special messenger, was dispatched to Southwold bearing a letter from the High Council to General Booth containing formal announcement of the Council's decision.

The official account of what happened at last night's meeting at the High Council was given out this afternoon. The document said:

"The Council sitting which commenced Wednesday evening, continued until shortly after midnight when a vote was taken. Speeches on the main resolution were weighty and the words were listened to with rapt at-

MARSHAL FOCH IS SOME BETTER

Slight Improvement Noticed During Last Few Days Continues.

SLEEPS WELL.

PARIS, Jan. 17. —(Canadian Press) —Word that Marshall Ferdinand Foch was somewhat better to-day was given out by his doctors after a long consultation at his bedside this morning. Their bulletin said that a slight improvement noted during the last three days was continuing.

As they left the Marshal's home, the doctors added that he had slept rather well during the night and that his spirits were still high. His strength, they continued, was apparently ample to carry him through to victory in the counter offensive he is carrying on against a heart attack which compelled him to retreat to his bed last week.

Physician Returns.

Dr. Davenieres returned to his patient for a few minutes at noon just as the Marshall was having his rather thin lunch of hot milk and thin soup. The doctor later said that the patient was "a little better" that his spirits were good and that he was resting comfortably.

Major L'Hopital, the Marshal's faithful aide, and one of the few visitors privileged to enter the house, made his usual morning call but did not see his chief. In the meantime, the callers' register is being filled with more prominent names. The Papal Nuncio, Archbishop Maglione, attended by two Monsignors, called in person to-day to sign the register.

Making Good Progress.

Georges Clemenceau, France's war time Premier who has been ill with the Grippe, is making good progress and no longer considers himself as "under the weather."

After a good night's rest he said to-day that he had repulsed his annual adversary, the grippe, and that there were not going to be any health bulletins issued from his house. The former Premier still coughs, but his head is clear and he is able to get sleep.

He has since been recuperating in England.

Afghanistan Crowns Her Third King; Rebel Forces Conquer Capital City

KABUL, Afghanistan, January 17 (Canadian Press). — King Inayatullah, in whose favor Amanullah abdicated a few days ago, surrendered at ten o'clock this morning the Kabul citadel to a superior force of th rebel "Bacha Sakao," who was proclaimed Habibullah Khan, and thus became Afghanistan's third monarch this week.

Bacha Sakao, leader of the rebels and one-time waterboy, was stated to have entered the royal palace to-day. The rebel leaders announced that he would assume supreme power under the title of Habibuah Khan.

The abdication was conditioned upon a guarantee of safety for Inayatulah and all the members of his household.

BIG CONTEST IS EXPECTED FOR WARDEN

Representative From Durham This Year Will Be Head of United Counties.

FIVE IN RACE.

Politics Play a Big Part in Electing Presiding Officer at Cobourg.

When the Council of the united counties of Northumberland and Durham meets at Cobourg next Tuesday night its first business will be the election of a new warden, and thereby hangs an interesting speculation. For the office this year reverts to the representatives from Durham, and four or five of last year's reeves, all of whom have been returned, are more than willing to accept the honor. Those who names have been generally mentioned are William T. Wood, reeve of Millbrook; George H Hooton, reeve of Cavan township; Fred Gray, reeve of Manvers township; M. J. Holman, reeve of Clarke township; and Monty Wilson, reeve of Hope township.

The question that will engage the interest of all those who understand the affairs of the twin counties is "what chance has Billy Wood for the wardenship?" It is not a new question. Two years ago the Council answered it by electing Milton Elliott, the present mayor of Bowmanville. The field quickly narrowed down to Mr. Elliott and Mr. Wood, and the decision was plainly motivated by politics. However, that is a custom in the little parliament at Cobourg, and not even the parting exhortation of ex-Warden C. H. Davidson of Campbellford, who has since succeeded to the mayoralty of the Trent town, is likely to affect the established practice.

Could Speak Frankly

When Mayor Davidson said there was too much politics in the election of the counties' Warden his implication was obvious. In other words, he advised the Council to consider a member's personal qualifications rather than his political allegiance. As an ultra-loyal Conservative, addressing a Conservative majority, Mayor Davidson could exercise a party privilege in such frank utterance, and it was highly becoming in a municipal officer of his long experience and keen observation to pitch his final message on the lofty plane of idealism.

Mayor Davidson appreciates the outstanding abilities of Reeve W. T. Wood of Millbrook, but if he were back in the counties council this January how would he vote. For "Billy" Wood or for one of his opponents? Two years ago, Mayor Davidson had not fledged the altruism he now recommends to the Council of 1929. He was then actuated by the demands of compulsive realism, and had he kicked over the party traces and voted for Reeve Wood, what support could he have expected from the Conservatives in the Council when he himself won the Wardenship a year ago And if the Conservatives come back with another majority, which apparently they have done, they are likely again to play the game according to the old and accepted rules. There may be exceptions, but every member who nurses a latent aspiration for the chair, and who doesn't will in all probability vote according to custom and thereby for himself, at least for the support he himself may hope to receive some day.

If conspicuous ability were the sole determining factor, Reeve Wood would now be numbered among the ex-Wardens. Millbrook village has again elected him by acclamation, and so he enters the lists, perhaps for the last time, with an excellent service record in the counties council to his credit, but presumably facing again the handicap which ex-Warden Davidson so bluntly decried.

Hooton May Contest It

Peterborough's interest in the other candidates would probably centre in George Hooton of Cavan. He is a near neighbour along the North Monaghan boundary, is well seasoned in civic affairs, has had a broad experience, and altogether has strong personal claims on the wardenship.

Fred Gray of Manvers has just come through another hard-fought campaign with Bert Richardson, former deputy-reeve of the township. His majority was just twelve votes, with 444 against Richardson's 432. The northern part of the township accounted for his victory, Bethany, Janetville and Ballyduff giving him a lead that more than counterbalanced Richardson's big figures at Pontypool and Manvers Station.

Reeve Gray is definitely in the Deputation Urges Minister To Have the Nancy Reclaimed; Boat Was Sunk During War Of 1812-14 Near Collingwood

OTTAWA, Ont., Jan. 17.—(Canadian Press).—Reclamation by the federal authorities of the British schooner "Nancy" which was sunk during the war of 1812-1814 in Nottawasaga River, near Collingwood, Ont., was urged by a delegation which waited on Hon. Charles Stewart, Minister of the Interior yesterday.

W. A. Boys, member of parliament for North Simcoe, who headed the delegation suggested that an appropriation be made to preserve the vessel as an historical relic. He claimed that the schooner had played such an important part during the war, to warrant her reclamation.

The Minister promised to give sympathetic consideration to the request.

CANADIAN NEWSPRINT MAKERS THREATEN TO USE WATER ROUTE

Must Have More Equitable Freight Rates States Representative of Manufacturers.

2,000,000 TONS EXPORTED.

Discrimination Against Canadian Firms is Alleged By Guy Comb, Traffic Representative.

NEW YORK, N. Y., Jan. 17. — (Canadian Press) — Guy Combs, traffic representative for 13 Canadian newsprint manufacturers, warned yesterday at the hearing before the Inter-State Commerce Commission that unless equitable freight rates on newsprint from Canada are set, Canadian manufacturers may be forced to ship by water.

His testimony citing alleged discrimination against Canadian firms followed the order issued by J. B. Campbell, Inter-State Commerce Commissioner, to the railroads to set a definite rate or they would have one set for them. This was met by the suggestion from James Garfield.

Ask Lower Rates.

United States Control of the Candian as well as the United States end of Railway Freight Rates on traffic from Canadian to United States points, is the real threat underlying an application of newspaper and news print interests for lower rates, heard yesterday before the Inter-State Commerce Commission here. Newsprint paper is the freight actually in issue in the battle of wits—and on Canada's exports of newsprint alone to the United States, the question has a vital bearing on the revenues of Canadian Railroads.

Canada exports more than 2,000,000 tons of newsprint yearly to the United States, and a reduction of rates by so much as one or two dollars per ton would, if such a reduction could be enforced by the Inter-State Commerce Commission, result in a loss of revenue to the Canadian Railways of from $2,000,000 to $4,000,000 per annum.

SMALL FIRE IN CAPITOL

Woman Discovers Small Blaze On Stage of Local Theatre.

BEFORE ENTERTAINMENT.

A warning sounded by a woman who had come to enjoy the evening's program brought swift attention to a fire which had started on the stage of the Capitol Theatre at 7.33 last night and which resulted in a fire chief's order to call off the evening's entertainment.

While the cause of the fire has not yet been ascertained, it was first discovered on a curtain decoration about five feet below the footlights and making rapid progress. There were only a few people in the theatre at the time.

Chemicals were used in extinguishing the blaze though Chief George Gimblett had his men lay a hose line for emergency. This is the first theatre fire that has occurred in Peterborough during Chief Gimblett's tenure as head of the department.

Seymour Council Takes Oath of Office at Inaugural Meeting.

OFFICERS APPOINTED.

CAMPBELLFORD, Jan. 17.—(Examiner Staff Correspondence). — Only one member of the council of 1928 was included in the list of councillors elect for the present year. Robert Innes, councillor last year, took the chair of the deputy reeve when the council, with all members present, was called to order at eleven o'clock Monday morning, as per statute. The Rev. R. C. Tait, minister of St. John's United church, was present and opened the meeting with a word of prayer and a brief address. When the members elect had all been duly sworn to their offices, the meeting was officially opened with George S. Vanvolkenburg as Reeve. The business of the meeting was chiefly routine by-laws and correspondence, ending with the passing of accounts to the amount of $2,330.70.

The first communication was the annual appeal from the Sick Children's Hospital Toronto. The usual amount was granted. The five dollar fee for membership in the good roads association was also passed. After hearing a communication from the counties clerk recommending that the minor municipalities be requested to pass a by-law referring to the assessment act, chapter 238, sec. 196, sub. sec. 3, conferring certain powers to cities and towns and asking that the same powers be extended to minor municipalities, the council expressed itself as in favor of agreeing to the request.

Seeks Grant For Road

When the sitting was resumed after the noon-hour adjournment, Percy Oddie, asked for a grant on cross road number four. The request was left in the hands of councillor Milne for investigation and action. The manager of the bank of Montreal, asked that the township account continue in his bank. By-law number 1061 provided for a loan of $30,000 from the above bank by the head and treasurer to meet the current expenses of the year. By-law 1082 appointed W. M. Stephens school trustee for another term. By-law 1083 appointed W. A. Wynn, sheep valuator for the present year. By-law 1084 appointed J. W. Johnston to the local board of health. George Anderson was appointed school attendance officer for 1929 by by-law number 1085. G. A. Payne was retained as solicitor for the township.

Mr. Sager of the department of agriculture waited on the council to detail a plan to hold short courses in agriculture and economics in the public library and in the Ferris block. The rental for each place would be twenty-five dollars, he pointed out and asked the council to grant that amount. His request was granted. P. B. Nelson's request for repairs to the eighth

U. S. FINANCIER WILL TAKE PART IN DISCUSSIONS

Reparations Conference Will Be Held in Paris About February 9.

MORGAN APPOINTED.

Expected Initial Discussion Will Be Between France and Germany.

PARIS, France, Jan. 16.—(Canadian Press Cable).—It has been intimated that the Reparations Conference will meet in Paris about February 9, and in addition to Owen D. Young, former Agent General of Reparations, J. Pierpont Morgan is expected to take an important part in the discussions.

As far as could be learned from a canvass of the interested officials no one seems to have any definite plan to submit. All the experts have ideas and some have a few constructive suggestions, but none have extensive programs.

The British experts, it is understood will assume a waiting attitude, and the initial discussion is expected to be between France and Germany. The Italians will content themselves with trying to retain what they have already secured, and Japan will trust to what turns up.

It is stated that the United States delegates intend to hang back at first but expect to have a good deal to say later. The Americans, it is rumored may be called upon to arrange a settlement of two controversies, expected to develop, one between the Allies and Germany and the other between the Allies themselves.

Avices from Washington point out that the Dawes plan calls for payment by Germany not merely of $2,500,000,000, but of that amount plus an amount based on the index of prosperity in Germany. The German government has an unusually high salary list and has undertaken expensive educational reforms. The government has allowed extensive public borrowing and it has been stated by Dr. Erich Welter, noted German economist, that the savings of the country for 1927 were $2,250,000,000.

Under these circumstances the plea of poverty, which Germany is expected to raise is certain to provoke some sharp passages.

Principal Questions

French experts say the principal question on the agenda will be the issue of German bonds is to run term of years which the proposed and when the bonds are to be issued. France and Belgium would like to see the bonds arranged for at once.

The French are still afraid that Germany considers her rpearations obligations as a political debt, which may be renounced at any time an opporunity arises. If the debt were in the form of bonds it would put the situation in a different aspect and place Germany under an obligation which she could not shirk without disastrous results to her national credit.

On the other hand it is stated here that the United States representatives regard the proposal to mobilize the debt in bonds as a dream. The United States, however, to effect settlement is willing to handle a portion of the issue, should the scheme materialize.

American bankers have already indicated their willingness to underwrite some three or four million dollars. Some French bankers, interviewed here say that they are prepared to underwrite $600,000,000, because France now has confidence in Germany.

PHYSICIANS REPORT KING IS STRONGER

His Majesty's Slow Progress Is Bein Maintained, Bulletin Says.

LONDON, Jan. 16 (Canadian Press) —It was officially stated at Buckingham Palace to-day that King George's slow progress was being maintained.

It is understood from an authoritative source that the King is now definitely stronger than at any time since the beginning of his illness. The increase in strength, however, has been very gradual and cannot be measured from day to day but, as compared with a fortnight ago, His Majesty is considerably strengthened.

The difficulty of persuading the King to take nourishment has been largely overcome, and for the past week he has been taking more food. This has been reflected in his increased strength with the result, consequently, that considerable confidence now exists at Buckingham Palace.

Obituary

STEPHEN PARAGREEN.
(Contributed)

MOUNT PLEASANT, Jan. 17.—It is with deepest regret that we record the death of a highly esteemed resident of the village. When the sad news was announced on Friday, January 11th, that Stephen Paragreen was dead, a profound depression settled on the community, while it had been known that the late Mr. Paragreen was ill with the "flu" and in the grip of that dread malady pneumonia, hopes were held out that his vigorous constitution would pull him through, but fate had decreed otherwise.

The late Mr. Paragreen was born at Blisworth, North Hampton, England, on the 4th of June, 1869, a son of the late William and Ann Paragreen and was united in the holy bonds of matrimony to Ellen Maria Gameson on the 16th of July, 1894, residing at Eye, Peterborough, England, where he was a faithful member of he Methodist church, coming to Canada sixteen years ago and for the past number of years has resided in Mount Pleasant.

The deceased was particularly well known to the general public, principally through his association with the cemeteries, for a number of years he has been caretaker of the Emily. Presbyterian and Shields' cemeteries, all three of which show ample evidence of his untiring industry and interest in the work which he loved, and which developed for him many friends. He was especially suited for this work, being an English gardener, his well kept garden, both flower and vegetable, being an admiration of the general public for miles around.

The late Mr. Paragreen was cheerful and helpful in disposition, a true neighbor and friend to those in need. He was quiet and unassuming in his manner and led a most consistent and exemplary life.

From the time he came to Mount Pleasant he was a faithful and devoted member of the Methodist church, a valued member of the choir and teacher of the teen age boys' class in Sunday school. His devotion to things spiritual and the daily study of God's word being a feature that characterized his life His word was as good as his bond and integrity of character won for him the esteem of many friends. He was essentially a man of home, in his delight in keeping his family about him.

Heartfelt sympathy is extended to his sorrowing wife and two daughters, Mrs. George Wilson (Nancy) and Mrs. Andrew Wilson (Dorothy), both of Mount Pleasant, in this their darkest hour of bereavement. He also leaves to mourn four sisters: Mrs. Harriet Eaton, Mrs. Louisa Warwick, both of North Hampton, England, Mrs. Sarah Gardiner, Harpole, England, Mrs. Ada Sturgess, Blisworth, England, and one brother, George Paragreen Blisforth, England

A nephew, William Warwick, Coniston, Ontario, his only close relative in Canada, attended the funeral.

The funeral, which was largely attended, took place on Monday afternoon, after a short service at the house, the funeral cortege proceeded to the Former Methodist Church, where the service was conducted by the Rev. John Reddell of Millbrook. The choir with Mrs. F. Gardiner at the organ, led in the singing of three well known and favorite hymns of the deceased, "Asleep in Jesus", "Nearer My God to Thee", and "Jesus Lover of My Soul."

Rev. Mr. Riddell gave an earnest and thoughtful address, basing his remarks on the text, John 11:11-26, touching on the subjects of sorrow and death. "Only by faith in God and his son, Jesus Christ", said Mr Riddell, "can sorrow be lightened and death lose its sting."

"Whosoever believeth in Me shall never die."

"We are limited in the fresh, we can think of the past but cannot go back to it, we can think of the future but cannot go there. So as we may think of the stars in the heavens, but we cannot reach them, the parting by death of the soul, when we remember it is gone to eternity our feelings are changed.

We sorrow—sorrow is the price of love, we sorrow because we love, we must look forward to meeting in eternity. If we sometimes think our prayers are not answered and we are not remembered. Jesus will come some time. God's plans and God's ways are higher than our ways, yea, even as the heaven is higher than the earth.

Jesus said: "I am the resurrection and the life, he that believeth in Me though he were dead yet shall he live. And whosoever liveth and believeth in Me shall never die." "Believest Thou This?"

We must remember in the work that he had done, he has given his answer in the life that he lived, he answered this great question. "Believeth Thou This?" and he answered, "Yea."

The pallbearers were: Messrs. H. Lamb, R. Johnston of Omemee, H. Bland, R. Graham, F. Fee, and W. Kestle of Mount Pleasant.

His Sunday school class of boys acted as flower bearers, for the many beautiful flower tributes. The funeral proceeded thence to Emily Cemetery, where the burial service was held in the new chapel, this being the first burial service conducted in the chapel and was a special privilege of Lady Eaton, Toronto, due to the splendid work in the cemetery and his help and interest in the building of the chapel, by the deceased.

The floral tributes consisted of a wreath from the family; wreath from the grandchildren; pillow from the former Methodist church; wreath from Mr. and Mrs. Morcombe; wreath from Emily cemetery board; wreath from the Presbyterian cemetery board; wreath from Mr. and Mrs. Garnet Shield; spray from S.S. class; spray from the Women's Institute.

CARD OF THANKS.

Mrs. Paragreen and daughters, Mrs. Andrew Wilson and Mrs. George Wilson, desire to express their sincere appreciation and thanks to their many friends and neighbors for kindness and sympathy shown thm during their recent sad bereavement, also to all those who so kindly sent flowers.

Diphtheria rampant at Fort Vermillion, 500 trackless miles beyond Edmonton, nearest source of relief. . . . Mercury at 45 below. . . . Anti-toxin serum needed at once . . . precious lives hanging on every moment!

Relief comes by air—a priceless cargo of anti-toxin carried in by two intrepid airmen, Captain May and Lieutenant Horner of the Edmonton Flying Club.

Forty-five below and speeding at a hundred miles an hour through the numbing air. There's a test of courage and endurance.

A test, too, for motor fuel and motor oil. Imperial gasoline and Marvelube oil carried the flyers in, brought them out again, motor functioning perfectly.

In services such as this the superior quality of Imperial products is dramatically established. And every day, throughout Canada, hundreds of thousands of motors give consistent evidence of that superior quality.

Ninety out of every hundred miles flown in Canada are travelled with Imperial Products

Site For Warsaw School Discussed at Meeting

TRUSTEES AND RATEPAYERS DECIDE ON PLOT OF GROUND; PROPERTY TOTALS ABOUT ACRE

Decide to Consult Engineer Regarding Drainage of Site.

ENEW OPTION

Plot Would Consist of Part of Morgan, Cooper and Carveth Properties.

WARSAW, Jan. 17.—(Examiner Correspondence).—A meeting of the trustees and ratepayers of Warsaw school section No. 3 was held in Warsaw Town Hall on Friday afternoon for the purpose of voting on the site chosen for the school by the trustees, to either accept or reject it. James Greystock was appointed chairman for the meeting and James. Hawthorne, secretary.

The site which the trustees had approved and which Mr. Lees, inspector, had chosen, consisted of the Morgan property at $450; part of Mrs. J. Cooper's property at $150 and part of Mrs. Carveth's property at $250. The property would total about one acre.

It was understood that if the site selected were rejected, the trustees would elect one man, the ratepayers would elect one man and they, together with Mr. Lees, would choose the site. The general feeling of the meeting semed to be that the site was the most central and therefore, so far as that was concerned, the best. It would also be a big improvement to the village as it would heal an eyesore.

It was well known the site would require draining and raising. During the discussion it was brought out that the whole acre or a greater part of it would be raised three feet and there was doubt expressed about draining it, as it appears a ledge of rock runs along the greater part of the property. It was thought by some that the cost of draining might be far too great. The option on the property stands until February 1.

After some discussion the following was decided upon: That the option be renewed and an engineer consulted regarding the drainage. The meeting then adjourned utnil further notice is given by the trustees for another meeting.

WORK BOARD IS ORGANIZED

Formed to Promote Tuxis Work in Closer Relationship With Church.

AT LAKEFIELD

(Examiner Correspondence)

LAKEFIELD, Jan. 17.—On Thursday evening last a Lakefield boys' work board was formed to promote Tuxis work in closer relationship with the church, bond selling, district camps and conclaves. The following officers were elected: Chairman, Reeve C. S. Tanner; vice-chairman, A. B. Burrows; treasurer, Rev. T. M. Wesley; secretary, W. E. Leonard.

The Lakefield boys have been fortunate in procuring Jim Gibson, Premier of the Older Boys' Parliament of 1928 to speak in an open session in the Regent Street United Church on Sunday evening, January 27, at 8 o'clock. The hour has been specially arranged to accommodate those who are attending other services.

The Tuxis Boys and Trail Rangers are putting on a moving picture in the Queen Street Theatre on January 25 and 26, entitled "The Little Shepherd of Kingdom Come," starring Richard Barthelmess. Local talent will assist.

To Hold Annual Meeting.

The annual meeting of the Lakefield Agricultural Society will be held in the Council Chamber at 2.30 p.m. on Monday, January 21, and it is especially urged that all members attend and all who are interested in the matter of keeping up the Fall Fair. These are hard days for the small fairs and yet they are of great value in the community, not only as social centres, but in the matter of local competitions for stock of all sorts, and also in competition of field, orchard and garden products. If every member works for the betterment of the fair, it must succeed, and the membership lists will increase. The officers of the society are very urgent that there should be a good attendance at this meeting.

In Good Condition.

The roads are now in first-class shape for sleighing and very fair for motoring. Although heavy in spots, the grave danger of skidding on the ice is passed, and although some cars are in storage till spring, still the majority are still in active service.

Coldest Day.

Sunday, January 13, was the coldest day this winter up to date, and at midnight the thermometer registered 15 below zero in some parts of the village. During the day a very high west wind added to the cold and kept many safely indoors.

MONTREAL GRAIN AND PRODUCE.

MONTREAL, Que., January 17 (Canadian Press). — A feature of the domestic grain trade here yesterday was the stronger feeling that developed for oats, wheat and barley, and values were advanced 1 to 2 cents per bushel. Manitoba No. 5 wheat sold at $1.07, feed wheat at 99c, and feed barley at 82c per bushel. The demand was fair and a moderate trade was done.

The undertone to the flour market was firm under a good demand for all grades.

An active business was done in all lines of millfeed and values were well maintained.

Further strength developed in the market for standard grades of rolled oats, and values were marked up another ten cents per bag.

An easier feeling prevailed in the butter market and prices were declined ¼c per pound. This was attributed to the limited demand and the large supplies available. Receipts were 23 packages.

Little business was done in cheese but values were unchanged. Receipts were 176 boxes.

Prices for all grades of fresh and storage eggs were firmly maintained and the volume of business was moderate. Receipts were 1,921 cases.

The potato market continued active and firm. Prince Edward Island Whites sold at 85c Green Mountains at 90c per 90 pounds, in bags, and New Brunswick Green Mountains at 65c per 90 pounds, in bulk.

Canadian beans sold unchanged at $5.50 per bushel, wholesale.

CHICAGO GRAIN.

CHICAGO, Jan. 17. —(Canadian Press. — Somersaulting prices turned the corn market end over end yesterday, and established new high price records for the season, with May delivery vaulting above $1.00. Broad buying activity developed after rains reported in the drought-stricken Argentine corn belt were apparently shown to be inadequate. Meanwhile, wheat demand was stimulated by word that Canadian Mills had booked their full capacity four months ahead with trans-Pacific flour orders.

Closing quotations on corn were unsettled, 3-4c to 1 1-8c net higher. Wheat finished 1 1-8c to 1 1-4 to 1 3-8c up, oats varying from 1-8c decline to 3-8c advance, and provisions at seven cents setback to a rise of 15 cents.

Corn trading was spectacular both on account of sudden reverses of price trends yesterday and because of the big volume of transactions, as well as owing to the fact that two out of three of the principal future deliveries of corn have now attained the long-coveted goal of $1.00 a bushel. At first, the market underwent a decided downward swing as a result of Argentine rain advices, but later dispatches indicated that moisture though scattered over three provinces had proved light for the most part, and that dryness, continued in Buenos Aires Province, usually the heaviest producer of Argentine corn. Moreover, export interests here were credited with buying corn on the decline in price.

Special impetus to the subsequent upward jumps of corn values came from notice taken that 15 per cent of the United States corn visible supply is now at seaboard points and readily available for export, whereas the seaboard a year ago had on hand less than 5 per cent of the domestic stock. Another bullish factor was evidence of a decrease in country offerings of corn to Chicago, implying that farmers were holding back for higher prices, although at the maximum reached to-day the market was about 24 cents a bushel above the season's bottom level.

Wheat displayed strength yesterday from the start, by far the most important development was in the shape of Winnipeg reports of the huge flour shipments in progress from Canada to North China, and assertions that some of the flour is going to Russia, besides, Liverpool wheat quotations were higher than expected, and advices were current that much domestic wheat, especially east of the Mississippi, continued under an ice pack, and was therefore in danger of smothering. Oats were swayed chiefly by the action of other grain.

Provisions turned easier on account of hedging pressure and scattered liquidation which more than counterbalanced the effect of upturns in the value of hogs.

TORONTO PRODUCE.

TORONTO PRODUCE ...c..... . .

TORONTO, Jan. 17.—Dull conditions prevailed throughout the wholesale produce trade in Toronto yesterday, due partly to the fact that many dealers and brokers were attending the annual convention of the Canadian Produce Association at the King Edward Hotel. The egg market showed little improvement over quet sessions of Monday and Tuesday, but prices remained unchanged and there was no definite indication of further declines. Supplies continued to arrive in fairly liberal volume, however, and the distributive movement was only moderately active. Quotations to country egg shippers were 36c to 37c for fresh extras, delivered in Toronto, cases returned, and firsts ruled at 32s to 33c on the same delivery basis.

Wholesalers' quotations to the retail trade were unchanged at 45c to 47c for fresh extras in cartons, with firsts at 38c to 39c. Storage extras moved into retail hands at prices of 34c to 36c in cartons, with firsts at 29c to 31c.

Butter Quoted at 40c

Butter values were nominally unchanged at 40 to 40½c a pound for finest No. 1 creamery, delivered in Toronto, but the bulk of trading took place at 40c. New Zealand supplies were quoted at an even 40c a pound, delivered, while No. 2 grade creamery showed no change at 39c to 39½c. Butter was quoted at 44c to 45c for No. 1 creamery prints to the retail trade.

The poultry market was quiet and unchanged.

JUDGE MOTT'S ADDRESS.

The people of Peterborough have the Rotary Club to thank for the opportunity that is being given on Monday night to hear Judge Mott, of Toronto, widely known as "The Boys' Friend," and whose work in the Toronto juvenile court has done much to put wayward youngsters on the path that leads to good citizenship.

Judge Mott's work and his reputation as a speaker should draw a capacity audience of adults and boys alike to the Collegiate Institute auditorium.

His message will be for everybody—as full of interest to parents as it will be to the boys themselves—and there will, of course, be no admission charge, the Rotary Club, as part of its community service endeavors, bearing the entire expense.

The chance to hear such an able speaker as Judge Mott discuss such a fascinating subject as boys' work is too good to be missed, and the public-spiritedness of the Rotarians in making this meeting possible should be recognized by an attendance worthy of the occasion.

AN ANIMATED ATLAS.

The Natural Resources Intelligence Service, the national service for information on Canadian geography, resources and development, has just issued an interesting piece of Canadian publicity in the form of an animated atlas of Canada.

As Hon. Charles Stewart points out in a foreword in this booklet, the bow always bent soon loses its resilience, and the man who never relaxes accomplishes less than he who intersperses his work with a due amount of recreation.

Thus in this publication distinctive features of the natural wealth of each Province are pointed out in the text by Olive Master, while the artist, Arthur Edward Elias, has given a touch of humor to his representation of the recreational resources offered by different sections of Canada.

The result is a breezy mixture of information and intriguing pictures that will cause this atlas to be treasured by those coming into possession of a copy.

It should prove a very effective advertising medium that will call attention in a novel way to the many advantages offered by Canada.

WORK IN THE COUNTRY.

In advocating an effort on the part of the Federal Government to move the surplus population of large centres to rural areas as a solution of immigration problems, Tom Moore, president of the Trades and Labor Congress of Canada, has indicated a program the completion of which would mean a great deal to the prosperity of this country.

Much of the urban unemployed could be usefully put to work in rural Canada, as Mr. Moore points out, but where the scheme would fall to the ground would be in the difficulty of overcoming the reluctance of city residents to accept rural employment.

It is the common experience that no matter how much unemployment there may be in urban centres and no matter how many positions at farm work may be available, it is almost impossible to persuade the unemployed city worker to go to the country to work.

Mr. Moore, who is to take the matter up with the Federal Government, has not explained how he proposes to get around this difficulty; he may have a solution that he has not yet announced.

It is to be hoped that he has, for it is obviously an unsound condition that while farmers are calling for help city workers should be out of employment.

MISS MACPHAIL IS RIGHT.

With some views held by Miss Agnes MacPhail, M.P., The Examiner has never been able to sympathize, but when the only woman member of Parliament takes a stand as she did in her St. Thomas speech the other night in favor of safeguarding the health of human beings, at least as carefully as that of animals, we simply have to fall in line.

Her indictment of a system that spends more money protecting the livestock of this country than it does protecting the health of its citizens, focuses attention upon a situation that is not creditable to our common sense.

Surely the life of a human being should rank at least as high as that of a Holstein or a Berkshire.

And Miss MacPhail is equally sound when she urges that some of the money being used to induce immigrants to come to Canada might be spent to much better advantage in reducing child-birth mortality in this country.

According to the latest available figures, four mothers a day die in child-birth in Canada, and in spite of the opinion of the Medical Council that at least fifty per cent. of these deaths could be avoided if proper steps were taken, there has been no sign of a campaign to reduce the mortality from this cause.

Miss MacPhail has drawn attention to conditions that challenge action; it is hoped she will press her views vigorously during the next session of Parliament and be successful in starting a consistent effort to remedy the situation.

OUR HISTORIC SITES.

In a quiet way and without much publicity the Historic Sites and Monuments Board of Canada, which reports to the National Parks Branch of the Department of the Interior, is carrying on a very necessary work in the preservation from neglect and forgetfulness of spots which anchor the present to the past in Canadian history. In the past year twenty-two historic sites or places commemorative of historic events were marked in various parts of the Dominion. Cairns and memorials with bronze tablets were erected in Nova Scotia, Quebec, Manitoba, Alberta and British Columbia, while tablets were affixed to the walls of public buildings or to pillars in public places in Nova Scotia, New Brunswick, Quebec, Ontario, Manitoba and British Columbia.

Supplementary to the markings of sites and places preservation work was done on the ruined walls of old Fort Chambly and to several massive stone structures at Fort Lennox, in Quebec. The major portion of the original lands comprising the site of Fort Louisbourg, Cape Breton, Nova Scotia, were acquired with a view to development of the site as a national park at some future time.

It is very desirable that these spots and places should be marked and saved for the inspiration and education of this and later generations, and the Historic Sites and Monuments Board is accomplishing its endless task with zeal and imagination. An appreciation of the romance in Canadian history, of the color and heroic strife of the Dominion's early days, ought to be a primary element in every Canadian's education, and more things are taught through a bit of an ancient fort or a monument on the site of a picturesque episode than through many dull pages of text-book. Also it is a factor worth keeping in mind, in these days when all the world goes touring, that an historic site appropriately marked becomes a spot of intense interest to tourists and therefore an asset in the keen competition for this new and growing business in travel. The fact that historic inscriptions nowadays are read by many with but a rudimentary knowledge of our national story makes it very necessary that they be adequately informative. In explaining a cairn or a salvaged wall they should assume no previous knowledge on the subject to be possessed by him who passes.—Ottawa Journal.

IMMIGRATION.

Mr. Forke makes the interesting announcement that Canadian boys are to be given the same opportunity as British boys to settle on Canadian farms. "We want Canadians to know," the Minister of Immigration said at Winnipeg, "that we are just as ready to help Canadian boys to settle on the land as we are to help boys from Great Britain." The co-operation of the provincial authorities in making loans to the would-be farmers will be sought, of course, and will no doubt be forthcoming. The idea is that each Province going into the plan should be ready to spend dollar for dollar with Ottawa in providing the necessary loans.

It is highly desirable that every encouragement be given young men who wish to pursue agricultural careers and certainly it is sensible that if we extend monetary assistance to youths from across the water, we should be at least equally generous with the native-born. It should be just as easy, perhaps easier, for a deserving young Canadian to get started in the business of farming. And in a general way, of course, Canada needs to encourage farming and to assist every worth-while movement for getting people back to the land.

In connection with settlement and immigration matters, the Government's rather mysterious decision to limit the immigration of Europeans from certain and so-called non-preferred countries has provoked no little discussion, and for the most part the talk is not complimentary to the authorities. Canada needs a quota law on newcomers just about as much as a drowning man needs an anchor thrown to him. This country is not drowning—far from it—but it is seriously in need of population of all kinds and classes. With less people than the State of New York, but an area greater than the United States, Canada talks quota! If it were not so tragic it would be one of the great jokes of the country. The present Government has been criticized—most unjustly, unprejudiced observers say—for not bringing enough British immigrants into the country and for letting in too many from other countries. As a matter of fact, the greatest inducements have been extended to Britishers, by way of cheap fares, farm loans, etc., whereas no concession of this kind is made to newcomers from the other lands. Is it the fault of the Government, then, if the number of English, Scottish and Irish immigrants is not as large, proportionately, as certain critics think it should be? The Government seems to be alarmed by the criticism, however, hence the announcement that limitations will be placed on the number of "non-preferreds" desiring to settle in Canada, while at the same time the drive for British settlers is to be given new vigor. This means, of course, nothing more nor less than the adoption of a policy by which immigration—the very life blood of the country—is to be discouraged. In order to keep the percentage of British immigration up to a certain point, immigration in general is to be cut down.

This is a short-sighted, narrow-minded idea. Canada cannot afford to refuse admission to one desirable new citizen, no matter from which country he happens to come. We need people. The country's undeveloped resources are fairly crying out for them. Canada should be interested in human beings; racial strains are of decidedly secondary importance. Canada needs and wants all the newcomers from Great Britain she can get. But any qualified man who is healthy, honest and willing to work should be able to get into this country and we should make him welcome because, if he is the right type of man, he immediately becomes a national asset. The narrow minds that cry out against the "foreigner" are retarding Canada's progress. Most of the people of Canada are foreigners, or nearly so, in the sense that they have been born elsewhere or that they are only one or two generations removed from some other land. Why, then, should we of Canada seek to deny to others the privileges and the opportunities that were given to us or to our fathers or grandfathers? And—putting it in a cold-blooded, commercial way—why should we deny ourselves the undoubted benefits that must come from materially increasing the present meagre population of Canada?

The United States became one of the world's greatest nations by inviting opportunity seekers to enter her gates. Immigration made the United States the powerful country it is to-day. When the United States needed people, there was no talk of quotas. The quota idea was introduced only when the Republic decided that its population was sufficiently large. Canada is in much the same position of the United States of half a century ago. We have a huge country, enormous untilled agricultural areas and other undeveloped resources. We need people. We must have people. Yet we talk quotas! —Border Cities Star.

A Thought

TO-DAY.

Write it on your heart that every day is the best day in the year. No man has learned anything rightly until he know that every day is Doomsday. To-day is a king in disguise. To-day always looks mean to the thoughtless, in the face of an uniform experience that all good and great and happy actions are made up precisely of these blank to-days. Let us not be so deceived; let us unmask the king as he passes. —Emerson.

Editor Examiner:

THE ROUYN SMOKE STACK.

Your issue of the 12th instant contained an article in which it was stated that two observers in an airplane 5,000 feet high when flying from Port Hope to Peterborough, saw a smoke stack at Rouyn, Quebec, 340 miles distant. Either the seeing was imaginary or the figures given are incorrect as for two reasons it would be quite impossible from an elevation of 5,000 feet to see any such object at a distance of 340 miles.

The first reason is because of the curve of the earth's surface. Altitudes are usually measured from sea level. The sea level surface of the earth may, for all practical purposes, be taken as the surface of a sphere of 4,000 miles radius. This plane was said to have been 5,000 feet high. To keep figures in even miles, instead of the more cumbersome feet, give the plane the benefit of an extra 280 feet of height thus making it one mile above sea level or 4,001 miles from the centre of the earth. Now from the relations of the sides of right angle triangles it is quite simple to calculate that the top of any object 340 miles distant would have to be about 7.8 miles above sea level in order to be seen from the plane, provided that the earth's surface between the plane and the object where the line of sight is tangent to it be at sea level. Now of course this surface is not at sea level but some hundreds of feet higher. Therefore the object would have to be considerably higher than the calculated 7.8 miles above sea level to allow of its being seen from the plane. Now I have not at present available the exact elevation of Rouyn above sea level but the Dominion Geological Survey Maps show all that district as being between 100 and 1,000 feet above sea level. Even Mount Everest, the highest point on the earth's surface is barely 5½ miles above sea level. Hence, even if Rouyn were as high as Mount Everest a chimney to be seen from a plane one mile high at a distance of 340 miles would have to be 2½ miles or more in height. Owing to the varying density of the air as one rises above the earth's surface refraction of light would tend to make a distant object show somewhat higher than it really is, but it would not make nearly enough difference to allow of the object being seen in the case under discussion. Hence under the conditions given it was clearly impossible to see the smoke stack as it was miles below the horizon.

The second reason why the smoke stack could not be seen at the distance given is that even if the curvature of the earth did not interfere, the object is far too small to be seen by the unaided human eye at such a distance. The diameter of a long narrow object such as a smoke stack must subtend an angle at the eye of at least 10 seconds of arc in order to be seen under the most favorable conditions. This means that the diameter must be at least the distance divided by 20,622. Hence for a distance of 340 miles the diameter of the smoke stack must be at least 89 feet in order that it may be seen under the best conditions by the naked eye. No smoke stack is anything like such a size and hence under the conditions given the one at Rouyn could not possibly be seen.

Clearly there is something wrong somewhere, with your story.

I am, yours truly,

AN ENGINEER.

Lyrics of Life

By Douglas Malloch

THE AVERAGE LIFE

"Success don't need to spoil a man,"
Says he, "and won't the wise,
Work good and hard, make all you can,
But one thing I advise:
Don't ever think you can't go broke,
And that your luck won't turn;
In case it does, then you can joke,
And not much give a dern.

"I'm mighty glad for this y ar's crop,"
Says he, "but no such fool
As not to know the price can drop,
The weather turn too cool.
And I ain't no such fool right then
As not to know, in time,
The weather may turn warm again,
The market start to climb.

"Life would be easier, it would,"
Says he, "to let it come,
Not too swelled up when things are good,
Or sad when things are bum.
Though now and then you won the strife,
And now and then you fell,
You'll find at that the average life
Will average pretty well."

THE LUCKIEST LADY

Ruby M. Ayres

TODAY'S INSTALMENT

XXIV—ON THE ROOF GARDEN

Marna wore a new dress and many diamonds to the gala night entertainment at the Star Club.

"By Jove, we're smart tonight!" Paget said admiringly. He loved to see Marna wearing her diamonds. "Who do you expect to see at the Star?" he demanded jokingly.

"She looks beautiful," Biddy said.

"You ought not to be coming, Biddy," Renny Martin put in. "Little Flappers who have been ill ought to go to bed early."

"That's for me to say, and I told her she might come," Marna said sharply.

Everything was getting on her nerves.

She leaned back in the car and closed her eyes. All day long she had been saying to herself: "It's all over. Hugh's going to be married. Hugh's going to be married . . ."

"If I say it often enough I shall get used to it, and it won't seem so bad," she thought hopelessly; but each time it was like a knife being turned in an open wound.

* * *

The dance-floor at the Star club was crowded; people danced on one another's toes and bumped together at the corners.

The atmosphere was hot, and the band seemed noisy and tuneless.

"Toppin', isn't it?" Paget said half a dozen times.

He always chjoyed a crowd and many lights and a loud band. He loved being amongst pretty woman, although he told Marna that there was nobody in the room who could hold a candle to her.

"Too much paint and powder," he said. "Don't like it."

"Paint is an improvement to most women," she answered unkindly. "I'm thinking about taking to it myself."

He looked at her with grave, hurt eyes.

"What's the matter with you to-night, darling?"

Marna looked up at him and thought crazily:

"Shall I tell him the truth? Shall I put an end to the whole miserable pretence once and for all, and tell him the truth?" But she knew she could not.

"There's nothing the matter," she said. She laughed and held out her hand to Renny Martin. "Come and dance," she said.

Paget and the Little Flapper were left alone at the supper-table, but the eyes of both of them followed Marna as Martin swept her into the crowd of dancers.

"Loves dancin', doesn't she—eh, what?" Paget asked with an effort.

"Yes," said Biddy.

"Martin dances well—eh?" Paget said again after a moment.

"I'd rather dance with you," Biddy said.

"Bless your heart!" He squeezed her hand, and then leaned back in his chair with a sigh. "There's somethin' wrong tonight," he said in a puzzled sort of way. "I ought to be enjoyin' myself, and I'm not."

"It's hot and crowded," Biddy said. "It's been hotter and more crowded before," answered George Paget.

His eyes followed his wife round the room. She was very pale, scarcely less white than her gown, but she was laughing extravagantly.

"Never thought Martin much of a humorist," Paget said, then tried to laugh. "Glad to see Marna enjoyin' herself," he said.

When the dance was ended, instead of coming back to their table, Martin asked Marna if she would go upstairs to the roof garden. It was a glorious night, with a pale crescent moon in a clear sky, and a soft wind blowing.

London lay far below, carpeted with a myriad lights.

"Isn't it wonderful?" Marna said. She leaned her arms on the parapet and looked down.

"Yes." Martin was close beside her; after a moment he put his arm round her waist. "It's wonderful to be alone with you," he said.

Marna closed her eyes with a little shiver. If only it had been Hugh, she thought wildly, and then was quickly ashamed. She was behaving like a love-sick girl, and she was a married woman, no longer even very young.

"You're not angry with me?" Renny Martin said, and she laughed.

Angry? Why should she be angry? What did anything matter? Nothing did matter! Not even the dear, kind man downstairs who loved her so devotedly; not even the Little Flapper, who lately seemed to have gone so far away from her.

"Why do you laugh?" Martin asked, and she turned and looked up at him, the pale moonlight on her face.

"I'm thinking how stupid life really is," she said directly. "All sorts of desires and emotions are put into our hearts which we are not allowed to gratify, or, if we do, the world calls us sinners."

"Why mind what the world says?" She looked away from him to the myriad of twinkling lights below.

"Perhaps because I am a coward," she answered.

They were silent for a moment; then suddenly he bent and kissed her arm.

"I love you more than he does, Marna," he said hoarsely.

She started violently, drawing away from him with a little shudder.

"I don't know what you mean—what you are talking about. Let us go back to the others."

"Not yet. You always avoid me, and now we have a moment alone—"

"I don't want to be alone with you, and George will be wondering why we are so long——"

He laughed unpleasantly.

"If I were Hubbard it would be a different story, I suppose."

"Please let me go."

"You are cruel to me, Marna."

"I don't want to be. I just want to be left alone. Why can't you leave me alone?"

"Because I love you."

She made a little movement of distaste.

"You've loved so many women, Renny," she said with a touch of contempt.

"And you have only ever loved one man—is that what you mean? Why do you waste your time thinking of Hubbard? He will have forgotten you long ago—"

"Please let me go."

Marna wondered why she was not angry or frightened, but she was neither. This man left her utterly unmoved now, save that he wearied her. She wanted to be alone; she would love to have been alone up here in the stillness of the night, with London at her feet, free to fight with her own unhappy thoughts and subdue them.

"If Hubbard never comes back!" Martin said savagely.

Marna's calm suddenly broke; she turned on him with passionate anger.

"Why do you say such things? What is Hugh Hubbard to me? You tell me yourself he is going to be married. I hate you when you say such things. I suppose you think it hurts me. Well, it does not! I don't care about anything any more. Nothing matters; you can say what you like, do what you like—all of you. I——"

She flung her arms wide with a gesture of weary despair, and with a swift movement Renny Martin caught her to him.

"If I could only say what I like—tell you how I love you! Marna, can't you be just a little kind to me? Can't you—" He broke off with a smothered exclamation as George Paget appeared suddenly in the doorway before them, that led up from the ball-room below.

Why We Do What We Do.

WHY WE DO NOT INHERIT IDEAS

By Mehran K, Thomson, Ph.D.

(Author, The Springs of Human Action)

Were you born with ideas? If so, what sort of ideas did you inherit? Before the days of John Locke (1632-1704) it was believed that human beings were born with certain ideas. These were supposed to be innate in the same sense in which our instincts, reflexes, and elementary emotions are innate. It was argued that since no one can prove the origin of the idea of God and immortality which everyone seems to have, it must have been born in every person or that at least the germs of it were inherited, and in time developed into full-fledged ideas.

Locke, the brilliant English philosopher, completely demolished this notion. By philosophical and logical arguments he proved once and for all that no idea can be inherited. He pointed out that no one claims that the idea of fire, as universal as the idea of God, is inherited as is the color of the eyes and hair.

Locke was right in denying inherited ideas. His likening of the mind at birth to a blank sheet of white paper or wax waiting the impressions of experience, however, is misleading and utterly wrong.

Contrary to this notion of a negative and passive mind, the mind is positive and active. It takes up the sensory experiences and builds up concepts and deas. Our ability to respond actively to what we see and taste and hear and smell, etc., is what makes human beings unlike the animals, trees, and stones. We learn more than the lower animals because our brains are better adapted to take the raw stuff of experience and make something of it.

Today no one believes that people are born with ideas. But there are a great many who think with Locke that the human brain is like wax or white paper. This is not true. The infant's brain is largely a jelly-like mass which develops gradually and only after reaching a fairly advanced stage is capable of thinking and maintaining ideas.

Your ability to think is inherited, but what you think is determined by experience. It would be impossible otherwise to learn any new thing. We should simply pass on the same set of ideas from generation to generation as we transmit the instinctive tendencies.

At Monday night's meeting of the executive committee, the members approved a protest of the system proposed by the Provincial Command for dealing with membership cards. It is believed by the executive that the membership card, being evidence of the member's payment of dues, is his property. The Provincial Command request that all cards be turned in at the end of the year, and it will then issue new cards. To do this in Peterborough would require the services of a canvasser, and could not then be accomplished, because so many have mislaid their cards.

Horoscope

The Stars Incline, But Do Not Compel

FRIDAY, JANUARY 18, 1929.

(Copyright, 1929, McClure Syndicate.)

Benefic aspects dominate today, according to astrology which reads in the horoscope much prosperity for the United States.

The early morning is a time for constructive work of every sort. Business should be pushed with confidence.

Women should make the most of every hour, for in the home and office alike they will find everything working out advantageously, if they use good judgment.

This should be a most auspicious day for shopping or for preparing for the entertainment of friends.

American hospitality is to gain added fame this season which is to be distinguished by remarkable entertainments.

Distinguished visitors from South America as well as Europe will be received in Washington where one will cause a sensation, the seers foretell.

Today should favor all who use their best energies. It is lucky for those who hope to succeed by work, but unlucky for all who hope to advance through special privilege.

This is not an auspicious planetary government for those who desire political appointments of even well-paid employment.

Both men and women who have power over human destiny as employers or capitalists may be difficult to meet and critical when their interest is desired.

The evening of this day is read as favorable for conferences or discussions at which important questions are decided.

Education is subject to the most stimulating rule of the stars, and great benefactions for schools and universities are foretold for 1929.

The new year is to bring to the world strange experiences and to introduce to the nations of the Earth new miracles, astrologers predict.

Persons whose birthdate it is have the augury of much good fortune in the coming months. Money affairs should be most satisfactory and a great experience in life is foretold.

Children born on this day probably will be most fortunate in material things. Many bankers are born under this sign. Happy marriage is indicated.

Uncle Wiggily

A Bed-Time Story by Howard R. Garis

UNCLE WIGGILY'S BARK GUN

(Copyright, 1929, McClure Syndicate.)

When Uncle Wiggily started out of the hollow stump bungalow one day to go look for adventures he was quite surprised to hear, speaking to him in the hall, a little voice, which asked:

"Where are you going, Unkie Wig?"

"I'm going adventuring," answered the rabbit gentleman. "But what are you doing home from school, Baby Bunty?" For it was Bunty who had spoken in that little voice.

"Oh, I didn't go to school today," said Bunty, "'cause maybe I'm going to have the measles like Lulu Wibble-wobble. So Nurse Jane said I should stay home. But if you want me to, I could go adventuring with you, Unkie Wig."

"No, indeed!" laughed the rabbit gentleman. "You can't come with me if you can't go to school. You stay here, Bunty, and when I come back I'll tell you all that happened."

"That will be nice!" said the little orphan rabbit. "But where's your gun, Unkie Wig?" she asked as she saw the rabbit gentleman open the front door.

"Gun!" he exclaimed. "What would I do with a gun?"

"Shoot the Bad Chaps!" said Bunty. "You had better take a gun with you, Unkie Wig. 'Cause now it's winter and the Bad Chaps get very hungry in

"Oh, I'm shot!" he howled.

winter for they can't find much to eat with all the snow on the ground and maybe they might chase you. But if you had a pop gun, even you could shoot it bang-bung and drive 'em away!"

"Well, Bunty, I haven't even a pop gun!" chuckled Uncle Wiggily. "But I guess I'll be all right without it. Ta-ta! See you later!"

And away he hopped.

Over the fields and through the woods went the rabbit uncle looking for adventures. And even though he had laughed when Baby Bunty spoke about the Bad Chaps, Uncle Wiggily sort of looked around every time he heard a noise. But mostly it was the wind or an icicle falling or a snowball rolling down hill that made the sound.

"I don't believe any Bad Chaps will bother me today," said Mr. Longears to himself as he hopped over toward a bunch of tall, white birch trees that were leaning crooked against the wind. "And I don't seem to be finding any adventures at all."

Just as the rabbit said that to himself, all of a sudden he heard a noise which he knew wasn't made by the wind, or by a broken icicle, or by a snowball rolling down hill. It was a scritching, scratching sound like a puppy's dog's paw nails clittering over the oilcloth in the kitchen, and, looking out from the middle of the bunch of birch trees where he now stood, Uncle Wiggily saw the Fox, the Wolf and the Bob Cat slinking along together toward him.

"Dear me!" exclaimed the rabbit gentleman. "This is too bad! All three hungry chaps at once, and looking for me, I'm sure!"

And, indeed, truth to tell, this is just what the Fox, the Wolf and the Bob Cat were doing. The Bob Cat, sitting on a hill far off, had seen the rabbit hopping along the snow toward the birch trees and calling to the Fox and Wolf, near by, the three Bad Chaps were now close to the clump where Uncle Wiggily was hidden.

"He is in there!" howled the Bob Cat. "We will wait here until he comes out and then we'll have supper."

"Now how can I fool those Bad Chaps and make them run away so I can hop out and go home?" said Uncle Wiggily to himself. Then he happened to think of the birch trees. He knew he could easily strip a piece of bark from a slender tree and roll it up round, like a pop gun.

"And that's what I'll do!" said Mr. Longears. Crouching down so the Bad Chaps outside the clump of trees could not see him, Uncle Wiggily made himself a sort of pop gun from a round roll of bark which he gnawed from a birch tree.

"But what shall I shoot for bullets in my bark gun?" whispered the rabbit. And then he saw some icicles hanging from the tree branches. "Broken pieces of icicles will make fine bullets!" said the rabbit.

Quickly he loaded his bark gun and, aiming one end at the Bob Cat, who was slinking along behind a bush, Uncle Wiggily blew hard in the other end of the roll of bark. Out puffed a chunk of icicle, hitting the Bob Cat on his soft and tender nose.

"Oh! I'm shot!" he howled. "And so am I. And I!" howled the Fox and Wolf in turn as Uncle Wiggily aimed his bark gun at them. And the three Bad Chaps were so surprised at being shot with icicle bullets that away they ran and the bunny could hop out of the clump of trees and go home safe. And he told Baby Bunty all about his adventure.

News From the Mines

Through Solloway, Mills & Company

NIPISSING

The recent activity in Nipissing shares is probably due to a report that this company have optioned 22 claims in the Crow River section close to the N.A.M.E. and Connell groups. While the terms of the agreement are not known, it is understood the vendors retain one-third interest.

KEELEY

It is reported from the north that leaf silver was being found along the lower contact at the Keeley. While the ore encountered was not commercial, its presence is encouraging and removed doubt as to the existence of mineralization in this formation. Another 600 feet of crosscutting will be necessary to reach a point below where the Bonanza vein was found on the upper horizons.

MINING CORPORATION

The recent strength in Mining Corporation may be due rather to a report that this company had optioned property adjoining the Mother Lode in California than to any developments at the Murray property in Rouyn, where shaft sinking is continuing at a good rate.

BIDGOOD

Exploration work at Bidgood is now reaching an important stage. Following the recommendations of a private engineer's report, the main shaft is being sunk to the 1,000 foot level, and is now down past 900 feet. We believe the new cast shaft is down to the 125 level where crosscutting will commence to fully explore the favorable diamond drill indications in this section last summer. About 60 men are employed at the propery, and work is being aggressively pushed.

CAMBRO

The shaft on this property immediately adjoining Bidgood on the west is now down well below 900 feet. Mr. W. B. Airth, who was recently placed in charge of Cambro, has won for himself quite a reputation in the north country, and it is now anticipated that no time will be lost in completing the shaft to the 1,000 horizon and carrying out contemplated exploration from that level.

SISCOE

Mining men returning from the Siscoe property assert that the indicated ore at present mill capacity is sufficient to last for two years. It is the general opinion that the mill heads will run very high as the mine on all four levels is shaping into a high-grade proposition of some proportions. Diamond drilling below the 500 has revealed substantial widths of commercial ore and would appear to indicate a very material increase in tonnage. Diamond drilling on the main land has revealed good widths of ore, and indicated the possibility orf good-sized deposits in this section of the property, which up to the present time has been practically untouched.

ARNO

Dewatering of Arno's Coxheath property should make the 185-foot horizon accessible this week. According to Sydney reports, the main vein in the crosscut at the 135 has a width of 15 feet with indicated copper between five and seven per cent, and possibly $3 in gold and silver.

This stock, sponsored by Miller-Court Company of Toronto and Vancouver and put on the market at $1.00 the end of November last, has made phenomenal profits for those who secured the stock.

It is opposite the river to Pend Oreille and the two companies control the power situation at that point.

It is understood that P. B. has considerably over a million shares of Reeves.

It went sky-rocketing Tuesday afternoon on the news of a new strike on the property which doubled its reserves, continued its advance on Wednesday, when it hit $4.00, closing about $3.50.

Cattle Prices Steady On Toronto Exchange

TORONTO, Ont., Jan. 17.—(Canadian Press.)—The few cattle offered on the Dominion Livestock Exchange were sold at steady prices.

Calf receipts 8,000. Calves were steady at $17.00 for top.

Hog receipts 87,000. Packers were bidding $9.50 f.o.b. for selects or $10.50 off car.

Sheep receipts 6,000. Lamb supplies were too small to make a market.

Liverpool Quotations Affects Chicago Corn

CHICAGO, Ills., Jan. 17 (Canadian Press).—Bulging prices for corn in Argentina and at Liverpool sent the corn market here soaring anew today in the early dealings. All Chicago deliveries of corn jumped to a new high price record for the season. Opening at ¼ off to ⅛ up, Chicago corn soon scored general gains. Wheat, oats and provisions were also stronger, with wheat starting unchanged to ⅝c advance.

Big Advance Scored By Wright-Hargreaves

TORONTO, Ont., Jan. 17 (Canadian Press).—Wright-Hargreaves continued to advance in an irregular session of the Standard Stock and Mining Exchange this morning. Losses and gains were about equally balanced with trading bunched on the more recent prominent issues. After opening at 1.65, Wright-Hargreaves moved up rapidly to a peak of 1.95 for a net increase of 25 cents. Towagamac weakened 35 cents to 3.00.

The Western numbers failed to hold their usual interest and were lightly dealt in with the exception of Big Missouri, which claimed more than 141,000 shares of the total transactions. The issue sold down from 176 to 148, but towards noon staged a partial rally to 155 for a net loss of 6 cents. Hudson Bay was 15 cents higher at 20.25 and Pend Oreille 25 at 13.00.

Vipond Consolidated and Dunkin were in demand, the former advancing 9 points to 115, and the latter 1½ to 26½. Sudbury Basin, in a fair turnover, rose 15c to 8.90, while Howey Gold firmed one point higher at 1.16.

Malartic and Siscoe were sold freely, Malartic easing off 2 points to 1.01 and Siscoe 5 to 1.15. Grandview was represented in heavy trading and held firm at 1.16, unchanged.

President Announces Application For Charter

LONDON, Jan. 17. — (Canadian Press.) — Speaking at the annual meeting of Barclay's Bank, Limited, to-day, W. G. Goodenough, the chairman, said the shareholders would probably have seen the announcement that application was being made for a charter to conduct business in Canada. It had been felt for some time that in order to protect their old established interests in the West Indies it was advisable to arrange direct representation in Canada, he continued. This step appeared specially necessary in view of the steadily increasing trade between Canada and the West Indies.

Application is to be made for a charter at the coming session of Parliament at Ottawa. The bank, which recently reported a profitable year's opeartions, has for some time been represented in Montreal by a subsidiary company with very limited facilities.

HIGH GRADE ORE PAYS $100 TON

Development at Sudbury Mines Proving Sensation For Past Four Weeks.

WIDTHS INCREASE.

COBALT, Ont., Jan. 17.—(Special to Examiner). —Developments at Sudbury of the past four weeks have been nothing short of sensational, tells the Northern Miner to-day. Mond Frood Diamond drill indications of very high grade ore at depth, with sections running over $100 a ton are being borne out by actual development results.

Instead of 60 foot ore widths, Mond has found at its 2,800 foot level width up to 180 feet and at the 3,100 the richer level in copper and precious metals, width up to 100 feet. Last month Mond mined 7,500 tons in Frood development work at those two levels which produced $400,000 in the smelter. This figures out an average of over $50 a ton. The recent statement of John Agnew, vice president and general manager of International, that Mond rich findings in its part of the Frood at the 2,800 and 3,100 feet levels checked with International drilling indications in the same body is also being born out.

Already International has proved a width of 100 feet of high grade at the 1,200 foot level. But more important has been the finding of subsidiary and previously unknown ore in crosscuts at the 1,600, 2,000, 2,400 and 2,800 foot levels. The ore is high grade on all levels and a 20 foot width already shown at the 2,800 foot level equals in richness anything yet found in the Sudbury district. It would appear to run well over $100 a ton. This subsidiary body, which is entirely new, was encountered at points 100 feet and more before the cutting of the main orebody was expected. It is not improbable that tonnage in International's Frood body in the high grade and deeper horizons will be nearly doubled.

Production Advances

Demand for Nickle is keeping International and Mond plants at capacity. The program of production expansion is going ahead.

Last month was easily a record for the International Nickle Company. The refinery at Port Colbourne produced six and a half million pounds of nickle. The company also turned out 4,500,000 pounds of copper. This is a little more than one part copper to two parts nickle.

Some time in 1931 the full benefit of Frood and its higher copper content will be had. With the completion of the new smelter to handle Frood ores there will be a change in the situation and an output of precious metals will also be considerable, with silver the most important by-product, followed in value by the platinum group of metals and gold.

Of course the rough estimate given above does not include Mond operations and production. When the merger is completed, and it seems to be pretty well assumed in official circles of both companies that there will be no hitch in the matter, Mond Mining and Smelting operations will continue as at present.

OTTAWA COMPANY EXPECTS TO SHOW FURTHER EXPANSION

Annual Report of Board of Directors of Brading's Breweries.

ADDS TO PLANT.

OTTAWA, Jan. 17.—In presenting the annual report of the board of directors of Brading Breweries, the president, Lieut.-Colonel Plunkett B. Taylor, stated that the sales during the past year have been the largest since the founding of the company 63 years ago, and have been more than 30 per cent. better than in the previous year. It is expected that during the coming year the business will show a further material increase.

During the past year the company has added a new three-story fireproof stock cellar for the housing of an additional battery of huge vats for the ageing of ale, and also a new hop storage and barrel filling and storing cellar. The brewing plant has also been enlarged, new refrigerating plant installed, and the bottling capacity substantially increased.

The demand for the products of this old-established company is increasing at such a rate that the directors are considering the erection of a new bottling plant and still further additional storage to take care of the increase expected during the coming year.

The president also announced that in response to general public demand the company would shortly place on the market a genuine Hop Ale and the sales for this new product are expected to materially increase the profits of the company.

The sales in Montreal and Eastern Quebec are steadily increasing in volume. Owing to the widespread distribution of the company's products, the public demand can now be satisfied in any part of the Provinces of Ontario or Quebec, and in these days of motor car travel this policy is proving of distinct benefit to the shareholders.

The gross profits for the year amounted to	$ 74,456.59
Total assets are now	555,647.59
Current assets	182,595.77
Current liabilities	41,634.83
Leaving net working capital at	140,960.94
The net surplus is	62,662.76

The capital stock of the company now consists of $100,000.00 of Preference stock, and 22,000 shares common stock without par value.

The common stock is listed on the Montreal Stock Exchange.

It was announced that a common dividend of 50c per share had been declared on the common stock of the company, payable on the 1st February, 1929, to shareholders of record on the 15th January, 1929.

POPULAR ISSUES ESTABISH NEW HIGH RECORDS

Speculators For Advance Control Price Movement On New York Curb.

CALL MONEY DOWN.

Trading Restricted By Prospect of Increase in Federal Reserve Brokers' Loans.

NEW YORK, N.Y., Jan. 17. — (Canadian Press).— Speculators for the advance assumed control of the movement in to-day's stock market, bringing forward new leaders in the steel, rail, copper and motor groups. Scores of issues were marked up 2 to nearly 18 points, with new high records established by such popular shares as U. S. Steel Common, Chile Copper and Electric Auto Lite.

The strong resistance shown by the market leaders around the low prices of December, coupled with easier credit conditions, helped to revive bullish confidence, and led to active short covering. Call money renewed at 8 per cent. and dropped to 7 as the midmonth payments flowed back to the banks. The prospect of an increase in Federal Reserve brokers' loans tended to restrict the volume of trading.

Metal Shares Change Hands

Non-Ferrous metal shares changed hands in large volume at advancing prices. Chile Copper and St. Joseph Lead each running up more than 7 points to new high levels at 83¾ and 78, respectively. Greene Cananea Copper, Calumet and Arizona Cerro De Pasco and Howe Sound sold 4 or more points above yesterday's final quotations, and Anaconda, Kennecott and several others advanced 2 to 3 points.

U. S. Steel Common ran into some profit-taking after setting a new peak price at 173¾. Radio ran up 17¾ points to 370 and Electric Auto Lite, By-Products Coke, U.S. Realty, General Electric, Parkard Motors, Commercial Solvents, John Manville, People's Gas, New York Central and Curtiss sold 3 to 10 points higher.

Wright Aeronautical ran up more than 4 points to 182½ and then fell back to 177. Allied Chemical fell back 3 points and Eisenlohr Western Union, International Telephone, Otis Elevator and American Sugar Refining sold down 2 points or more.

NEW BRANCH MANAGER

The North American Life wishes to announce the appointment of J. S. Thomson as Branch Manager of its Toronto Agency. Mr. Thomson has for some years been connected with the Travelers Life and, prior to joining the North American Life, was their Assistant Manager at Toronto. He succeeds O. B. Shortly, who was recently made Manager of the Group Department.

NICKEL LEADS TORONTO CURB

Prominent Issues Register Early Gains in Active Issue.

COCKSHUTT PLOW UP.

TORONTO, Ont., Jan. 17 (Canadian Press).—With International Nickel heading the list, trading on the Toronto Stock Exchange to-day was fairly active and a definite upward trend in the case of the recent leaders was established. Although there was the usual minor trading scattered throughout the list, the bulk was confined to the leading performers, with totals that were more than ordinary. International Nickel was dealt in to the extent of more than 20,000 shares and after selling between 56¾ to 58, steadied at 57, unchanged.

Canadian Car recovered from its downward movement and firmed 3 points higher at 142. Cockshutt Plow, in heavy trading, registered a further gain of 3 points to 49. Canadian Canners continued to move into higher ground and at noon was up 3 points to 25. Riverside Mills at 35. Photo Engravers at 44, and Canadian Dredge at 71, were all up two points. McKinnon Industries suffered the heaviest loss of the morning session, dropping down to 65 for a net loss of 6 points.

Western Canada Flour in slow trading climbed up four point to 41. City Dairy and Easy Washers were up one point at 80, and 39 respectively. Tip-Top Tailors sold strongly between 43 and 44.

Activity in the oil section was limited with Imperial registering the only whole gain, moving one point higher to 99½. Service Station Equipment rose 2¾ points in bright trading, to 71.

RUTH MOURNS DEATH OF WIFE

Simple Funeral Services Held To-day From Wife's Woodworth Home.

MANY FLORAL TRIBUTES.

BOSTON, Mass., Jan. 17 (Canadian Press).—Simple funeral services were held to-day for Mrs. Helen Woodford Ruth, wife of Babe Ruth, who died in a fire in Watertown last Friday.

Ruth sat through the brief services in silence, except when he burst into sobs. Tears streamed down his face when he entered the small parlor in the Woodford home and knelt beside the coffin in which the body of his wife lay.

The Woodford home was crowded with friends and relatives. There were scores of floral tributes, many from friends and associates of the famous baseball player.

Hundreds of people gathered near to the house to see the start of the funeral procession. They were kept several hundred feet from the house by a detail of forty policemen.

The service was read by the Rev. Richard A. Burke, curate of St. Augustine's church. It lasted only ten minutes. After which the funeral cortege to the Old Cavalry Cemetery at Forest Hills started. In the procession Ruth occupied an automobile with John P. Feeney, his counsel, and two friends, Arthur Crowley, son of Police Superintendent Michael H. Crowley, and Thomas McEarney.

The burial service was also brief and was conducted by the Rev. Father Burke.

Nine-year-old Dorothy Ruth was not present at the services, nor was Dr. Edward H. Kinder, dentist, in whose home Mrs. Ruth lost her life.

Biologists and economists apparently agree that an excess of women over men in the population of a country embitters the struggle for existence by lowering wages and increasing competition.

HIGH COUNCIL WILL CHOOSE NEW LEADER

tention. Every member of the Council who choose to do so. Took part in the proceedings.

"Before putting the resolution in any formal way, the President appealed to the members to preserve a clear vision.

"The voting proceeded in quiet solemnity, there was no constraint, every member realizing the momentous issues that were at stake.

Vote In Private.

"The Council had decided that while the voting should take place in private it should be so arranged that names and votes would be available for publication A small office opening out of the Council Chamber was set apart for the purpose of voting as each member, in the order of seniority, responded to the president's call and entered the room, he was given a voting paper. No two persons were at any time in the room together.

"The voting commenced at 9.20 p.m., and finished three minutes pass midnight. At six minutes after midnight the box containing the voting papers was brought to the president's table and the seals were broken.

"The counting was done in the presence of the president, The Council's recorder. The Army's Solicitor and two members of the High Council selected for the purpose. At ten minutes after midnight the president made formal announcement in legal phraseology that "the resolution relating to the adjudication and removal of General William Bramwell Booth had been duly passed by a majority of not less than three in four of the members of the High Council present and voting for 55 for and eight against out of the 63 members present.

"The result was received in an impressive silence and after a tense pause, members of the Council joined in singing two verses from a hymn in the Army song book.

It developed this afternoon that all members of the High Council except a few who were unusually fatigued by yesterday's emotional ordeal, had gone to Sunbury to settle the procedure for the election to-morrow of a new Commander-in-Chief. Among those who remained in London was Evangeline Booth.

Miss Booth and Edward J. Higgins, Chief of Staff, have been mentioned as the outstanding candidates for the generalship, it was thought that if a deadlock arose, either might retire in favor of the other.

Well-informed army circles also predicted to-day that Bramwell Booth would not go to law in an effort to regain his position. It was believed rather that he and his immediate family would eventually acquiesce in the Council's decision.

FOURTEEN MEMBERS HAVE REGISTERED

MAY REDUCE MURDER CHARGE

Edward Harlton May Face a Charge of Manslaughter at London Assizes.

UP TO CROWN ATTORNEY.

LONDON, Ont., Jan. 17.—(Canadian Press).—J. M. Donahue, counsel for Edward Harlton who now faces a murder charge arising out of the death of County Constable John Waddell, has commenced proceedings which may reduce the charge to one of manslaughter. If the charge is reduced, Harlton will plead guilty when he comes up for trial on January 28 his counsel said to-day.

The question of reducing the charge rests entirely with Hon. Hugh Guthrie who will be the special crown prosecutor in the case. He refused to discuss this possibility this morning.

Harlton faced the murder charge last fall but the jury disagreed and the case was laid over until the January assize court.

LAKE LEVELS ARE HIGHER

Department Claims Recovery Is Due to the Greater Rainfall in Past Few Years.

GENERAL INCREASE.

OTTAWA, Ont., Jan. 17 (Canadian Press).—Water levels of the Great Lakes during 1928 averaged six and one-half inches higher than the mean levels of the last ten years, and three and one-half inches lower than the mean levels since 1860. Department of Marine officials state that the recovery in levels of the Great Lakes since the low stage of 1926, has been mainly due to the precipitation of the last few years being above normal for the entire drainage areas. In Montreal Harbor during 1928 the average water level for the full year was the highest in twenty years, and for the season of navigation the highest since 1904.

The annual bulletin of water levels for 1928, issued by the precise water level division of the Canadian Hydrographic Service, will show the following facts:

Lake Superior: Mean level for 1928 was 0.66 feet higher than the average since 1918; 0.24 feet higher than the average since 1860, and was the highest yearly level since 1917.

Lake Huron: Mean level for 1928 was 0.47 feet higher than the average since 1918; 0.98 feet lower than the average since 1860, and was the highest yearly level since 1921.

Lake Erie: Mean level for 1928 was 0.35 feet higher than the average since 1918; 0.50 feet lower than the average since 1860, and was the highest yearly level since 1921.

Lake Ontario: Mean level for 1928 was 0.63 feet higher than the average since 1918; 0.12 feet higher than the average since 1860, and was the highest yearly level since 1919.

SEEK RULING ON MEMORIAL FUND

Imperial Order of Daughters of the Empire Fyle Petition With Legislature.

TORONTO, Ont., January 17 (Canadian Press). — The Imperial Order of Daughters of the Empire have filed with the Ontario Legislature a petition for an Act to define the purposes for which the sum of $463,097 raised by them for war memorial purposes, can be expended. Some of the money has been spent in providing returned soldiers with university educations, and as some doubt has arisen as to the exact powers of the Order the Legislature is being asked to put in concrete form the nature of the work in which the money should be expended. Validation of expenditures to date and an order that accounting only be rendered to the Attorney-General is also sought.

COMMISSION HOLDS INAUGURAL SESSION

Question of Lowering Power Rates in Lindsay Cause of Much Discussion.

LINDSAY, Jan. 17 (Special to The Examiner).—Lindsay's Hydro-Electric Power Commission has held its inaugural session. The report tabled showed that at the end of December, 1928, there was an operating surplus in the bank, with all accounts paid of $16,659.55. The revenue for the preceding ten months had been $83,585.60, and expenditures $65,966.75. It is expected that by March, the end of the first year during which the town has owned the distributing plant, the surplus will be much larger. Already a refund has been received from the Ontario Hydro-Electric Commission of $4,869.65. The Lindsay Commission paid $4,386.38 as the estimated value of the power used. The actual value of power used at end of eight months was $36,518.78, and consequently the difference in the two amounts was refunded. It is believed the annual adjustment next year may bring a request from the Ontario Commission for more money instead of a refund.

The question of lowering the rates is causing much discussion locally. It is only possible to do this, however, with the sanction of the Ontario Hydro Commission. If a decrease in rates is brought about the Ontario Commission names the form this decrease takes.

FARM HOUSE IS RANSACKED

When Farmer Returns He Finds His Hired Man Missing and a Sum of Money.

MAN IS ARRESTED.

(Examiner Staff Correspondence)

CAMPBELLFORD, January 17. — Things were passing strange at his residence when Fred Rutherford returned to his farm after a visit to Campbellford yesterday afternoon. He found that his house had been ransacked and certain money and other articles were missing. Further investigation revealed the fact that Phillip D'Arcy, farm laborer, was also among those absent. It was found that money had been taken from Rutherford and also from the school teacher who boards at the Rutherford farm. Some food stuffs were also not to be found.

At first Rutherford investigated privately, and found that the man had not taken the train from Bonarlaw, although he had traced him along the road toward Allan's Mills. The details as far as were known were given to the local police and through the efforts of the night constable, Duncalfe, the wanted man was located in Havelock shortly before three o'clock this morning.

D'Arcy's description had been telephoned to that town, and when he appeared at the station to buy his railway ticket, the police were ready to receive him. D'Arcy is described as an English youth, about nineteen years of age. He will appear before the magistrate here.

The latest available figures show the annual oil production to be: United States, 758,000,000 barrels; Mexico, 115,000,000; Russia, 52,000,000; Persia, 35,000,000 and Dutch East Indies, 21,500,000.

Tara Hotelkeeper Has Narrow Escape

TARA, Ont., Jan. 17.— (Canadian Press.) — Preparations for winter warmth aided considerably in saving a man's life at Arranvale, last night. John Rudolph, local hotelkeeper, had a narrow escape from possible death when his cutter was demolished by a Canadian National Railway train at a level crossing. Rudolph was thrown a distance of 100 feet, but owing to the depth of the snow and excessive clothing he escaped with slight injuries to the head and face.

FREIGHT RATES ARE REDUCED

Australian Companies Are Making an Effort to Put Wheat Crop on Market.

105 MILLION BUSHELS

SYDNEY, N.S.W., Jan. 17.—(Canadian Press Cable Via Reuters.)—A reduction of 20 per cent. on freight rates on wheat and flour shipped to the United Kingdom, South Africa and Mediterranean ports during the months of January, February and March, was announced by shipping companies to-day.

The shippers at this port are unanimously of the opinion the reductions will greatly benefit Australian wheat growers, and also divert larger shipments to Europe in future, but it is generally felt British ship owners are unwise to raise freight rates to Europe at the beginning of the season, since the increase has resulted in large proportions of the Australian exportable wheat surplus being diverted east, and has prevented healthy competition between the European eastern markets.

According to the present indications, the Australian wheat crop for the season will total from 155,000,000 to 160,000,000 bushels. The exportable surplus on this basis is calculated to be from 105,000,000 to 110,000,000 bushels.

FOREIGNERS FLEE FROM HORDURAS

Revolution Is Expected—Political Parties Are Dissatisfied.

NEW ORLEANS, La., Jan. 17.—(Canadan Press.)—Isaac Lehman, representative of a New York cotton goods manufacturer, arrived here on Tuesday with a report that United States' citizens and other foreigners were feeling Spanish Honduras in expectation of a revolution.

"The United States' cruiser Denver is lying off the coast of Honduras now," Mr. Lehman said. "I am going to Washington to-night to ask the State Department to have neutral zones created so that United States business and U. S. lives will not suffer.

"Already merchants in Tela, La Cieba, San Pedro Sula and Puerto Cortez are feeling the threat of war. People are buying less, credit is getting tight and there is a tension in the minds of people.

"The trouble seems to lie in the fact that the Conservative political party is not satisfied with the Liberal president, who will be inaugurated Feb. 1. The United States' government has recognized this executive but the Conservatives claim the election was unfair."

Mr. Lehman, who arrived here by boat, said 51 refugees came out of Honduras on the steamship Castilla and landed at Port Barrios, Guatemala.

WILL RESTORE GAELIC BARDS

Irish Renaissance Discussed By Lennox Robinson in Toronto.

SPIRIT REVIVED.

TORONTO, Ont., Jan. 17 (Canadian Press.)—That there is at least one nation in the world that realizes the heart and soul of a nation depend upon its literature, and that Ireland, through the medium of her poets, dramatists and playwrights has not only achieved her nationhood but has regained her ancient position as the Athens of Europe, was revealed at the third lecture of a series on Irish literature given at the University of Toronto Tuesday night by Lennox Robinson, Irish poet and playwright and director of the famous Abbey Theatre in Dublin.

Mr. Robinson was preceded a year ago by the famous Irish mystic poet and practical economist, George Russell, better known by his pen name, "Ae," and like "Ae" Mr. Robinson chose as his subject Anglo-Irish poetry. Mr. Robinson traced the development of Irish poetry from the days when every Gaelic bard was the pride of his community down to the present. He showed how these men after the conquest of Ireland had degenerated from scholars and poets to mere wandering singers. After a period of 500 years the spirit of poetry which had been so thoroughly inculcated into the Irish character by their old poets was revived and once more poetry became a part of Irish life.

In three quarters of the homes of Irish peasants, Mr. Robinson said, if there are three books in the house, one of them will be Moore's "Irish Memories." From peer to peasant every part of Irish society has been affected by the music of Moore's poetry.

Age 5. After Virol.

Age 19. Showing permanent effect of Virol.

TO-DAY!

IT is not so easy to be passed for the Army in peace time. Out of every five recruits in 1924, four were rejected as unfit—yet Cyril Colston, who at the age of 5 was in the extreme state of emaciation shown above, passed this severe medical examination, thanks to Virol. "Once a hopeless case," his life was saved by Virol, and his health and strength built up by taking Virol regularly during childhood and adolescence. Read medical evidence below.

VIROL builds up for LIFE

Extract from Doctor's Report, 3rd January, 1925.

"... I am fully satisfied that Virol was the factor which enabled him as a child, not only to turn the corner successfully in a very serious illness, but, in subsequent years of development (during which he never ceased to take Virol), enabled him to build up a healthy body and gave him reserves of power and energy. His parents describe the result as nothing less than a miracle."

PASTOR GIVES TALK AT W.M.S. MEETING

Campbellford Church Society Observes Common Day of Prayer.

CAMPBELLFORD, Jan. 17 (Examiner Staff Correspondence).:—Members of the Woman's Missionary Society of St. Andrew's Presbyterian Church followed the suggestion of the provincial organization at their January meeting, which had selected that day as a day of common prayer throughout the province by the various societies in the Presbyterian churches engaged in missionary work. In the absence of the president, who is ill, Mrs. A. C. Connor presided at the meeting. The program as outlined in "Glad Tidings," the official publication of the society, was followed closely.

The Rev. W. J. Mark addressed the meeting on "Stewardship within the Kingdom." The subject lifted from the Old to the New Ttestament and had Christ as an ideal example. Before proceeding with his address, Mr. Mark thought it advisable to define the word "stewardship." This, he claimed, was a trust. The worldly goods which we possessed, were not our own. But we had been trusted with their disbursement. Regardless of our mode of life, our gifts of service could be disbursed in their own peculiar and effective way so as to promote the interests of the Kingdom. If we could come to understand Christ and see things with His eyes, our lives would be less restrained and our service become spontaneous. We should be in no way bound by the law in the exercise of these privileges, because Christ gave no law. Nor did he abrogate the law as it stood. He came not to destroy the law, but to fulfill it. He said nothing about giving a tenth or any set portion of our possessions, merely that more was needed if the world was to be redeemed. He, Himself, gave everything, even Himself.

A certain distinguished gentleman with a fine sense of humor had said that the members of the churches could be divided into three classes—the flint, the sponge, and the honeycomb. Hammering was required to get results from the flint and pressure from the sponge. But the honeycomb was overflowing with sweetness. In support of this claim, Mr. Mark said that he had made an appeal from the pulpit of this church recently and had upon advice, used a little pressure with profit. All he had needed to do was give out the information and the response had been most generous. He quoted the response which a poor woman of Victoria had made to an appeal for church funds. She was a washerwoman and when her donation was brought in the clergyman had been slow to accept it since he was aware of the circumstances of the woman. When she refused to have it returned and the envelope container was opened, there was one hundred dollars in it, earned by hard work and long hours.

"Rich gifts wax poor when givers prove unkind," quoted Mr. Mark. In the performance of our duty in the church, we may give the last cent we have to the treasurer. But if we are lacking in the weightier matters—judgment, mercy and faith, we fail. On the other hand, if we are richly endowed with the Chritsian graces; if we are kind-hearted and affectionate one toward the other, we may give gifts, and be they ever so small, like the widow's mite, they will be acceptable to Christ. "For God loveth a cheerful giver."

The meeting was opened and closed with devotional exercises. Before the Benediction was pronounced the members stood in silent prayer in honor of the late Mrs. William Hume, who death occurred exactly one year ago. She was a former president of the society for several years.

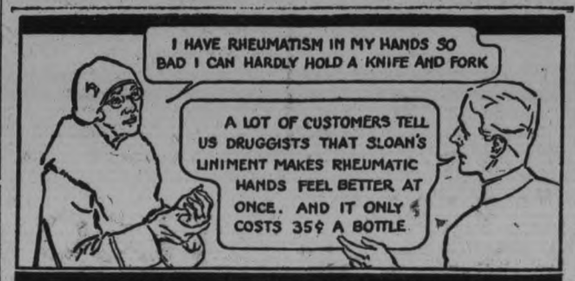
LIBERALS PLAN CAUCUS

TORONTO, Ont., Jan. 16.—(Canadian Press).—Liberal members of the Ontario Legislature will meet Thursday and Friday for a pre-session caucus to discuss the legislative program. The party's standing in the House will be unchanged since last session.



GENERAL IS JUDGED UNFIT

weeping, especially the aged members who had worked long years with the General. Commander Eva broke into deep sobs as she signed the adjudication resoltion. As each member's name was called by the president of the Council, he or she stepped to the desk and signed the document which voted the General unfit to continue office. It was not made known what the word unfitness was intended to denote.

The Council adjourned after its vote until Friday. The members dispersed silently. Commander Eva motored to London, but the other members of the Booth family stayed here for the night.

LONDON, Jan. 17. —(Canadian Press).—General Bramwell Booth is quoted in to-day's Mail as telling its reporter yesterday a few hours before the High Council judged him unfit for his office that, "I haven't much money but I will spend what I have in defending my position."

Interviewed at Sick Bed

The interview was said to have taken place at the sick bed in the Southwold Cottage. The head of the Salvation Army was further quoted as saying, "Nothing will induce me to retire from the position I occupy. Mine was, and is a sacred trust imposed on me by my father and it is not for me to lay it down. I should be a coward—worse than a coward, a skunk—if I did so because there is a bit of a rumpus and I won't. I will resist by every means in my power every attempt to deprive me of this trust."

The Sunbury correspondent of The Herald says that the interpretation of the word "unfitness" developed considerable heat in the session of the High Council of the Salvation Army last night.

Some members of the delegation that visited General Booth at Southwold were quoted as expressing the opinion that he was "mentally unstable." This widened the breach between the opposing sections. It recalled that the two physicians who reported on the condition of the General on January 7, declared there never had been any question of mental incapacity and that his intellect was unimpaired.

Succeeded Father.

General William Bramwell Booth succeeded his father, General William Booth, the founder of the Army, on his death in 1912. He had become an officer in 1874, and from 1880 until he was made General he was Chief-of-Staff.

He became ill last spring and was ordered to rest, although his condition did not become serious until some months later. The High Council of the Army had been in nominal existence for 24 years, but had never been called. On November 15 it was summoned for the meeting now in session.

The Council was called not only to decide the question of leadership but also to consider general reforms in the organization of the Army. Its first move for the removal of General Bramwell Booth was to send a deputation to his Southwold cottage to request his resignation.

The General took several days to consider and then in a secret memorandum refused, adding that the Council had no power to remove him for any cause other than a spiritual one, and contending that the present action was based solely on his physical condition. He said that he had been given reason to hope that he might be restored to complete health.

Commander Evangeline Booth, head of the Army in the United States, who had previously refused to obey an order of her brother transferring her from that field, was a leader in seeking his retirement.

The Army has hiterto been led and conrtolled almost exclusively by the Booth family. It had been thought that if things took a normal course the General might name his wife or his daughter, Commissioner Catherine, as his successor after his death.

From the statement issued to the press, last night, by General Booth and from other sources, it was gathered that a court battle might be expected before the General would relinquish his office at the command of the Council.

MRS. MARGARET GIRVEN

The death occurred at the home of her son, 367 Mark street, on Wednesday night, of Margaret Girven, aged 83 years, a resident of Lakefield for many years, and a life-long member of the United Church.

She leaves to mourn the loss of a kind and loving mother, three daughters and two sons.

Her husband predeceased her forty years ago.

The funeral will take place from the residence of her son, 367 Mark street, at 2 p.m., Saturday, Jan. 19, and proceed to the Lakefield Cemetery for interment.

BIG CONTEST IS EXPECTED

field for the wardenship, according to his own statement in December. He has been thoroughly schooled in the county's affairs and has exhibited a grasp of the details of municipal business that should equip him for the position.

Parker Returned

The re-election of Gordon Parker in Alnwick township was more or less a surprise because of his expressed anticipations of defeat. It was he who persisted in urging the Council to sit for a group photograph at the close of the December sessions.

"I'd certainly like to have a souvenir of this Council" he said; "I may not be back next year, but I'd like to have a picture of the Council. There are some others who think they are coming back, but they ain't. They ought to have a picture too. That's all they'll have left."

Parker defeated John Drope in a close fight, apparently possessing more strength in his township than he estimated.

Herb. Nelson's victory in Percy township's three-cornered contest was evidence that he is maintaining his position to which he succeeded upon the retirement of ex-Warden John McCubbin. His success eliminated J. A. Sykes, who as deputy-reeve, disclosed a thoughtful and serious interest in the business of his township and the united counties. C. H. Curtis is Percy township's new deputy. The Warkworth representation in the Counties Council will probably be as interesting as ever this year.

Seymour township's two seats will seem rather strange with both William Grills and Russell Peake missing. Deputy-reeve Peake died a short time ago and Reeve Grills was defeated by George Vanvolkenburg, who is no stranger to the counties' council.

Manvers Loses Deputy

Manver's township's population has fallen below the limit that allows for a deputy-reeve, and the municipality this year will be represented only by Reeve Gray. This means one member less in the Counties Counil, and is a further indication of the steady decrease in the number of rural citizens of this province. When the number of Manvers ratepayers dropped below one thousand, the township had to forego its deputy, and last year's count by the assessor provided the information as to the loss in the number of property owners.

concession opposite lots eight and nine was laid on the table for the present. The clerk was instructed to write the Minister of Public Highways regarding the change in the road superintendent and also to Thomas Southworth advising him that his dog had been killing sheep and requesting that the sheep be paid for and the dog destroyed. The clerk was also instructed to call for tenders for 4000 feet of cedar covering, flatted on two sides, five inches thick, straightened on edges and 18 feet long. There are also required twelve pieces, round, not less than ten inches at the top and sixteen feet in length. The tenders are to close at noon on the second day of February. Before the council adjourned, accounts to the amount of $2330.70 were passed.

(Examiner Correspondence)

HAVELOCK, Jan. 17.—At the regular meeting of Prosperity Chapter, No. 63, O.E.S., on Thursday evening, the following officers for 1929 were installed by Associate Grand Conductress Sister Boyd of Grand Chapter and Sister Taylor, P.D.D.G.M., and Bro. Boyd, P.P., of Belleville:

Buchanan; Organist, S. Johnson; Adah, B. Tripp; Ruth, A. Stapley; Esther, S. Butters; Martha, H. Mathison; Electra, J. Green.

Following the installation a banquet was enjoyed by the members and their friends.

Schools Re-open.

The Havelock Continuation and Public Schools, which have been closed since the Christmas holidays, owing to the epidemic of influenza and colds in the village, re-opened Monday morning with about seventy-five per cent. of the pupils in attendance and all the teaching staff, with the exception of Principal Coates of the Continuation School, who was expected to arrive from his home in Seaforth on Monday evening.

Wins Range.

J. W. Holcombe, local agent for the Renfrew Machinery Co., Ltd., was successful in winning a Renfrew Cook-Rite Range as an award in a special selling competition for December. This competition was participated in by all the agents of the company in the Dominion, Mr. Holcombe being one of the seventy-eight agents to win a prize.

Personals.

Mr. and Mrs. Jack Thurston, of Smith Falls, were the recent guests of the latter's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Wesley Stillman. On their return they were accompanied by Mrs. Thurston's sister, Miss Annie Stillman, who will attend Business College in Smith Falls.

PLANNING DANCE.

Roseneath Young People Will Hold Social Evening On Friday.

(Examiner Correspondence)

ROSENEATH, Jan. 17.—To break the monotony of the winter evenings, the young people are giving a dance on Friday evening, January 19. This is expected to be the best ever held in the Orange Hall. Now that the hall has been remodelled with an excellent floor for dancing, a large crowd is anticipated. Music will be furnished from Peterborough by D. Sproule and his "Lucky Five," who are noted for their talent with the very newest dance music.

Rink Being Made.

The young people have been working hard making a skating rink and expect by the end of another week it will be ideal for skating. The huge agricultural building has taken more water for flooding than the boys were aware of, but nevertheless they have pulled together, and with a few frosty nights they will succeed in having the sport they have been working for.

3 Glasses Water Help Constipation

One glass of water is not enough—take three glasses one hour before breakfast. Much better results are obtained by adding a teaspoon of simple glycerin, saline compound (known as Adlerika) to each glass. Adlerika acts on BOTH upper and lower bowel and removes old waste matter you never thought was in your system. Stops gas and sour stomach in TEN minutes! Relieves constipation in two hours. Bridgenorth

(Examiner Correspondence)

BRIDGENORTH, Jan. 17.—At the meeting of the Gilmour Memorial Baptist Mission Band held in the basement of the church on Sunday, Mrs. James Young gave a very interesting address on "The Customs of the People and Progress of Christianity in India." Interesting letters were read by Mrs. Proudlove and Mrs. Young from Miss Baskerville, of India, and Miss Robison, of India. The latter's letter gave an interesting report of the Tuni flood.

The members of the Mission Band have decided to give two scholarships to Miss Pratt's school in India, these to be in memory of Francis Moore, who died about a year ago.

Personals.

Miss Marion Storey has returned to her home in East Emily after spending the past two weeks with relatives in Smith.

Mrs. Harry Bothwell and children have returned home to Springville, after visiting the former's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Archer.

Mrs. Harold Archer, of Smith, has returned home after spending a few days with her aunt, Miss Grant, who has been ill with the flu. Miss Grant's many friends will be pleased to learn that she is able to be up.

Federal foresters suggest that in a short time stringent measures may be necessary to curb the increase in fortst fires caused by smokers and campers.

'UMPTEEN' DOESN'T LIKE ALL BOUQUETS TO GO TO SWEET SIXTEEN

MARION'S MAIL

Address correspondence to Marion at The Examiner Office.

"Dear Marion,

I hope, gracious lady, that you will forgive me for not writing sooner in answer to your delightful little note. I have been SO busy, what with flu, and visitors (no, I am not purposely classing them together!) and Christmas, that I really haven't had time to do anything but the necessary housework.

I have, however, followed your articles, and I have read most of the neighbors' letters; this was my only relaxation, usually taken when I had the family tucked in snugly for the night, and could stretch my wearied limbs under the coverlets. A bedside lamp is such a temptation to read after hours!

Just before Christmas I had in mind to write in answer to something written by one of our neighbors, who eulogized the girl of sweet sixteen. It's still in my mind, so here goes, with your kind permission. I'm tired of hearing and reading about this wonderful girl. Poets have sung all through the ages about the beauty that belongs only to 'Sweet Sixteen.' She seems to have been an inspiration to everybody, in her 'wistful beauty,' and is described by one poet as 'Standing with reluctant feet where the brook and river meet.'

I admire the 'teen-age girl as much as any mother of one can, but I think a lot of drivel is written about her. There are as many phases of this 'Sweet Sixteen' as there are girls in the world. Once we pictured her as something so childlike that it was a shame to introduce her to the harshness of the world. She had curls hanging down her back, and there was no rouge or powder or lipstick to mar the natural loveliness of her girlish appeal. But I wonder!

'Sweet Sixteen' of nowadays is as smartly gotten-up and sophisticated as her grandmother; more so, in fact, for she does and says what grandmother never would have dared say, and mother scarcely ever! She dresses in a manner that would have scandalized some of her not very remote ancestors—and as for make-up! It's hard to know what she really does look like beneath the mask of rouge and powrer and shaded eyes.

Some say she's lots of things that I know she isn't. She is simply following the dictate of fashion, as sixteen ever did, and way down in her heart there's as much sweetness, and as much innocence, as any girl in the seventeenth century ever had.

But my argument begins here. I've admitted everything that's nice, and now I just wish to say I don't believe that girl has any monopoly of the world's charm. I'm far past the age where I desire or crave admiring glances, but I know that a few years ago I was just as comely as any miss of 'Sweet Sixteen'—and I wasn't anywhere near that age! It is foolish, considering the varied nature of girls of sixteen, to pick on that age to personify all that's gracious and loveable and maidenly. And it is equally foolish to present sixteen with all the praise that should be spread over all women, however far they may be removed from that idealistic age.

Now, what do you think of t at for having been bottled up so long? I must apologize, really, Marion, for taking up so much time, but I had to get this off my mind. Maybe I'll write a more pleasant letter next time.

Yours sincerely,
UMPTEEN."

I liked reading your letter, "Umpteen," and I will be looking forward with interest to reading what other neighbors have to say on the subject. Anyhow, write soon again, because your letter is really interesting.

"My Dear Marion,

I would like to thank you for your Whatnot in Saturday's paper. Gee, Marion, you sure have a wonderful expanse of genuine understanding of the married woman's desire. I sure am happy to know that someone as broad minded as you are will back us married women and believe me we need your backing, too. You see, Marion, I have been married quite a few years and I know whereof I speak, especially regarding men. My man is a pretty good sort. Of course, there's lots of his ways that could be improved and I am trying to do it. It's no easy job, I can tell you. No doubt he sees many faults in me as well. Oh yes, he does and we sometimes come to attention and review our faults of each other and it sure is amusing while it is serious as well. I suppose a we go on in married life and get more knocks (and we have had a few already) we will more fully realize what we mean to each other and our true value to this world we were born into. We both had real comfortable homes, Marion, before we were married, but there's nothing can compare with our little five-roomed cottage we're entitled to call home now. Go out when we like and come in when we like, and that's our business. Some of our neighboors think it is theirs I think, but we should worry. You see, Marion, we are young enough to love a good time, we take in the shows and dances, etc., and I can tell by the attitude and some of the sly remarks, they don't think much of our 'gadding,' as they call it. I truly believe that it is mostly jealousy that makes them act towards me the way they do. They are jealous of the good times we have.

I expect I am considered quite 'highfly' as I've heard the older women express it. I'll tell you why, Marion, and please, will you judge me and let me know if you think I am going beyond the limit? I'd love to have your honest-to-goodness opinion on it. We have a wee lad four years old and I am and have always been real squirmish about a stranger looking after him in our absence. I expect sonny boy is no worse than any ordinary four-year-old youngster, but he is a bit headstrong, and we are to blame for spoiling him, but we love him so, Marion, and he is really a dear wee soul. Well I just can't bring myself to leave someone here with him and another very good reason is it costs money to hire anyone dependable to come in, so by the time we hire someone in we felt we could trust and then the ..o of us go somewhere, well we sure would have dipped into our budget pretty far, wouldn't we? Up until now, Marion, we have gone places and taken sonny boy along, but I know that we are doing him harm keeping him up so late and taking him out into the night air.

Now we have hit on a nother splendid plan we think, 'Joe' and I. He goes out one night alone and I stay home and keep the home fires burning and have sonny in his bed (when he should be) before nine o'clock and when hubby gets back we have toast and tea or some nice little snack like fish and chips or some nice cakes and coffee, and listen, Marion, it's all right, I like the idea. Then comes my night out alone, and I sure can put in a large evening just as you suggest and oh boy, it sure is good. I love to skate and that's what I do on my night out and I sure do enjoy it. I tell 'Joe' I do not feel a bit older than the rest of 'the young fry' as my dad calls the young girls and boys of to-day. I can get a real kick out of the things they talk about.

I intend to skate and dance and bowl and swim and do all the things I did before I was married just as long as I have health and strength to do them and I believe I will not feel old then even when I really am old, eh, Marion?

If I don't skate on my night out I go and bowl a couple of games and gee it sure does keep one fit. But Marion you'd laugh to see the disgusted look on the older people. Maybe they think I should just do my housework and go to bed when the clock strikes nine.

Say listen, I can keep my house as nice as any of them and can bake and cook and keep sonny boy clean and happy and his daddy as well, but I know I would not be able to if I could not have some recreation. I'm often real tired when the dishes are done and put away, but I can get fussed up and go out and have a real good time and we're only young once, but just the same. I'm never too tired to pep it up and have a good time then I simply refuse to get old. 'Joe' and I are going to a dance next week because dad is going to stay with sonny boy and, of course, I can trust him, but then he can't be coming all the time, eh Marion? We're going to step right out that night. Gee won't it be married life is the berries. "Oh, just wonderful? I think that it's just what one makes it," Moheart. She's a wonderful Mother, ther says and she knows, bless her Marion. She tells us to go ahead later on we may not feel as strong and have a good time now because or have the same desire for that kind of amusements. Maybe then, Marion, I'll be able to do fancy work but I swear I cannot get interested in it now. I have to get my feet in action as well as my hands when I do anything.

I often think if some of the married women did take more fun out of life and get out and do things they would be healthier. They would look prettier and their men would think more of them, too. Oh I know men and how they talk about women. My own rooster is no exception to the rule. I know this much that I get just as much thanks and more from him than if I stayed in and did fancy work and the rest of that humkum men pretend they love to see their wives do. After all, men would like us to stay home in preference to going out but when they see we've got some pep left and a mind of our own still, you'll hear every last one of them pipe out: "Go ahead, dear, and have a good time" and after we do it a few times they believe we mean it then and so do they.

I'm not afraid to bet that 'Joe' finds me twice as interesting after I have been out for a good time that way. Why? That's a foolish question; because we've seen something, met people, and get their ideas and opinions heard and the latest song hits and oh been somewhere and get all that. We certainly would not, could not be that way if we stick home all the time.

Men are so darned selfish. The older ones especially. Thank Heaven we younger ones are stepping out and showing our 'beloved' we're not putty or anything so soft, and that we love life and fun just as much as they do. They would put it all over us like a tent if they could.

I love my man and sonny boy just as much as any woman does love, but I refuse to be slave to any man and my man doesn't ask it. He knows better, and loves me the better for it.

If the wife does not try to keep young, Marion, the man can not be blamed for taking those hateful sly glances at the ones who do, or the young girls who have pep. After all, that and our looks is what attracted our men in the first place, isn't it? And men are only boys grown up tall. Their hearts don't change much after all. Gee but that's true.

You're a real good scout, Marion, and I give three good cheers for you. Love and good luck to you, Marion.

HIGH FLYER."

You are certainly enthusiastic, "High Flyer," and I am glad to have your letter. You combine your good time with sound common sense, not neglecting the necessary household tasks to "step out."

Your letter is a good endorsement of my plan. Come again.

"Dear Marion,

As an interested reader of your daily columns I wish to say I never fully realized the splendid work our women's organizations were accomplishing until I began to read your page. I am sure this page is worth a great deal in bringing to light the splendid work of our ladies' organizations.

Too often such organizations are are looked upon as worthless by we men creatures and I merely wish to voice my sentiments toward your page in The Examiner and the Women's Organizations of our district. I have been convinced that their work is indeed a worthy one.

Good luck.

A WELL WISHER."

Thank you very much, "Well Wisher," for your appreciation.

DAILY READING

A FEW MINUTES A DAY WITH THE BEST OF THE WORLD'S AUTHORS CONDUCTED BY THE NEIGHBORS AND MARION

JANUARY 17, 1929

Too often we regard the great names of old with an awe that prevents our reading the men's works. We are learning, through this column, that not only are they not fearsome but they are often attractive and entertaining. To-day's selection is from the Maxims of Epictetus, the Stoic philosopher. He was born at Hierapolis about 50 A.D., a slave, and upon being manumitted took up the study of philosophy. This extract is entitled, "Know Thyself."—M.

If a man have any advantage over others, or think himself to have it when he hath it not, it cannot but be that if he is an untaught man he shall be puffed up by it. Thus the tyrant says, I am he that is master of all. And what can you give me? Can you set my pursuit free of all hindrance? How is it in you to do that? For have you the gift of never falling into what you shun? Or never missing the mark of your desire? And whence have you it? Come, now, in a ship do you trust to yourself or to the captain, or in a chariot, to any one else than the driver? And how will you do with regard to other acts? Even thus. Where, then, is your power?

All men minister to me. And do I not minister to my plate, and I wash it and wipe it, and drive in a peg for my oil flask? What then, are these things greater than I? Nay, but they supply certain of my needs, and for this reason I take care of them. Yes, and do I not minister to my ass? Do I not wash his feet and groom him? Know you not that every man ministers to himself? And he ministers to you also, even as he doth to the ass. For who treats you as a man? Show me one that doth. Who wisheth to be like unto you? who becomes your imitator, as men did of Socrates? But I can cut off thy head. You say well. I had forgotten that I must pay regard to you as to a fever or the cholera; and set up an altar to you, as there is in Rome an altar to Fever.

What is it, then, whereby the multitude is troubled and terrified? The tyrant and his guards? Never—God forbid it. It is not possible that that which is by nature free should be troubled by any other thing, or hindered, save by itself. But it is troubled by opinion of things. For when the tyrant saith to any one, I will bind thy leg, then he who setteth store by his leg saith, 'Nay, have pity!' but he that setteth store by his own Will, 'if it seem more profitable to my kitchen pot.

—"Dost thou not regard me?"

I do not regard you. I will show you that I am master. How can you be that? He hath God set free; or think you that he would let his own son be enslaved? You are lord of my dead body—take that.

—"So when thou comest near to me, thou will not do me service?"

Nay, but I will do it to myself; and if you will have me say that I do it to you also, I tell you that I do it as to my kitchen pet.

This is no selfishness; for every living creature is so made that it doth all things for its own sake. For the sun doth all things for his own sake, and so, moreover, even Zeus himself. But when He will be Raingiver and Fruitgiver and Father of Gods and men, thou seest that He may not do these works and have these titles, but He be serviceable to the common good. And, on the whole, He hath so formed the nature of the reasoning creature that he may never win aught of his own good without he furnish something of service to the common good. Thus it is not to the excluding of the common good that a man do all things for himself. For it is to be expected that a man shall stand aloof from himself and his own interest? And where then would be that same and single principle which we observe in all things, their affection to themselves?

So, then, when we act on strange and foolish opinion of things, beyond the Will, as though they were good or evil, it is altogether impossible but we shall do service to tyrants. And would it were to the tyrants alone, and not to their lackeys also!

But what hinders the man that hath distinguished these things to live easily and docile, looking calmly on all that is to be, and bearing calmly all that is past? Will you have me bear poverty? Come, and see what poverty is when it strikes one that knoweth how to play the part well. Will you have me rule? Give me power, then, and the pains of it. Banishment? Whithersoever I go, it shall be well with me; for in this place it was well with me, not because of the place, but because of the opinions which I shall carry away with me. For these no man can deprive me of. Yea, these only are mine own, whereof I cannot be deprived, and they suffice for me as long as I have them, wherever I be, or whatever I do.

—"But now is the time come to die."

What say you? To die? Nay, make no tragedy of the business, but tell it as it is. Now is it time for my substance to be resolved again into the things wherefrom it came together. And what is dreadful in this? What of the things in the universe is about to perish? What new, or what unaccountable thing is about to come to pass? Is it for these things that a tyrant is feared? through these that the guards seem to bear swords so large and sharp? Tell that to others; but by me all these things have been examined; no man hath power on me. I have been set free by God, I know His commandments, henceforth no man can lead me captive. I have a liberator such as I need, and judges such as I need. Are you not the master of my body? What is that to me? Of my property? What is that to me? Of exile or captivity? Again I say, from all these things, and the poor body itself, I will depart when you will. Try your power, and you shall know how far it reaches.

But the tyrant will bind—what? The leg. He will take away—what? the head. What, then, can he not bind and not take away? The Will. And hence that precept of the ancients—Know Thyself.

Whom, then, can I still fear? The lackeys of the bedchamber? For what that they can do? Shut me out? Let them shut me out, if they find me wishing to go in.

—"Why, then, didst thou go to the doors?"

Because I hold it proper to join the play while the play lasts.

—"How, then, shalt thou not be shut out?"

Because if I am not received, I do not wish to enter; but always that which happens is what I wish. For I hold what God wills above what I will. I cleave to Him as His servant and follower; my impulses are one with Him. There is no shutting out for me—nay, but for those who would force their way in. And wherefore do I not force my way? Because I know that no goo dthing is dealt out within to those that enter. But when I hear some one congratulated on being honored by Caesar, I say, What hath fortune brought him? A government? Has it also, then, brought him such an opinion as he ought to have? A magistracy? Hath he also gained the power to be a good magistrate? Why will I still push myself forward? A man scatters figs and almonds abroad; children seize them, and fight among themselves; but not so men, for they hold it too trifling a matter. And if a man should scatter about oyster shells, not even the children would seize them. Offices of government are dealt out—children will look for them; money is given—children will look for it; military commands, consulships—let children scramble for them. Let them be shut out and smitten, let them kiss the hands of the giver, of his slaves—it is figs and almonds to me. What then? If thou miss them when he is flinging them about, let it not vex thee. If a fig fall into thy bosom, take and eat it, for so far even a fig is to be valued. But if I must stoop down for it, and throw down another man, or another throw me down and I flatter those who enter in, then neither is a fig worth so much, nor is any other of the things that are not good, even those which the philosophers have persuaded me not to think good.

THE MIRROR OF THE MODE

By Mary Marshall.

This Palm Beach frock is of finely checked red and white gingham worn with a white linen jacket.

Without ever really going out of fashion, gingham has a way of coming back into fashion with a vengeance every so often. For children's school, and play frocks and for the practical house or garden frock for young girls and women, gingham holds its own in season and out. Once in a while it steps out of its accustomed sphere and surprises us by mingling with silks and fine linens for more pretentious wear.

So no one has been really surprised over the high favor accorded gingham in recent showings of frocks for winter-resort wear. Gingham frocks mingle on equal terms with frocks of silk crepe and linen. Especially important are the checked ginghams—red and white check, blue and white, brown and beige, green and white. Frequently these frocks are accompanied by short jackets of pique or linen—white or in the color of the check.

Very trim are these new gingham frocks designed for sports and resort wear. There is nothing about them to suggest the hurriedly made and more hurriedly selected ready-made house frock. Collars and cuffs fit with admirable precision. Often there are narrow belts of black patent leather or colored kid. Narrow collars and cuffs of pique or linen or the trimmest of pipings give finish at neck and wrists.

It does not take much courage to predict a revival of interest in all sorts of cotton materials for the coming spring. Organdie frocks for evening have already made their appearance—cotton point d'esprit is a close rival of tulle for the ruffled skirt flounces, and there are all sorts of light-weight, gauze-like materials of the sort used in mid-Victorian days that make their appearance for evening wear.

And the hilltop gardens yield this fragrant tea.

"Dear Marion,

I am enclosing a recipe for split pea soup as asked by "Bunchy." I clipped this out of a paper, and have it copied into my recipe book.

SPLIT PEA SOUP WITH DICED BACON

Pick over one cupful of dried split peas, cover with cold water and let soak overnight. Drain, add two quarts of cold water, a two-inch cube of fat salt pork and one-half of a small onion. Simmer three and one-half or four hours or until soft. Press through a sieve or a potato-ricer. In another saucepan melt four tablespoonfuls of fat; add three tablespoonfuls of flour, one and one-fourth teaspoonfuls of salt and one-eighth teaspoonful of pepper. Stir until smooth. Add the pea pulp and one pint milk. Just before serving add four strips of bacon which have been cooked and diced. If too thick, add more milk or water. Serves six.

Science Gives its Verdict to the Oat

The oat is far richer in one essential food element than any other cereal. It contains 50% more protein than wheat, and double that of most other grains. Protein is necessary for tissue building and tissue repair.

In Quick Quaker there is 16% protein, a generous proportion. With the protein are balanced abundant minerals, good for blood and bone—carbohydrates, 65%, to supply energy and heat—Vitamin B to help assimilation. Bulk assists the digestive processes and makes laxatives seldom needed. With this perfect food balance, Quick Quaker sustains both youngsters and grown-ups through the busiest hours of the day—those which follow breakfast.

Only carefully selected oats are milled into Quick Quaker. The finest of the crop and fifty years' milling experience give its fine quality. It is the breakfast that's always best for you.

Be sure to ask your grocer for Quick Quaker.

Packages contain coupons with which you can secure silverware and other useful articles. Big, family package, and small 10-cent size, each wrapped and sealed.

That Body of Yours

SAVING A MIND

Perhaps you wonder why some acquaintance seems to change in his disposition, or outlook on things. He is not unfriendly but has not the interests he formerly had, and has taken on new ideas, hobbies, or studies.

Perhaps he changes in his religious views, but is still a good law abiding, and good living citizen.

He may talk to you about some of his new ideas and if you are interested you will find that he has given his subjects a great deal of time and thought. Perhaps he goes further however, and neglects his work and family, and becomes completely taken up with his new field of thought. Naturally he is not fitted for everyday affairs, and before sending him to a mental hospital, he is taken to a specialist in mental ailments—a psychiatrist. This word psychiatry has now become an everyday word and so I must use it.

It simply means "the science and treatment of disorders of the mind." Now what started this man on this line of thought or study?

Dr. Nicholas Murray Butler tells us that the "explanation is that this following of thoughts and ideas, different from the usua thought and ideas of folks in this country, is because of some unsatisfied and unfulfilled whim or yearning.

Thus these individuals when they come across a "faith," a "cure," some unusual belief, that seems to "answer" something within them, give themselves up, wholeheartedly to it."

And so the mental specialist or psychiatrist has to go fully into all this with the patient. It may take a number of sittings before any real progress is made, because the patient doesn't think of his thoughts or ideas as being anything but reasonable or logical. Finally the patient will be able to tell just when and where the "odd" trend of thought started, and the psychiatrist unravels the "tangled skein of thought" gradually and patiently.

When the patient realizes its lack of logic or common sense, he gets straightened away in his mind and becomes the normal citizen he was previously. Thus another "mind" is saved to the world.

The Whatnot

A Column for Little Bits of Everything of Interest to Women Readers

Conducted by Marion

(Copyright)

TWO or three days ago "Chickie" asked for a suggestion for a motto to print at the head of her stationery, and I am devoting to-day's Whatnot to a discussion of mottoes, expecting that other neighbors will be interested.

* * *

One Peterborough woman who writes to me has as her motto (but not printed on her stationery) "Mas vale saber que haber," which means "It is worth more to know than to have." Such a motto is particularly appropriate for book labels, and this neighbor uses it in that way.

* * *

Just to digress a little wee bit, have all you neighbors formed the habit of labelling your books? It's the surest way to ensure their being returned when some well-meaning person with a bad memory borrows them.

* * *

Other mottoes that are good for book labels are: "My book and heart must never part," taken from the Old New England primer; "It is good to live and learn," from Cervantes; and "Syllables govern the world: I light my candle from their torches," by John Selden.

* * *

A good motto to hang in one's study or den:

"Tell not all you know; and tell
Only what you know right well," which is translated from the Chinese. Another Chinese couplet to similarly is:

"Words are wind in empty space,
Writing leaves a lasting trace."

* * *

From the Hindustan, translated by Arthur Guiterman, is "A book tight shut is but a block of paper." Some of us who are inclined to boast of our large libraries might read this oftener.

* * *

Next to books for disappearing are umbrellas, and this translation from the Chinese might well be painted on the umbrella stand:

"Yes, take my umbrella. Don't thank me, but try to send it back promptly, both spotless and dry."

* * *

Good for any place in the house is this one from the Chinese:

"He that smiles may reach the end of eart'h, yet never lack a friend."

* * *

Even the kitchen need not go without its motto. Here are some lines from Cervantes which might with propriety be painted over the sink:

"A time for some things,
And a time for all things;
A time for great things,
And a time for small things."

* * *

If you are clever with lacquer, you will find many ways of using these mottoes on boxes, trays, mirrors, etc. First paint the piece in the desired color, and then when quite dry, lightly trace the forms of the letters in the desired position. Then, with a fine brush, paint the letters in.

* * *

There comes to me just at this moment the idea that my library would be brightened a lot with one of these mottoes painted along the edge of each book shelf. I know lots more suitable lines and couplets that would just fit. If any neighbor wishes to go in for this kind of decoration, drop me a line and I will give enough to do every shelf differently.

* * *

On a dessert serving dish you might use "The proof of the pudding is in the eating," also from Cervantes, and on a clock you might paint this from Rabelais: "Nothing is so dear and precious as time." Or, if you wish something nearer our own day, try Burns: "Nae man can tether time or tide."

* * *

For a tobacco stand which you are doing over in lacquer, this would be very suitable:

"For thy sake, tobacco, I Would do anything but die."

* * *

The neighbor who prides herself upon her skill in the kitchen will find this suitable for the wall there: "You cannot make omelets without breaking eggs," or, if she desires it in the Spanish from which it is translated: "No se hacen tortillas sin romper heuvos."

* * *

On your dressing table accessories, you might use "Toujours fret," meaning "Always ready," or "Ars est celere artem," meaning "Art consists in hiding art."

* * *

And now, to come down to the personal mottoes desired by "Chickie," here are a few I think would be suitable. "Nothing great without enthusiasm," from Emerson, would be inspiring, but should be used only by someone who believes it.

* * *

"Love truth but pardon error," from Voltaire, makes an admirable personal motto, apt for anyone. Some might like the popular French proverb: "Aide-toi, et le ciel t'aidera," meaning "Help yourself and heaven will help you."

* * *

Rabelais gives us: "Vivez joyeux"—"Live merrily," and from Richelieu comes: "Tout par raison"—"Everything with reason." Another French proverb is: "Vouloir c'est pouvoir," meaning "To wish is to be able," and if we have progressed far enough from the days of 1914-1918, one might use the German "Jung gelernt, alt gethan," which means "What is learned in youth is done even in old age."

* * *

Appropriate for the living room is the short Latin motto: "Dum vivimus, vivamus," meaning "While we live let us live." On a tray used for serving beverages might be painted: "Alla vostra salute!" which means "To your health!" in Italian. The Spanish proverb: "Manana sera otro dia," meaning "To-morrow will be another day," is good for everyone to remember.

* * *

I hope that "Chickie" and others will be interested in these, and will find use for some of them. And, just as a closing suggestion, how would this be to paint on your writing desk: "Write to Marion"?

* * *

We have a cap for this week's diagram—a mob cap, if you make it of muslin, that can be used for housework; a boudoir cap if you make it of georgette or crepe-de-chine or net. It is yours for the asking—just send the coupon and a two-cent stamp, and I will forward the diagram and directions at once.

* * *

I suppose that all you neighbors have either written to absent friends inviting them to come to Peterborough's Old Home Week in July, or have handed their names and addresses to the committee so that invitations can be sent?

* * *

It is going to be the greatest time in Peterborough's history, and everyone should dig in to make it successful. The committee will have information about trains and travelling, so even if you have sent the invitation, you should also give the names to Mr. Dobbin so that this information may be sent out.

* * *

There will be something for everyone to do later on, but right now the big thing is to get all the old boys and girls of Peterborough county on the mailing list. If you include these names when writing to me, I'll be glad to see that they reach the committee.

My New Year's Resolutions

The following have been entered in a competition, the result of which will be announced on Saturday.

(By "Fireside Dreamer.")

Dear Marion:

I have been "enthused" by your page to make New Year's Resolutions, for the first time in my life. I may have made them unconsciously before, but have never put them down in order. It may help some, so here they are:

I, "Fireside Dreamer" resolve that during the year nineteen hundred and twenty-nine I shall—

(1) Rise promptly at 8 a.m. (I am a sleep head).

(2) Plan my housework well and stick to the schedule

(3) To keep my rooms clean and dusted (I never see dust in anybody else's home

(4) Keep my sewing room neat and tidy. (It is always in a heap.)

(5) Try out some new recipes (my kitchen is the only place I keep spotless, so I have few resolutions for that).

(6) To have more patience with my hubby and baby (they're such lambs).

(7) To write to dear mother every Sunday.

(8) To go to church every Sunday.

(9) To take more interest in my friends, neighbors and city and not be quite so selfish.

(10) To read one good book every fortnight.

(11) To keep old friends and appreciate new ones.

(12) To plan our new home, our dream home, where we shall have our hearts desire, but most of all God's love, God's sunshine, and God's blessing.

(13) (It's my lucky number)—To write to Marion's page as often as I find the time because I know of lots of nice things to write about—music and poetry, books and babies, sweethearts and brides, homes and people being my pet hobbies in life.

Some of these resolutions I have kept, some of the time, but alas, none of them all of the time.

"Fireside Dreamer."

(By "Prairie Girl.")

"Dear Marion:

I have thought of writing before and as this is the commencement of a new year, I decided it might be a good time to act instead of just thinking of doing so, and here I am.

Like many others I enjoy your pages very much. Each section is so helpful in its own particular place. I do hope though that "Thinker" and all attached to him will have vanished with the old year.

As you were asking for New Year Resolutions Marion I will now venture to express in my own simple way what I have resolved for this year of 1929 and I only trust I shall be able to live up to it.

I most firmly resolve "To love and serve my Creator more than I have done in the past.'

Now please don't think I am expecting to win a prize or that I am a religious fanatic. In fact Marion if you would rather not print this it is quite all right with me, but I thought I would tell you about it anyway.

Well, in resolving to love and serve my Creator to the best of my ability, I feel I am aspiring to the best that is in me and if I can succeed all lesser things will surely follow. Don't you think it is because we lose sight of the fact that we owe everything to God, that we fail towards ourselves and towards our neighbors? Every time I am tempted to think or act in anyway wrong during the coming year I hope I shall be able to remember 'God died for love of us all,' and I feel sure I'll be able to withstand many of the temptations which we all meet in this journey of life. Of course, I'll fail at times as I'm very human but I trust those times will be few.

Now this letter is getting very lengthy so I will close.

I have a few helps I will reserve for another time in case Marion does not see fit to print this. Wishing you all a Happy and Prosperous New Year.

Prairie Girl.

(By "Daisy.")

"Dear Marion:

I have been reading the Whatnot and see another contest on. I made a big resolution so thought I would send it in.

My resolution is that I will do all I can, in every possible way to make this year the happiest in every way I can to everyone I can.

I am going to place myself last now, and help the needy. It pays one to see poor people happy doesn't it?

Wishing you all possible prosperity, I remain,

Omemee. Daisy."

WHAT IS CORRECT?

Maria: Q—I am going to visit a friend in another city, where I have some girl acquaintances. Will it be all right for me to ask them to call on me at the house where I am visiting?

A—Yes, after you have informed your hostess and asked her permission. Their names must be mentioned, as your hostess has the right to know who comes to her home. When they call, you should introduce your friends to your hostess.

Great Britain now has one car to every 41 persons; while France has only one to every 137 people.

LAKEFIELD SEXTETTE VICTORS ON HOME ICE

BLEWETT AGAIN STARS IN TILT

Marmora Loses 3-2 Decision in O.H.A. Intermediate Fixture.

GOALIES GOOD.

"The first game over again," avowed many of a large turnout of fans at the Lakefield rink last night, after the Marmora Intermediates, still smarting under a 5-4 defeat at the hands of the Lakefield O.H.A. entry in Peterborough last Wednesday, had again come out on the short end of the count with Blewett, winning goal getter of the first battle having again scored the final counter that gave Lakefield the victory by 3-2.

Last night's battle was, in many ways, similar to that played in Peterborough a week ago in that Blewett, on both occasions landed the million dollar counter in the dying minutes of the closing stanza and in that up to that goal, the count had been knotted. But in last night's fixture, there was something more — a first period of scoreless hockey, fewer penalties throughout and a display of gaol tending on the part of both goalies, but especially Murray, of Marmora, that alone was responsible for the small score.

Game Was Clean.

But for Wanamaker's display of temper that netted him a five minute penalty, Referee Bill Jackson, of Peterborough, handled the bell in a game that was unexpectedly clean, the other penalties being mostly of minor consideration. But most remarkable of all, for an O.H.A. game was the ceremony indulged in by the rival outfits at the end of the game—they stood and gave three cheers for each other! There was a cue, the spirit of which might be worth while considering by teams.

They lined up as follows:

Lakefield—Goal, Hamblin; defense, J. Sabatino and Blewett; wings, Stabler and Northey; centre, L. Sabatino. Subs, Wanamaker and Woods.

Marmora—Goal, Murray; defense, G. Scott and Auger; wings, McWilliams and W. Scott; centre, Buck. Subs, Neal and Speagle.

As in the first game, the Marmora outfit owed plenty to Buck, McWilliams and W. Scott, the forward line, which checked well and carried on a lot of long distance gunning that resulted in rebounds sometimes difficult to cover, while Blewett, L. Sabatino and Northey were the pick of the Homesters.

First Period Scoreless.

The first period, while not productive of very much fast hockey, was chiefly of interest to the goalies, for centre ice was nearly always vacant with one team or the other having difficulty in getting beyond the back checking of the attackers. Jack Sabatino and Stabler made the first dangerous invasion of the Marmora territory shortly after the period began, but Buck and W. Scott came right back only to go dead on the Lakefield goalie who made a neat clearance. Marmora held the edge for a minute or more and then down came the Homesters to hold their attackers behind their own blue line and give Murray plenty of cause for action. Thus play shifted but with no scoring results. Blewett drew a penalty while in a few minutes J. Sabatino and W. Scott were both chased by the referee in an attempt to nip in the bud a promising feud. Then Wanamaker drew his big penalty, first for slashing and in addition to which he made strenuous objection to the referee. The score card was still empty when the teams retired.

Tried Combination

Both teams made rather spasmodic attempts at combination with the start of the second period, but it was not productive of results until, after 18 minutes G. Scott sent one out of his own corner to Buck who took a long heave and landed the rubber behind Hamblin. During this session, Auger and G. Scott were both penalized while L. Sabatino also visited the time keepers for tripping up a Marmora attacker.

Lakefield Scores

Five minutes of the session had passed and Lakefield, with nary a tally, were one down, when Blewett brought the crowd to its feet on a drive just inside the Marmora blue line after his team had bottled up the visitors in their own end. Louis Sabatino, not to be outdone, came through a minute later with a cleverly-accomplished goal that put his team in front 2-1 when he shecked a Marmora player as he was clearing, and took a short heave that beat Murray.

Wannamaker drew a penalty and the play went on without the invaders capitalizing on his absence until Buck picked up a loose rubber and bulged the twine to put his team on even terms. Both teams had found that a one-goal lead is not sufficient to warrant strictly defensive hockey and they went back at it harder than ever. The break came when Blewett, skating near the enemy blue line, took a shot caught Murray unprepared, and though the Green and White put everything up in an effort to save the pieces, the hometowners tightened and the game ended without further scoring. G. Scott served a penalty during the last part of the session.

Olympic Sprint Champion Has Ambitious Program Lined Up For Tour.

VANCOUVER, B.C., Jan. 17 (Canadian Press)—Percy Williams, Olympic sprint champion, left Vancouver yesterday morning for Winnipeg, on the first leg of his tour of the Eastern indoor athletic meets. An ambitious program has been lined up for the Vancouver youth. He will be met at Winnipeg by B. M. VARSITY BEATS CLOSEST RIVALS

Blue ad White Scores Five Goals in Third To Defeat Queen's 8-2.

HIGH CLASS HOCKEY.

Teams Battle Through Scoreless First Period—Few Penalties.

TORONTO, Ont., Jan. 17.—(Canadian Press). — University of Toronto made it four straight victories in as many starts and clinched a place in the play-off series for the senior O. H. A. championship by defeating Queen's, the other unbeaten team of the series, at the Varsity Arena, last night, by 8 to 2, but it was not until the last period that the locals took supreme command as they entered the final twenty minutes with only a one-goal lead majority in the five that had been scored. In the last period the Tricolor appeared to be shy on condition and in the closing five minutes the Blue and White rustled three counters past Quinn.

The game was productive of a much higher class of hockey than the Queen's-Varsity clashes in the intercollegiate in recent years, the presence of three Kingston boys on the visiting team strengthened it considerably as Joe Smith, Chummy Lawler and Frank Bellringer gave the Tri-Color a threat on the forward line that was lacking in the College Union. A fairly fast pace was maintained for the first twenty minutes with play ranging up and down the ice from one end to the other, almost invariably by individual efforts, and both goals had a number of narrow escapes. The losers' shooting was not as true as that of the locals but in the early part of the game the Blue and White attackers made the mistake of trying to work in too close on Quinn. Generally their efforts were broken up by the back-checkers or the Britton-Boland defence bulwark and those that did break through were outguessed on four different occasions when Quinn came out to smother the shots.

The Tri-Color appeared to have an edge in speed, especially in back-checking and this opportunity was more noticeable owing to the locals being slow in breaking away on the attack. The Blue and White had a decided margin in condition and in the last ten minutes hemmed the vistors in their own end of the rink. Queen's broke away several times for attacks on the Varsity goal in attempts to reduce the margin but three of these proved costly as McMullen, Paul and Harley broke from their own end of the rink and went right down to beat the Queen's defence and score.

The play changed with considerable rapidity in the first half of the second spasm but neither team appeared dangerous. Queen's took the upper hand for a while and with the Blue and White defence rather loose the locals were lucky that they were not scored upon. Finally Bruce Paul came to the rescue and scored two goals, forty seconds apart. The first was a well-earned affair but Queen's were guilty of a decided lapse in letting the Varsity defence player go in behind the goal and after securing possession come out and push the rubber over the line. The second goal came when a rush by Harley was stopped and the rubber slipped over to Paul who beat Quinn. The margin was reduced less than two minutes from the end when Boland went all the way by himself and broke through to coast in on Snyder, who had no chance. Varsity scored just before the bell but it was disallowed. Stewart rushed and when checked his skates kicked the rubber over to McMullen, who drilled it into the twine.

The final twenty minutes found the visitors tiring but it took the winners over five minutes to score their first counter. Harley banged a shot up against the end of the rink and McMullen was allowed to amble in unmolested on the other side to give the blue a two goal lead once again. It took nearly six minutes for the next counter and this was the only goal of the game that came from a direct combination play. Stewart slipping the rubber over to Harley. Stewart was penalized for tripping and while he was off, the local ran in three goals, McMullen, Paul and then Harley getting individual counters.

For the losers, Lawler and Smith were the pick of the forwards, but they were off in their direction when in scoring positions. Bubs Britton was strong defensively and was also hard to stop on a rush. Boland was somewhat crude in his defensive play, but he was effetive and scored the Tricolor's second goal. Quinn held his team up for a while but was unable to stem the attacks in the final period.

The teams:

Varsity—Goal, Snyder.; defence, Whitehead and Paul; centre, Stewart; Wings, Harley and McMullen. Subs: Murray and Marshall.

Queen's— Goal, Quinn; defence, Boland and Britton; centre, Lawlar; wings, Reist and J .Smith. Subs: Bellringer and McPherson.

Referee—Harry Watson.

The summary:

Firts period—

1. Queen', Lawler (Smith) 9.10
2. Varsity, Stewart 3.50

Second period—

3. Varsity, Paul 10.15
4. Varsity, Paul (Harley) ..... .40
5. Queen's, Boland 7.40

Third period—

6. Varsity, McMullen (Harley) .. 5.22
7. Varsity, Harley (Stewart) 3.48
8. Varsity, McMullen 4.00
9. Varsity, Paul 1.13
10. Varsity, Harley ..... .28

Final score—Varsity 8, Queen's 2.

Penalties: First period—Bellringer. Second period—none. Third period — Paul, Stewart, and Boland.

CAMPBELLFORD BEATS VISITORS IN CLEAN GAME

Frankford Sextette Defeated 5-3 in Trent Valley League Fixture.

FEW PENALTIES.

Both Teams Play Listless Hockey in See-saw Affair.

CAMPBELLFORD, Jan. 17. —(Examiner Staff Correspondence). — There were almost six-hundred fans present last night to watch the home team gain a five to three victory over Frankford in the second home fixture which the schedule had called for. The quality of hockey did not come up to the standard of which both teams were capable but there were plenty of thrills to keep the fans warm. The play was very clean, with only two penalties, one to each team. Strange as it may seem, the slight misdemeanours occurred in the first and second periods and not during the final session when both teams played their fastest hockey of the evening and were using all their energy to change the order of things. Walter Jackson, Peterborough had his weather eye peeled and although he warned some of the players and called the offsides and kicks without fear, favor or affection, he did not find occasion to dish out any serious penalties and the two he did issue were for only one minute each. The first goal went to the home team, and though the visitors managed to twice tie the score, they did not gain a lead at any time during the game.

First Period.

Frankford took the ice with the advantage in weight and managed to keep up an offensive game for the first part of the period. Brisebois got a rap with a sitck that put a slight gash over his eye. There was no real combination by either team. O'Malley drew th first penalty for a trip and Frankford were the first to sub. when Munn went on the wing. The local team got going better with their combination but the Frankford goalie was not asleep and kept the counters out. Shepherd managed to get through but went into the corner. Ingram scored the first goal of the game on a pass from Runions when there was only six mintues left of the period. Frankford began to show more speed. Runions was offside for three consecutive passes, but later sent a nice pass to McArthur right in front of the Frankford net which had McArthur not missed, would have given him an open shot. During this period, the play was mostly in the Campbellford territory. There were eleven shots on the Frankford goal against five on the local net. Frankford counted three offsides with seven against the home team. The single penalty went to the visitors. Score, Frankford 0, Campbellford 1.

Second Period.

Right at the start, the local team began to pepper the Frankford goal but missed their rebounds and did not scroe. Frankford tried luck by shooting from practically anywhere they found the puck. With eight minutes of the period gone, Legault evened the score when he got in for a rebound. In the same minute, Runions put Campbellford back in the lead when he tallied on a pass from Pollock. With the score two to one for the home team, the play began to look more like real hockey. Two-man combinations were the order for a while until Ingram tried one of his loners that provided plenty of thrills but did not get a score. Frankford missed a rebound that would have meant an open shot from close range and probably a goal. Very little of the next few minutes was played near centre ice but first at one end and then at the other. Each team struggled desperately for a count. If anything, the play grew rougher as it grew faster and there was not a penalty. Both teams began to sub in earnest and kept up the furious pace. Blue drew a rest for tripping. By the end of the period, the Frankford men began to show signs of tiring. When the bell rang, the score was two to one for Campbellford. There were nine shots on the Frankford goal and five on the Campbellford net. Frankford was responsible for four offsides while six were credited to Campbellford. The lone penalty went to the home team.

Third Period.

Before the teams lined up, Jackson called a conference of the players at centre ice. The result was the best hockey of the game. The local team went out to increase their lead and played faster and better hockey. But with only four minutes of the period gone, Legault came to the fore and scored on a long shot. For the second time the score was even. Another minute elapsed before the first offside appeared. And three more went by before McArthur put Campbellford back in the lead when he scored on a pass from Runions. There followed a dangerous minute in front of the local net, which Shepherd relieved, and when the same thing occurred at the other end, a kick which was hardly noticeable, stopped the invasion. The home team tried three-man combinations, but failed to get a goal till Runions and Pollock went down together and Runions got the counter on a pass from Pollock. With nine minutes still to play, Frankford tried all they knew to score, and Campbellford tried a defensive game for a few minutes. This kept the play in their area, with Brisebois working hard for a goal, and seeming to be everywhere at once. George Bowen took a fast one at the Campbellford net and scored. With the score 4-3 for Campbellford, and three minutes to go, Shepherd showed some of his skill when he took a pass from Runions at centre ice and worked his way slowly but surely right up to within a few feet of the Frankford net and scored. There were nine shots on the Frankford goal and ten on the Campbellford goal. Two offsides went to Frankford and five to Campbellford. There were no penalties. The teams:

Frankford—B. Bowen, goal; L. Legault, r. defence; C. O'Malley, l. defence; L. Brisebois, centre; G. Bowen, r. wing; E. Ellore, l. wing; F. Munn and R. Ruttan, subs.

BOWMANVILLE BEATS OSHAWA

James Stars As Homesters Win 4-3 Victory Over Simcoes.

SCORE IN FIRST PERIOD.

BOWMANVILLE, Ont., Jan. 17. — Bowmanville defeated the Oshawa Simcoes, 4 to 3, in a fast game of O.H.A. intermediate hockey here last night. The sensation of the game was the come-back of Stuart James, in goal, after two or three years' absence and he starred throughout.

Most of the scoring was in the first period, Mike Osborne twice beating Priar in the first five minutes of play, and then Whitton, a little man with big ideas, scored two for Oshawa and Burr gave Simcoes their other, while Densem and Turner were Bowmanville's other scorers.

Stars for Bowmanville were James, Densem and Osborne brothers. Stars for Oshawa were Burr, Whitton and Collin. Garrison relieved Priar in the goal in the second period. The teams:

Bowmanville—Goal, S. James; defence Densem and H. Osborne; centre M. Osborne; wings, Cameron and Piper; subs., Turner and Luxton.

Oshawa—Goal, Priar; defence, Balsome and Peterson; centre, Atkinson; wings Burr and Brinning; subs. Collin and Whitton.

COLTS WIN 4-1 HOCKEY DECISION

Initial Tilt in Lakefield District League—Teams Lack Practice.

LAKEFIELD, January 17. —(Examiner Correspondence). — The first gun in the district hockey league was fired on Tuesday night when the High School and Colts clashed and although the game was not a remarkable exhibition of first class hockey, it was decidedly promising in, that both teams have excellent material and with practice and judicious coaching their next game should be worth seeing. Many of the players were new to the lights and crowd, although the attendance was not sufficiently large to cause embarrassment.

Opportunities for practice have been few this season but in spite of all the hindrances, the league is away to a good start and marks a new epoch in sporting history for each player in the district league is twenty or under.

The Colts, who had the greatest amount of experience, as some of their players have played in O. H. A. teams and in the district league, held the whip hand although the first period scoring three to the students one but the boys tightened up and in the second period only one goal was scored and the third period was blank for both. Sherin, the school goalie in a regular Polar outfit played a good game in the second and third periods, in the first he was inclined to leave his citadel unguarded while he rushed into the defence ranks.

Dever for the Colts was steady and only let one go in. There was little combination but the little told and the efforts at "lone star" play brought little result for either side. Braden Blewett held the bell and in the first period sent four players to the penalty box for brief seasons of repentance which were evidently effective as the last two periods showed "clean sheets" for both teams.

The following is the line up:

Colts—S. Dever; right defnce, H. Hamblin; left defence, W. Wingett; centre, W. Adamson; right wing, George Wannamaker; left wing, R. Kennedy.

High School—Goal, H. Sherin; right defence, D. Dever; left defence, D. White; centre, L. Wannamaker; right wing, H. Jewell; left wing, E. Kemp. Subs: R. Kemp, G. Northey.

Goals were scored for the Colt's by Kennedy, Wingett, Hamblin and Adamson and by R. Wannamaker for the school.

HALL STARS IN GOAL FOR INDUSTRIALS

North Enders and C.G.E. Put Up Sterling Battle in C.G.E. Fixture.

COGNAWAGAS WIN 4-2.

C. G. E. Tool Room Play Combination Hockey To Blank Church Team 8-0.

The C. G. E. and Harrison's North Enders, two of the fastest teams in City League, checked each other into submission last night, winding their game up in a 1-1 tie.

The contest was very close, all through the first period, Harrison's threatening most of the time but their aggressiveness was somewhat dampened by the stellar net minding of Bert Hall, who performed in a manner that would compare favorably with Joe Dwyer at his best. For a minute or so near the end of the period, the C. G. E. team were two players shy, but were able to weather the handicap, the period ending with no score. Thornton combined with Calladine to chalk up their lone tally a few minutes after the face off in the second frame. They worked right in on top of Hall. Allen evened the count with 1 minute to go in this period in a lone rush, weaving through centre to find the corner of the net. The C. G. E. forwards were unable to put enough pep into their shots and as a result missed many scoring chances while the Harrison gang were dead on as far as accuracy goes and were it not for Hall in the nets, the C. G. E. team would have treated Harrison's to an extra point.

The teams:

C. G. E.—Goal, Bert Hall; defence, Doddridge and Howe; centre, Allen; wings, Dyer and Ashmore. Subs: Hedger, Justice and Shields.

Harrisons: Goal, Jim Gillespie; defence, Calladine and Johnson; centre, Thornton; wings, Jarvis and Dundas. Subs: Vinette and Collins.

Summary.

First period:

No score.

Second period:

Harrisons—Calladine (Thornton) 18.00
C. G. E.—Allen 29.00

Third period:

Play Good Combination.

The Cogs who were smarting from last weeks defeat stepped into the De Laval crew and cleaned up 4 to 2. The winners were noted for a flashy brand of combination that even though it usually failed to break through the De Laval defence nevertheless resulted in the first tally, when Cripps (jr) shoved in Wilson's rebound. The Cripps brothers were the outstanding players for the Cogs, securing three goals between them while Bill Cripps assisted up the fourth. For the De Laval, Creighton, the red-headed wing man played a whale of a game, getting his shots away with a rapidity that was remarkable while Lackey with his wicked shooting was much in evidence.

The teams:

Cogs—Goal, Payne; defence, D. Davis and F. Cripps; centre, B. Cripps; wings, Graham and Wilson. Subs: Rooke, A. Davis.

De Laval— Goal, Ward, defence, Lackey and Evans, centre, Edgar; wings, Jones and Creighton. Subs: Fowler and Miller.

Summary.

De Laval—Creighton, ... 11.00

Second period:

Cogs—Wilston (B. Cripps) 17.00

BLANKS CHURCH TEAM

George Street Church team slumped before the onslaught of the C. G.E. Tool Room gunners who played almost perfect combination together with a wonderful defensive game which netted them a 9 to 0 victory. The Toolmakers had it all their own way in the first, running in four goals in fast order while Jones their goalie was not called on to block even one shot. Ed. Williams, Kenneally and Foley on the forward line trotted out a brand of teamwork that was exceptionally clever. George Street team battled a great deal harder in the second but lacked finished combination, Jones blocking the long shots with ease. The third period completed the rout, the Tool Room forwards breaking three in a line and piled up five more counters, every one coming as a result of systematic passing. McColl playing goal for George street despite the high score played a very brilliant game.

The teams:

Tool Room—Goal, Jones; defence, Hatton and Swanger; centre, Kenneally; wings, Ed. Williams and Foley. Subs., Corkery, Carroll and A. (Mickey) Williams.

George Street Young Mens Club—Goal, McColl; defence, GGillespie and Graham; centre, Allin; wings, Baird and Hall; subs., Ash, Magee and Robertson.

SAINTS WIN OUT

The fast coming All Saints Athletic Club hockey team chalked up a victory last night setting back Barries team 4-2 in a hard fought contest. The score is a poor indication of the closeness of the struggle which was a battle royal from gong to gong. Dyer, Dunkerley, Ashmore performing very brilliantly for the Saints, while Doxsee in the nets for Barries turned in an outstanding performance.

Teams:

Barries.—Goal, Doxsee; defence, Austin, White; centre, Creary; wings, Hartley, Magee; subs., Roach, Campanaro.

THROUGH WITH SPORTS

F. G. "Teddy" Oke, Toronto mining millionaire, who has cut such a figure in amateur and professional sportss for the last two years, on January 15 announced that he was through with all forms of sport and sport philanthropy with the exception of his girls' club. He is now seeking permission to take the remaining home games of his Canpro hockey team abroad, and will, at the end of the season, abandon all support of sporting clubs and ventures, with the exception of the Toronto Parkdale Ladies' Athletic Club, of which he is the sole backer.

Oshawa Simcoes play the Peterborough Intermediates at the Brock to-morrow night.

"Snap" Parker and "Abbie" Rose have been practising with the Petes all week. It is understood that these two members of Peterborough's championship team will wear the blue and white again, after a few weeks, if the need arises.

Ernie Legon played defence in Bowmanville, and he turned in his old hard-working, useful game, adding a lot of wisdom and hockey brains to the Petes' youthful line-up.

The boys at the Public Schools will be playing hard now to catch a place on their school team in order to play in the league which opens on Saturday. In the Public Schools' sports the youngsters get their first opportunity to play under organized conditions with good referees and coaches. Lakefield squeezed out another victory over the fast-skating Marmora in the northern town last night. With the score tied 2-2 well toward the end of the game Blewett again netted the winning goal. These teams are evenly matched, and although Lakefield has won both games so far, their margin of superiority was never apparent. Marmora are due to come back and triumph in the next game.

Varsity clinched a place in the play-off series of the O.H.A. championship by defeating Queen's 8 to 2, their fourth straight victory. The tri-color had the edge in speed, but they lacked the condition of the winners, and tired toward the end.

BARRY JONES

For his return visit Mr. Maurice Colbourne has secured the services of an old colleague in Mr. Barry Jones, who is already known to Canada from his tour three years ago in "The Dover Road" and "Too Many Husbands" and from productions in the East such as "Grounds for Divorce," "Spring Cleaning" and "The Better 'Ole," which established him as one of the most popular actors Canada has ever applauded." (Toronto press).

The last two years Broadway has claimed him; first in "The Constant Nymph," and later, for 19 months he was considered one of the brightest spots in New York as Jane Cowl's juvenile lead in her greatest success "The Road to Rome."

Here Mr. Jones will be seen as Bobby in "Fanny's First Play," in which role he will delight all his old admirers and those who see him for the first time with his whimsical charm and clever performance.

AT THE CAPITOL.

FIRST RODE TO HOUNDS IN NEW FILM, "THE WHIP"

Englishwoman though she is, and athletically inclined in other lines of sport, Dorothy Mackaill never rode to hounds in her life before until she was cast in "The Whip," the First National Picture at the Capitol Theatre to-day.

But her role in "The Whip" is that of a daughter of a wealthy English sportsman. English sportsmen and their families always ride as though they were born in the saddle.

Consequently, Miss Mackaill set out, somewhat grimly, to join the hunt for the picture, and she swims, plays tennis and golf—but she had never developed any particular fondness for riding to hounds.

A day's practice, however, not only taught her that horses would clear the barriers and frances but developed a keen interest in the sport.

"The Whip", from the famous Drury Lane melodrama of that name, featuring Ralph Forbes, Anna Q. Nilsson, Lowell Sherman and others in support of Miss Mackaill. Charles Brabin directed the story and Sam E. Rork produced it for First National Pictures.

FAMOUS HOCKEY GAMES OF PETERBOROUGH TEAMS

By F.D.C.

The play off game at Port Hope between the Cobourg and Peterborough intermediates back in 1913, which the Petes finally won 9 to 5, was a real battle make no mistake about that.

When it was all over two or three of the winners had only one sound leg to stand upon. The Cobourg crew that night specialized in chopping ankles. They chopped Grover Halpin right out of the game and George Ross played left wing the second half on one leg. Percy Bond received special attention from his old fellow townsmen and altogether it was a merry party for the Petes forgot the injunction about turning the other cheek and did some slamming on their own account.

One feature of the evening came near to costing the Port Hope band one perfectly good bass drum. Cobourg had as their trained that night none other than Reddy Lamont, a Toronto boy, who once upon a time played ball for Peterborough. When Halpin was hurt and retired from the game Mr. Lamont suspected he was faking and determined to investigate for himself. When he reached the door of the Petes' dressing room he loudly announced his intention of going inside to have a look at Halpin's ankle. Eugene Hurtubise the Petes' trainer just as loudly announced that if Mr Lamont came in he'd throw him out. But he did and he did. That is the Cobourg trainer entered and the next moment was making a non-stop flight through the air from the dressing room door to the spot where the band was discoursing more or less sweet music in the gallery. The flying Lamont propelled by the powerful Peterborough trainer missed the big drum by a bare six inches and immediately decided that Halpin really was hurt and that Cobourg would have to drop a man.

Getting back to the game the Petes were always in front. They ran in the first three goals, led at half time by 4 to 1 and early in the second half scored again to take a four marker lead. Cobourg suddenly rallied at this stage and counted three times in a row, making the score 5 to 4, but it was their last spurt and the Petes drew away again to win 9 to 5.

The last half was rough—decidedly. Every penalty awarded by Referee Wally Hern of Stratford was earned and midway through the last session the going was so stormy that the referee called the teams to the centre of the ice and told them what he thought of them. Altogether few Peterborough teams have taken any more punishment in one night than this intermediate crew of 1913 had to put up with to win the group that night.

The line up:

Peterborough—Goal, Flowers; point Bond; cover, Bearss; rover, Halpin; centre, Hall; right wing, Kenneally; left wing, Ross.

Cobourg— Goal, Patton; point, Guy; cover, Payne; rover, Gliddon; centre, Lavis; right wing, Niles; left wing, Freeman.

Referee—Wally Hern, Stratford.

GOOD WIFE NEEDED IN STARTING FARM

Andrew Anderson, Successful Farmer, Says Without One Chances of Success Are Slim.

OTTAWA, Ont., Jan. 17.—(Canadian Press). — Western Canada holds unlimited possibilities for the settler adapted to farming and with the will to succeed, according to Andrew Anderson, of Alsask, Sask., who passed through the capital recently for the West Indies, where he will reap the reward of his personal success—a holiday with his wife. It is the first vacation he has enjoyed since he came to Canada 18 years ago.

With a group of fellow country men Mr. Anderson emigrated from Sweden in 1906. He took up a homestead of 160 acres in sparsely settled district of Alsaska, building a small log frontiter cabin in which he lived for years while he cleared the land and prepared the virgin prairie for crops.

When he first came to Alsask, Mr. Anderson had to haul all his equipment and provisions 90 miles from the village of Provost. It was no uncommon thing to start for the village on a Monday morning and not return to the farm until the following Saturday.

The Anderson farm to-day presents a picture in striking contrast to its original appearance. It has been transformed from its prairie cloak to a farm of 4500 acres, studded with artifical lakes and ponds, and abundantly tred. Ten acres have been set aside as a garden with small fruit trees, shrubs, lilacs and flowers of many varieties.

Starting with limited machinery and four horses, Mr. Anderson to-day has 70 steeds, threshing outfits, tractors, electric power and running water, in addition to other luxuries, not generally found on the average farm.

On farming help, Mr. Anderson had the following to say: "Don't expect too much from labour. If the hired man did and knew all we wanted him to know he would never be in the class of hired help. And never speak disrespectfully to or about the hired man, for it must be remembered that they are what you and I were yesterday. As for temporary harvest hands treat them as well as you possibly can afford for it is well to remember that we shall need them every year we have a crop to harvest."

The foreigner who could not be assimulated had no place in Canada, Mr Anderson maintained. Nor did he think it a good policy to foster the grouping of different nationalties in self-contained settlements. He also expressed himself against any scheme of settlement which did not provide for adequate inspection of lands available to newcomers. Only by providing suitable land could any scheme of colonization be successful, he added.

"Don't start farming without a good wife, for if you do your chances of success are slim," he concluded.

Benjamin Franklin signed the Declaration of Independence, the Constitution of the United States, the Treaty of Alliance with France and the Treaty of Peace with England.

POISON FOUND BY DOCTORS

Mrs. Flora Schnabel is Believed To Have Been Poisoned During September.

INQUEST ORDERED.

MONTREAL, Que., Jan. 17.—(Canadian Press.)—The symptoms of two poisons were found in the body of Mrs. Flora Schnabel, who disappeared from her Notre Dame De Grace home September 3 last and which was found buried in Potter's Field at Cornwall, Ont., two weeks ago, stated Dr. Derome, Provincial Medico-Legal Expert in a report made yesterday to Coroner Lorenzo Prince.

Dr. Derome added that he hoped in a day or two to be able to determine the nature of these poisons and incidentally diagnose beyond doubt the cause of Mrs. Schnabel's death.

Yesterday also came to Coroner Prince, the official order from the Attorney General's Department at Quebec to proceed with the inquest in the case and arrangements for the opening of this will be made as soon as Dr. Derome completes his autopsy.

In the meantime the police will continue their search for the woman's husband, George Schnabel, who disappeared three months after his wife was reported missing.

SCHOOL ASSOCIATION HEARS FINE ADDRESS

Parents of Children in Miss Buck's Room Carry Off Banner For Attendance in Central School.

A meeting of the Home and School Association of Central School was held in the Kindergarten room with the president, Mrs. Flannery, in the chair.

The banner for the greatest attendance of parents at the meeting was won by Miss Buck's room. The treasurer's report showed a balance of about sixty dollars. Quite a number of relief cases had been attended to by the committee and flowers sent to the sick.

A piano solo by Miss Margaret Stanton was well received, followed by a selection of the boys' trio, accompanied by Miss Lily Bacon, which was much applauded.

A delightful reading was given by Mrs. Boorman, who had to respond to an encore.

James Dutton was the speaker of the evening, his subject being "Town Planning." He spoke of the necessity of a "Town Planning Commission" for the City of Peterborough, saying that some of the citizens are already alive to this vital factor. He spoke of the danger of allowing haphazard buildings, whereby slums are created, which cause disease and lack of morality. People are entitled to fresh air so houses should be properly spaced. A commission would look after these matters and would also provide proper playgrounds and restricted residential sections. Limitation of population in districts would prevent overcrowding.

Proper building of houses would be looked after and a wide belt of agricultural area around the outside would insure a supply of fresh air. He gave a description of Bowmanville as an ideal town and some of his audience wished to know what part of an "ideal town" a service station would fit in.

Voice of the People

Letters to be printed in the Voice of the People column must be received at The Examiner Office on the day before it is desired to have them published.

ALD. HUFFMAN'S REPLY.

To the Editor of The Examiner:
Peterborough.

Dear Sir,—I note by last night's Examiner that I am accused by "Peterborough" and your editorial writer of being against a town planning commission. This is very far from the fact, as I endorse it thoroughly. The statement about "small town stuff" was made in connection with the introduction of a by-law that had been given no consideration in committee. It is the usual custom in a city this size to have important matters discussed in committee, where they can be thoroughly discussed and all the facts brought out. Then they are submitted to Council in a by-law. To ignore this procedure and bring an important matter before council for a snap decision is what I referred to as "small town stuff." I think any so important matter as a restriction by-law should be thoroughly studied.

Yours truly,
H. C. Huffman, (Alderman).

FIERCE GALES SWEEP EUROPE

Eleven Seamen Are Known To Have Lost Their Lives in Storm.

TRAINS HOURS LATE.

LONDON, Jan. 17. —(Canadian Press). — Gales sweeping the northwestern coasts of Europe have carried eleven seamen to their death, while the interior suffered to-day from a heavy fall of snow.

Stormy seas along the Belgian coast resulted in damage to the dykes at Middlekerke and Breedene.

Blizzards accompanied by a heavy fall of snow created havoc with traffic throughout Germany. Telephone and telegraph service was also interrupted. Express trains to Berlin from Copenhagen and Stockholm were hours late.

Violent snow sorms were sweeping Sweden. There was heavy winter weather in France and Denmark. Great Britain, however, escaped with light snow falls.

FEW MANUSCRIPTS LEFT BY AUTHORS

LONDON, Jan. 17.—(By Canadian Press).—At a London auction the other day the record sum of $37,000 was paid by Dr. Samuel Rosenbach of Philadelphia for five pages of the original manuscript of "The Pickwick Papers." Although high prices are paid for first editions of modern authors of note, it is unlikely any great value will be attached to the "manuscripts" of their works. Every author nowadays, either at first or second hand, makes use of the typewriter. Hence the disappearance of any auction value in the original work.

"The value in original works in an author's own handwriting lies in the fact that they give an insight into the workings of an author's mind," a member of the well-known firm of Sotheran, book dealers, told the Daily Mail. "In handwriting there is something much more personal than is possible to obtain from typewritten script. It affords an index to the character of the author."

George Bernard Shaw almost alone among modern authors, corrects his typed manuscripts in his own handwriting and therein leaves something of the real Shavian character in his manuscripts.

N.Y. LIBRARY ASKS FOR COPY OF BOOK

Great Research Library Wants F. M. Dela Fosse's History of St. John's Church.

The following letter has been received by Rev. Dr. R. C. Blagrave of St. John's Church, from E. H. Anderson, Director of the New York Public Library, which recalls memories of the centenary celebration of 1927, and also points to the recognition given to the work of F. M. DelaFosse in writing the centenary history:

"May we ask if it will be possible for you to present a copy of the publication noted below to the New York Public Library? This work is needed for use in our reference collection, and if you have a copy which you can spare for deposit here, it will be most welcome.

The library, as you undoubtedly know, is the centre of research and study in this section of the United States, and in order that we may satisfy the demands of the great number of readers who use our collection, it is necessary that we have here works relating to all sections of interest. As the publication mentioned would undoubtedly be of much service to the public I trust you may be able to grant our request. The courtesy will be highly appreciated. The library needs the following: 'DelaFosse, F. M., editor; 1827-1927 Centenary History of St. John's Church, Peterborough.' E. H. Anderson, Director."

Search Party Discovers Second Hunting Camp Vacant.

NORTH BAY, Jan. 17.—(Canadian Press).—With the return of a search party who discovered his second hunting camp vacant, virtually all hope has been abandoned for finding Charlie McGowan alive. The trapper disappeared December 9th last and Provincial Constable Albert McDougall with John Selkirk as guide, returned to Franz after locating McGowan's camp, and although it showed signs of having been occupied some time within the past six weeks, there was no trace of McGowan.

Five Others Are Seriously Injured On Baltimore Railroad.

POAST TOWN, Ohio., Jan. 17. —(Canadian Press). — Two members of a Baltimore & Ohio section crew were killed instantly and five others injured seriously, some probably fatally, here to-day when they were struck by a freight locomotive soon after starting the day's work.

All the men lived at Middletown, near where the injured were taken.

The accident occurred when the section crew stopped to watch a north-bound train pass on the double tracks where they were at work, failing to notice a south-bound freight approaching which hit them.

GENERAL BOOTH TAKES HIS CASE TO COURT

Town Planning Endorsed--Motion Stands

Y.M.C.A. MADE FINE SHOWING IN PAST YEAR

Reports of Every Department Show That 1928 Was a Banner One.

DIRECTORS RE-ELECTED.

Receipts From Membership Showed An Increase of $880 Over 1927.

Looking back over the year that has just closed, we, as an Association have reason to be thankful and should look forward to the future with confidence and assurance. The general prosperity of our country and particularly of our own city is reflected in a much healthier situation in the affairs of the Association" began G. H. Roper in reading his report, as general secretary of the local Y. M. C. A. at the annual meeting of the directors held last evening at the weekly supper of the Y's Men's Club.

The reports of every department showed that great strides had been made during the year 1928. The membership of the organization is larger than it has been at any time in its recent history, the activities of the Association are gaining in impetus and financially it is paying its way.

"The financial position of the Association, continued Mr. Roper, has shown gradual improvement. Receipts from memberships were about $880 more than in the previous year and other revenues were increased with the exception of receipts from the social department.

"When it is considered that the Association has a property and equipment conservatively valued at $70,000 without debt against it & that we have passed through a trying period, financially, without the necessity of appealing to the citizens for special gifts to cover operating deficits as most Associations in this country have found it necessary to do the favorable position of our Association will be better realized."

Gaining Ground.

Mr. Roper's report further evidenced that the Religious work of the Association is gaining in vigour and of increasing importance. The Friday Night Supper Club, under the supervision of J. F. H. Wallace, has an average attendance of some fifty young men. The Y's Men's Club too has shown steady progress and during the last month has had three 100 per cent meetings.

Help Immigration.

"The dormitories have been filled to a somewhat greater extent during the year with a considerable number of transients. An outstanding feature of the service has been the co-operation with the immigration scheme under the direction of G. A. Gillespie. In this district many of the young men passing through the city were accommodated without charge and a real service rendered in this way," reported Mr. Roper.

It is said that the Ladies' Auxiliary had done a fine work especially in making supplies for the dormitories.

Directors Re-Elected.

The nominating committee reported that the six directors, G. A. Gillespie, T. Barrie, J. F. H. Wallace, J. R. Marshall, R. L. Dobbin and J. E. Smith, whose term of office had expired, have been re-nominated for a further period of three years.

The vote for their re-election was unanimous.

The report of the Physical Department which is under the direction of Douglas Loomis showed a big increase over previous years in the numbers of members taking physical training and playing games in the gymnasium.

Boys' Accommodaton Outgrown.

The report of the Boys Division showed how important is this branch of the work. It stated in part "At best we can only touch on the salient features of our years contact with boys of diversified ages and tastes. He is a brave man who would attempt to valuate the work of the Council Is Against Plan

Local Council Passes Resolution Objecting To Proposed Gasoline Station.

ENDORSE TOWN PLANNING.

Reports of Year's Work Are Heard at Annual Meeting of Body.

"Resolved: That we express a strong objection to the erection of a gasoline station opposite Confederation Park, and urge upon the City Council that they take the necessary steps to prevent such erection; and that we also beg the immediate attention of the City Council to the need of a thorough scheme of town planning, so that orderly and suitable growth of the city may be safeguarded and promoted."

Such was the text of a resolution submitted by the Women's Art Association, and read by the president, Mrs. W. Blackwell, at the meeting of the Local Council of Women yesterday afternoon, when the annual reports and election of officers took place in the green room of the Y.W.C.A., the president, Mrs. C. H. Edwards, in the chair.

Unanimous Approval

The resolution, as read, met with the unanimous approval of the assembled representatives of the affiliated societies which make up the Local Council of Women, and it was also unanimously decided to have this resolution, as an expression of opinion from the Local Council of Women, read at the meeting called in the Legion Hall last night.

The meeting was chiefly concerned with the hearing of annual reports and the elections, which were carried out in a very snappy manner. A demonstration of amiability in handling a situation arose when it was discovered that six vice-presidents, instead of the usual five, had been nominated. Mrs. Edwards suggested that six would not be out of order, as the Toronto Local Council has seven vice-presidents. The dicision with regard to their order of precedence was settled in a novel way, by giving first positions to those who had been longest in the office of vice-president, and arranging in alphabetical order the names of three newcomers to the position.

New Officers

Officers for 1929 will be Mrs. C. H. Edwards, president; Miss A. M. Lancaster, first vice-president; Mrs. F. H. Dearborn, second vice-president, Mrs. J. D. Deyell, third vice-president; Mrs. J. F. Allan, four vice-president; Mrs. Myles Henry, fifth vice-president; Mrs. W. R. Morris, sixth vice-president; Mrs. K. S. Wightman, recording secretary; Mrs. A. Mowat, corresponding secretary; Mrs. Bruce Law, assistant corresponding secretary; Mrs. E. Wand, treasurer. Convenors of commitees are as follows: Mrs. K. S. Wightman, citzenship; Mrs. A. Stevenson, Equal Moral Standards; Mrs. W. R. Morris, Soldiers and Sailors' Dependents; Mrs. J. Mills, Professions and Employments for Women; Mrs. J. F. Allan, League of Nations; Mrs. W. Blackwell, Art; Mrs. N. H. Sutton, Public Health; Mrs. C. H. Edwards, Mental Hygiene; Miss Amy Wood of the Salvation Army, Child Welfare; Mrs. J. Wearing, Law; and Miss Margaret Hamilton, Education. The convenor of the committee on Household Economics will be chosen at the next meeting.

Mrs. Edwards, speaking briefly at the opening of the session, outlined the program of the year as being concerned chiefly with the establishment in the city of a rest room for women, the securing of proper accommodations at Inverlea Park and the share that the Local Council must take in the furthering of Old Home Week.

Excavators In State of Colorado Uncover Prehistoric Murder Farm

DENVER, Colo., January 18. — Discovery of what is believed to be the remains of a prehistoric "murder farm" in the crumbled stone kiva marking the site of a settlement which existed near Cortez, Colo., about 600 A.D., was revealed by Paul S. Martin, curator of archeology for the State Historical Society of Colorado.

Members of an expedition headed by Martin worked their way with picks through the walls of the ruins and discovered secret underground passages, which are believed to have been used by medicine men to enable them to perform seemingly miraculous disapparances and reappearances of tribal people.

"The shamans (or medicine men) had to make a living," said Martin, "and to do that they had to fool the people. We are certain that but few of the inhabitants of these ruins knew of these secret passages."

Wielding their picks, the excavators penetrated four feet of debris which had accumulated during the centuries and found the remains of fourteen persons, flung into a heap which covered six square feet, Martin reported. So gruesome was the discovery that the site has been named "Charnel House Tower."

PULP AND PAPER INTERESTS MAY ENTER INTO BIG MERGER TO HELP STABILIZE INDUSTRY

Vice-President of Abitibi Expects Word Any Hour To Start Operations.

EXIST ON $55 A TON.

Company Has No Intention of Withdrawing From Northern Towns.

SAULT STE. MARIE, Ont., Jan. 18.—(By Gordon Sinclair, Special to The Examiner).—Probability of a giant merger of Canadian pulp and paper corporations aimed toward price stabilization and control cut put in the newsprint field, gained headway to-day when R. Gray, Vice President of the Abitibi Pulp and Paper Company intimated to The Examiner that "there might be something in it. Mergers and talk of mergers in all sorts of industries are poular to-day" he admitted. "There might be something in this talk of a paper merger but I don't know."

"Who would be in it" he was asked.

"I haven't the faintest idea," was the reply.

The Abitibi Company was the pivot unit in a paper merger 15 months ago which brought $178,000,000 in assets under one management and gave the new corporation vast paper resources and mills at Smooth Rock Falls, Iroquois Falls, Sturgeon Falls, Espanola, Soo and Fort William in Ontario, Winnipeg in Manitoba, St. Anne and Murray Bay in Quebec. Production of the new paper empire was 650,000 tons yearly but since that time output has dropped considerably.

Situation the Same

"What is the general situation to-day?" The Examiner asked Mr. Gray.

"The same as it was yesterday and the day before," he answered.

"Operations have stopped at Espanola and been curtailed at Sturgeon Falls and Sault Ste. Marie."

"And when will production start again?"

"I don't know, but I think it will be soon. It depends, of course, on conferences being held in New York and Montreal. I am expecting word to renew operations not only daily but hourly. Our workers don't want to be idle, our directors don't want our mills to be non-productive, and of course we cannot allow our organization to be broken up."

"There is a suggestion from New York now that a $55 a ton rate be agreed on for newsprint. Could you operate profitably on that?"

"We could exist on it, but it would not be very profitable."

"Is there any danger of your not starting again at Espanola, where the company owns plant, homes and public buildings?"

"None, what ever. Why we have millions of dollars invested there. We would not dream of such a thing. There is no distress among our people because of this shut down. Our salaried employees are all being paid, and while the wage earners are not obtaining any inoome at the present moment, they are still a vital part of our organization, and we are looking after them. I am sure the labor men themselves would be among the first to say we treat them well."

A Vacant Town

What can happen to a one factory town when that one factory closes, as has temporarily happened in Espanola, is pointedly demonstrated at Cutler, now a deserted village between Espanola and the Soo. Lying between the C.P.R. main lines

FIVE ARE KILLED IN TRAIN WRECK

Two Passengers and Freight Train Collids Near Aberdeen, Maryland.

CARS ARE TELESCOPED.

ABERDEEN, Md., Jan. 18. —(Canadian Press). — Deaths from the collision yesterday of two passenger trains and a freight train near here mounted to five to-day, Leon Sweeting of Philadelphia, engineer of the north-bound passenger train, dying at Havre-de-Grace Hospital. Four others of the train crews were killed in the double crash, the cause of which had not been definitely determined. Hundreds of passengers were shaken up but all were able to proceed on relief trains to their destinations.

K. A. Klein, brakeman and V. W. Stewart, flagman, riding in the caboose of the freight train, which had just pulled onto the main track from a siding were killed when the north bound passenger train struck the rear of the slower freight.

Fell Onto Next Track.

Telescoped freight cars toppled on the adjoining track and a heavy south bound train carrying sleeping cars and coaches for connection at Washington with other railroads to the south plowed into the wreckage. Engineer A. C. Terhune and fireman T. J. Kavanaugh of that train were killed in the second crash, and it was hours before wrecking crews were able to get Terhune's body from under his locomotive.

The first four sleeping cars of the express toppled onto an embankment beside the track but the passengers escaped serious injury according to train conductors, and the only patient in a hospital to-day was John Lee, fireman of the north bound train who was treated at Havre-de-Grace for shock.

The accident tore up more than 150 yards of the main line and it was after 7 o'clock this morning more than 14 hours after the collision that service was restored over one track. In over tracks of the Baltimore and Ohio ove rtracks of the Baltimore and Ohio Railroad.

The collisions occurred in a fog and Pennsylvania Railroad officials, although uncertain of the cause, believed that Engineer Sweeting had failed to see two signals, set to show that the freight train was ahead of him.

The investigation will be started with questioning of Leon Sweeting, engineer and J. H. Lee, fireman of the north bound express which crashed into the rear of a slow moving freight, throwing cars on the southbound track, wrecking the New York Washington Express.

Veterans Reject Plea

Will Continue Their Opposition To Service Station in Front of Confederation Square.

AGAINST SECOND STATION.

Hon. G. N. Gordon, Solicitor For Company, Presents Case To Those Present.

Resolved: That this meeting of returned men, having had the matter of the proposed Imperial Oil Company Service Station on George Street explained to them, and having discussed the matter, find no reason to change the present opinion as voiced at the open meeting of returned men on November 29 last.

Thus, after more than an hour's deliberation, the sixty or more returned men who responded to the Hon. G. N. Gordon's invitation to meet him, as a representative of the Oil Company in the Canadian Legion Hall last night, indicated their intention to continue their opposition to the erection of a gasoline service station at 500-2 George Street, directly opposite the Peterborough War Memorial. A second resolution, moved by Comrade Clancy, proposing that the City Council be asked to cancel an already issued permit to another oil company which intends bulding in the block south, until a public meeting be called and both oil companies be dealt with alike, failed to gain a seconder. It also would have provided that a restricted area be decreed within one block of a public square. When the first resolution, moved by Major N. H. Sutton, and seconded by Comrade Clancy, was put to a vote, there were only four hands raised in opposition.

Outlines the Situation

With the election to the chair of President John R. Heron, of the local Canadian Legion branch, little time was lost in getting into action at last night's meeting. The Hon. G. N. Gordon, K.C., who as solicitor for the Imperial Oil Company had called the meeting, was the first to speak. He told of the visit to Peterborough of Colonel Oliver, general manager of the Imperial Oil Company, which took place a couple of months ago, at which time the George Street site was inspected and the general manager assured that there was no restricted area. Some $8,000 had been subsequently invested in the property and the tenants had been given notice before the protest of the veterans had been raised. Mr. Gordon, at this meeting, hoped to show that the erection of the service station would effect a decided improvement rather that proving a detriment to the locality and when the City Council had considered a by-law to provide a restricted area, he had asked them to refrain from any action until this meeting could be called. Mr. Gordon pointed to the large number of ex-service men at the head of or in the employ of the Imperial Oil Company as an argument against any feeling that it was not sympathetic to the veterans. He considered that the present buildings on the site were not particularly suited to face the war memorial, while a barber shop and an auctioneer's business had already been established, which he did not consider more suited than such a beautiful station as the oil company intended building.

In addition, Mr. Gordon pointed out that an automobile show room and service station was in existence immediately north of the War Memorial, while another company had received permission to erect a service station a few hundred feet south.

Want Fair Break.

"We have invested our money in good faith and all we want is a fair break in view of our investment," said the solicitor. He then passed out a sketch of the proposed building which, if erected, would increase the assessment of the property two or three fold and mean employment to some. The trend of business was northward, he contended, and while there might be some objection to the purely commercial side of it, he felt that a restricted area not affecting the barber shop and auctioneer's stand would not be consistent. He believed that the service station would improve the neighborhood.

Comrade Burrows.

Chairman Heron—"You have heard Mr. Gordon present his case. Have you anything to say on the matter?"

The above query brought to his feet Comrade Burrows, who had proposed the resolution regarding the gasoline station at the meeting of November 29 last. He explained that he had not intended any slight to the Imperial Oil Company and that, having been asked by Mr. Gordon one day afterward, he had said he was willing to withdraw the motion—if it was with the consent of the returned men. He was still of the opinion that service stations in such locations were detrimental and felt that it was time the city authorities got down to business.

Favours Public Meeting.

Comrade Clancy felt that it was time for the general public to get

UNITED ACTION IS NECESSARY TO MAKE NATION

Canada is Joined Together in a Partnership of Two Races, Declares Speaker.

DIVERSITY A BENEFIT

Friendship Towards Quebec and French Canadians Described in Four Spheres.

QUEBEC, Que., Jan. 18.—(Canadian Press)—"One nation, two cultures; one nationality, two races; one loyalty, two tongues, on' this the Dominion of Canada is founded, on this the partnership rests by solemn contract, by mutual trust, and thus it must abide or perish," said Graham Spry, National Secretary of the Association of Canadian Clubs, when he addressed the members of the local Canadian Club here yesterday.

"Let it abide and the nation will grow greater, and the world richer than the two race, full of spirit rich in the heritage that time endows, a tongue, a culture, each their own and shared at times in common, may live in amity as one, secure, serene partners in the development of the noble estate to which we are the fortunate successors," said the speaker. "But let it fail, let race seem to dominate, let prejudice take its reins and ride roughshod through the fine bonds that unite us, and confederation shall perish and the people of Canada will be thrust towards a future dark and impenetrable."

Work For Good Of All.

He viewed the diversity of races in British North American in this wise: "We are of different races, not for the purpose of warring against each other, but in order to compete and emulate for the general welfare. It is a benefit rather than otherwise that we have a diversity of races.

"In recent years," Mr. Spry said, "the number of those who have accepted Confederation and have become more awakened to the share of Quebec in the Dominion, more conscious of the existence and virtues of Quebec, more studious and serious in their attitude towards the problem of building a nation on the basis of two races have undoubtedly increased. While their are still clouds on the horizon, while the problem has yet to be finally solved, while there are circles of opinion unfavourable to a bilingual nation one may say to-day that the relations between the races are better than they have been for many years.

Is Found In Four Spheres.

"The growth of interests in, and friendship towards Quebec and French-Canadians may be seen in four spheres of our national life, first, in the policy of governments, second, in the work of historians and students of public affairs, third, in the realm of arts and letters, and fourth, in the work of those many non-partisan and generous organizations of public spirited Canadians who by their interest in public questions exert so healthy and so beneficial an influence upon public opinion."

GREATER FREEDOM IS GIVEN CHURCH

New Reached Agreement Will Permit Individual Diocese to Own Property.

ROME, Jan. 18. —(Canadian Press) —It was learned to-day that greater freedom of action would be given the Catholic Church in administrative and other affairs in Italy by the newly reached agreement on the Roman question.

Notably the accord gives religious organizations such as Monastic Orders the Society for the Propagation of the Faith and the various congregations the right of instituing themselves as corporate bodies with a definite legal status. This would permit them to own property, receive bequests and institute legal proceedings.

By the terms of the accord the individual diocese may own property instead of holding it in trust.

Commissioner Drops Dead at Conclusion Of Emotional Speech

Chancery Court Restrains High Council From Electing a Successor To Bramwell Booth, Deposed Leader of Salvation Army—Papers Are Served.

HEARING IS SET FOR MONDAY MORNING, WILFRED GREEN, K.C., APPEARS FOR GENERAL

Members Had Expected To Be Able To Announce the Name of Their New Commander Before Adjourning—Nominees Did Not State Platform.

SUNBURY-ON-THAMES, England, January 18 (Canadian Press). — Commissioner Haines, vice-president of the High Council of the Salvation Army in session here, dropped dead to-night.

At the conclusion of an emotional speech before the Council, which was considering the election of a successor to Bramwell Booth, deposed General, Commissioner Haines crumpled and fell dead.

Lieutenant-Commissioner Haines was International Secretary for Europe. His home was in London, and he was elected vice-president of the Council on its first meeting.

The High Council was to-day restrained by the Chancery Court from electing a successor to Bramwell Booth, deposed General. The injunction operates until after a hearing by the Court which was set for 10.30 a.m. next Monday.

Bramwell Booth, to-day began the injunction suit to restrain members of the High Council from putting into effect their resolution of deposition.

Wilfred Green, who appeared in court on behalf of Bramwell Booth, told the tribunal that the case was of great urgency because the High Council was in session and would proceed with its action unless restrained from nominating a successor to General Booth.

The application was made before Justice Eve. Mr. Green explained that he asked for an ex-parte injunction against Samuel Hurren and other members of the High Council. He told the court that the defendants had passed a resolution declaring William Bramwell Booth unfit for office and purporting to remove him. He then added that the Council was in session with the object of appointing a successor.

Submits Affidavit

Counsel submitted an affidavit from Bramwell's solicitors giving the grounds upon which the injunction was asked. This set forth that Bramwell became general in 1912, on his father's death under the deed of 1878, which gave the founder life tenure in the Generalship and power to appoint his successor. The General had been so appointed and succeeding Generals were given similar powers.

The affidavit declared that William Booth had purported to alter the trusts powers and provisions in the deed of 1878 by the deed pool of 1904, so as to make provision for action should a General cease to perform his duties of office. Mr. Green told the court that the late William Booth had no right to do this, as it amounted to varying a charitable trust duly constituted under the original deed.

Injunction Served.

SUNBURY - ON - THAMES, Eng., Jan. 18 (Canadian Press). — An injunction granted in London restraining the High Council of the Salvation Army from electing a successor to Bramwell Booth, deposed General, was served on the High Council in session here shortly before five o'clock this afternoon.

The injunction operates until after a hearing by the court which has been set for next Monday morning.

Catherine and Mary Booth, daughters of the General, were present when the injunction, which came as a great surprise, was served. Information from the Council chamber was to the effect that there was a scene of great commotion as soon as it was learned what had taken place in London.

Fearful that the Council, which is on the point of electing a successor to Bramwell Booth, would rush through the election before the writ of injunction could be served, the complainants employed the unusual method of service by telephoning the court's order from London.

Quickly Assembled.

The writ, thus relayed by wire, was

KIWANIS HEAR CAPTAIN CASEY

Work in His Majesty's Prisons is Described By Church Army Leader.

NEW CONCEPTION OF WORK.

As interesting as it was unusual, the address on the subject of "Work in His Majesty's Prisons," delivered at to-day's luncheon meeting of the Peterborough Kiwanis club by Captain Casey, of the Church Army Crusaders, now visiting in the city, brought to many of those present, decidedly new conceptions of modern prison work, as compared with fifteen or twenty years ago. Declaring that the work of the prisons has come to be reformative in its character rather than destructive to the prisoner's body and spirit, as in early days, Captain Casey went on to state that whereas there were 60 prisons in the United Kingdom 20 years ago, with a nightly population of 30,000, there are only 33 prisons with a population of 10,000 to-day. Such information, with references to the work of the Church Army Crusaders, gained for him close attention from the Kiwanians, and a hearty vote of thanks at conclusion by Kiwanian A. W. Reynolds. The latter coupled with his thanks to Captain Casey, the club's appreciation of two particularly pleasing elocutionary numbers contributed by Mrs. Hazel Davidson-McClelland.

Army Crusaders Present

Accompanying Captain Casey were other members of the Church Army Crusaders who have been conducting services at All Saints' Church, as well as members of the Anglican clergy in the surrounding churches, while another guest was Rotarian John Seels, of the sister service club. His especial mission was to invite the attendance of Kiwanians to hear Judge Mott, of the Juvenile Court, Toronto, who will speak under Rotary auspices, in the Collegiate Auditorium on Monday evening at 8 o'clock. All were welcomed by President J. J. Turner.

The Speaker

Introduced by the Rev. J. Douglas Paterson, who had heard him speak elsewhere some months ago, Captain Casey recalled with pleasure a former visit to Peterborough two and a half years ago, at which time he addressed the local Rotary club.

Launching into his main address, he told of how, in 1882, the Church Army had gained the privilege of conducting Home Mission work in the prisons of the United Kingdom, being the only organization of its kind to be accorded such opportunity. He told of the work subsequently carried on and particularly stressed the value of the Probation Act in reducing the number of commitments to the prisons. Captain Casey was particularly proud of the manner in which work in the prisons had evolved from the old tread-mill labor, so unproductive, to the present system whereby the prisoners are classified to carry on the work that they have been accustomed to doing in private life; he

Fifteen Trucks And Private Motor Cars Slid In Ditches On Slippery Highways

Fifteen trucks and private motor cars were counted strewn in the ditches along the highway between Toronto and Peterborough last night and early this morning by a party of local men who had driven to Toronto yesterday afternoon. Treacherous driving conditions were responsibe in practically every instance.

Due to the heavy rains, the highways presented themselves as sheets of ice that made motor travel extremely dangerous, while all down the Lakefront one of the heaviest fogs of the season was encountered. It was so dense near Oshawa that the Peterborough party made five different attempts to continue their journey from that city on the return, only to have to turn back because of the poor visibility and lack of traction. They were finally able to leave for home at about seven o'clock this morning, requiring over three hours to complete the distance.

Washington Senator Suggested Curtailing Loans To Nations With a Larger Navy Than the United States

WASHINGTON, D.C., Jan. 18.—(Canadian Press).—Senator Tydings, Democrat, Maryland, one of the younger members of the Senate and a veteran of the World War, insisted before the Senate yesterday that the United States should attempt to attain a naval parity with Great Britain. He suggested as one means of reducing land and naval armaments of ot her powers that there could be a curtailment of United States loans to countries maintaining large military and naval establishments.

Senator Tydings offered resolutions declaring it to be the sense of the Senate that hereafter the Secretary of State shall not in any manner whatever, sanction an American loan to a foreign country which has an army or navy larger than this nation's.

CHIEF OF STAFF HIGGINS IS GUIDING SALVATION ARMY UNTIL SUCCESSOR IS ELECTED

Army Circles Believe General Booth Will Take No Action in the Courts.

REFORM CONSTITUTION.

Other Members of Booth Family Retain Their Positions Regardless of the General's Removal.

LONDON, Jan. 18 (Canadian Press).—Edward J. Higgins, Chief of Staff, was last night temporary political and legal head of the Salvation Army. He will occupy that station until the High Council, of which he is a member, elects a successor to Bramwell Booth, who was deposed as Commander-in-Chief late Wednesday night.

Army circles were yesterday full of rumors as to what General Bramwell Booth and his family intended to do. There were several reports that he was contemplating action in the courts, but late this afternoon authoritative circles seemed satisfied that he would accept the decision of the council. If that proves to be the case, the position will be greatly simplified.

The council's next task is to select a successor to Bramwell Booth. Most of the conjecture on that point yesterday centered about Commissioner Higgins. He has been the most prominent figure throughout the proceedings at Sunbury-on-Thames, which reached their climax Wednesday midnight.

Depends on General Booth

How long a time will elapse before the affairs of the Army are restored to normal will, in the opinion of the dominant faction, depend largely upon the attitude of Bramwell Booth and his friends. It was reported that they would like to have Higgins as their new Commander.

The Higgins advocates also argued that his election would leave the world control of the organization divided, as it has been, between International Headquarters and Commander Evangeline Booth, head of the Army in the United States. In this connection it was learned that Miss Booth believed that the International Headquarters should remain in London, "the birthplace of the Army."

Declare Their Platforms

All candidates nominated at the high council meeting to-day must openly declare their platforms, thereby practically pledging themselves to carry out the desired reforms. No election will take place until these pledges have been given, for as soon as the new General is chosen the high council is automatically dissolved.

Before this occurs, however, a committee of commissioners will be created to meet periodically and discuss Army policies throughout the world. A virtually new constitution must be made and this would mean the scrapping of most of the present deed polls of charters under which the Army organization has its legal existence in England.

Another Session Necessary

Not all of the details of these wide reforms, with their incidental legal proceedings, can be worked out by the present session of the council. Indeed it was said last night, some of them may well need several years for complete fulfillment.

An Army offcial stated that members are forbidden by their regulations to undertake legal action, and should the Booths defy the rules laid down by Bramwell himself, he thought it would have an unfavorable reaction.

It was pointed out that Mrs. Booth and the General's children retain their positions regardless of Bramwell's removal, and it is claimed that their participation in a law suit would therefore be an infringement of the Army's rules.

The official account of what happened at Wednesday night's meeting at the high council was given out yesterday afternoon.

SOUTHWOLD, Eng., Jan. 18 (Canadian Press).—It was stated at the residence of General Bramwell Booth last night that, "Considering all the circumstances," the General had a comfortable day. It was added on his behalf that he had no statement to make at the present time.

WINNIPEG, Man., Jan. 18 (Canadian Press).—Salvation Army officers in Western Canada support the high council's decision that General Bramwell Booth is unfit to continue as Commander-in-Chief, stated Colonel Gideon Miller, Chief Secretary of the Salvation Army in Western Canada, when questioned here yesterday. Colonel Miller had nothing to say beyond stating that Western Canada Salvationists stood behind the high council.

W. T. CURTIS IS LAID TO REST

Funeral is Under the Auspices of Royal Lodge, I.O.O.F. No. 286.

MANY ATTEND.

(Examiner Correspondence)

HAVELOCK, January 18. — The funeral of the late ex-Reeve W. T. Curtis was held on Thursday afternoon from the family residence on Alexander Street under the auspices of Royal Lodge I.O.O.F., No. 286, of which the deceased was a Past Noble Grand. Notwithstanding the very inclement weather a large number of friends and neighbors, many of them from distant places, turned out to pay their last respects to one who will be sorely missed not only by the members of his own home circle, but by the people of the municipality which he has so ably represented for many years. The service at the house was conducted by Rev. W. R. Archer of Havelock United Church, and Rev. P. C. Howard of St. John's Anglican Church. Mr. Archer, pastor of the late Mr. Curtis, read a few verses from the 14th chapter of John.

Havelock Is Bereaved.

"Havelock town is bereaved, the flag floats at half-mast. The stores are closed, and in every home there as sorrow because of the event which calls us together.

"The United Church is bereaved. I bring to you," said Rev. Mr. Archer, "the sympathy of the church and my own personal sympathy and that of my home." Mr. Archer referred to the conversation which he had with the deceased in the fall of 1927 when both had returned from visiting Banff, Lake Louise, and vicinity. He said when viewing Mount Temple, Mr. Curtis had spoken of the fitness of the name and the fitness of stopping the cars and singing Psalm 121, "Unto the hills around do I lift up my longing eyes.' The speaker quoted the words of Matthew Arnold, who said of his father: 'Somewhere surely afar in that far sounding sphere thou performed the will of the Spirit in Whom thou dost live," and applied them to the present event.

"Again the Oddfellows' Lodge is bereaved. It has lost one of its oldest members. Only Oddfellows know the large demands the obligations of the Order make upon its members, and only the Oddfellows of Havelock Lodge fully realize how well they have been kept and faithfully fulfilled by the late brother, our Brother Curtis. When in his official capacity as Reeve he was appealed to on behalf of someone in need, he was ever sympathetic.

BELMONT COUPLE HONORED BY FRIENDS AT SOCIAL EVENING

Mr. and Mrs. D. Burgess Presented With Floor Lamp and Davenport Table.

RESIDE AT HAVELOCK.

Presentation Address Read By Rev. W. R. Archer of United Church.

(Examiner Correspondence).

HAVELOCK, Jan. 18. — About seventy-five friends and neighbors assembled recently at the home of Mr. and Mrs. David Burgess in Concession 11 of Belmont to present them with a floor lamp and davenport table before they left the homestead which has been in the Burgess family for nearly a century, to move to Havelock, where they now reside.

The following address was read by Rev. W. R. Archer of Havelock United Church, the gifts being presented by Messrs. A. C. Buchanan and W. A. Davidson. Rev. R. F. Stillman of the Norwood United Church, brother of Mrs. Burgess, replied for the recipients, who were completely taken by surprise:

"Dear Mr. and Mrs. Burgess,—A number of your friends and neighbors of your immediate community have gathered in your home to-night to do you honor and to wish you God-speed. We have learned with deep regret that health conditions have made it imperative for you to give up farming, and as a result we are to lose a family from our group in this part of Belmont that we are very loath to lose. In prosperity or adversity, on bright days or cloudy days, we have found you ever the same true friends to all of us at all times and under all circumstances.

"A great writer once said, 'To whom shall I liken a great man, he shall be like the shadow of a great rock in a weary land of shelter in the time of storm.' You, our friends, have been such a rock and shelter in this community.

"And you also, Mrs. Burgess, by your unfailing kindness and helpfulness, have endeared yourself to one and all.

"While we regret your leaving us, we rejoice that you are not going far away, but that as a resident of our village we may often see you and we shall be greatly rejoiced to have you return this call which we are making upon you to-night upon us in our several homes at no very distant date. We assure you, you will be most welcome when your bit of work in your town house is done. Just get into your "Chevie" and roll out and see us.

"We beg you to accept this slight token of the regard and esteem we have for you, and we trust that as the rays of this "floor lamp" fall about you or you rest your book or paper on this davenport table by its side, they may serve to remind you of your old neighbors and the friends you leave behind you.

"Signed on behalf of the neighbors,
"W. A. Davidson.
"A. C. Buchanan."

Double Collision Occurs On Pennsylvania Railroad Last Night.

TWO PASSENGER TRAINS.

ABERDEEN, Md., Jan. 18 (Canadian Press).—A double collision, involving two Pennsylvania Railroad passenger trains and a freight train last night killed four trainmen and seriously injured another. Conductors of the two passenger trains declared none of their passengers was seriously hurt.

Passenger train Number 412, bound from Washington for Philadelphia, struck the freight train, also northbound, just after it pulled from a siding near Short Land station near here. Freight cars toppled onto the southbound track in front of an express train, No. 121, from New York for Washington.

K. A. Klein, brakeman of the freight train, and V. W. Stewart, flagman, were killed in the first crash, and A. C. Terhune, engineer of the southbound express train, and M. Goldstein, his fireman, were killed when their train ploughed into the wreckage. Bodies of the two from the freight crew and of the passenger firemen were removed and taken to an undertaker's here.

CARACAS, Venezuela, Jan. 18 (Canadian Press).—The newspaper El Universal says 25 dead and a great number of injured have been taken from the ruins of the city of Cumana, visited by an earthquake yesterday morning.

The Governor of Cumana sent a wireless message to President Gomez last night that the quake, which occurred at 7 a.m. destroyed every building in the city. He said there were a great number of victims and he requested physicians, medicine and food.

The government is rushing steamers and other vessels with needed supplies, physicians, nurses and tents to the stricken area.

About sixty years ago Cumana was nearly destroyed by an earthquake, and it has since been subject to occasional shocks.

It is the capital of the Department of Sucre and has a population of about 15,000. It is located about a mile above the mouth of the Manzanares River, about 250 miles east of Caracas. Cotton goods manufacture is one of the chief industries.

DOCTOR SHOWS QUICKEST WAY TO END HEAD COLDS

Many Here Who Try Pleasant Hospital Method At Home Get Instant Relief

Doctors realising the need to "play safe in dealing with a cold during changeable weather" are now advising home use of a pleasant hospital method that has given surprisingly quick results to vast numbers of Peterborough people.

C. H. Wilkins, for example, had neglected his cold for a day or so after he had begun to sneeze and cough. Examination showed that one of his nasal tubes was badly congested, his throat was inflamed and the cold was spreading rapidly, causing fear of pneumonia.

Doctors then gave him double strength doses of Ayer's Cherry Pectoral—a concentrated mixture of wild cherry, terpin hydrate and other ingredients which have relieved even the most extreme hospital cases. With the very first pleasant swallow he felt its comforting, healing warmth—from his nose passages deep down into his chest. Almost immediately his head and chest began to clear up and in another day or so the doctor reports, there was no trace left of the cold.

Note: Other cases reported daily—all certified by attending physician.

Just a few pleasant spoonsful of Ayer's Cherry Pectoral now and you, too, will feel like a different person to-morrow. Endorsed by all druggists.

FURTHER WAR IS EXPECTED

For King of Afghanistan May Make Attempt To Regain Throne.

STRONG IN SECTIONS.

NEW DELHI, India., Jan. 18. — (Canadian Press). — News reaching here of the confused political and military postion in Afghanistan indicates that if Amanullah can mobilize sufficient forces he may yet regain his lost throne. He is safe at Kandahar with Queen Souriya. A child is expected to be born, a fact which made the Queen's friends especially anxious for her safety.

Amanullah seems to be in authority over the Kandahar section. It is reported that he also has support at Chanzi. The Jalalabad neighborhood is under control of Ali Ahmed Khan, former Governor of Kabul and the man to whom Amanullah deputized the task of making terms with the Shinwari tribes.

Kabul, the capital, is under the sway of "Bacha Sakao," the northern mountain outlet whose forces defeated Amanullah's troops and then penned up the latter's successor. Inayatullah, in the citadel finally forcing his surrender of the throne.

If Amanullah ultimately triumphs he would be following an example set by Amir Abdurrahman. When that Afghan monarch lost his power, he took up his residence in Turkestan. After fifteen years exile he won back his kingdom.

FOREIGN TRADE IS INCREASING

Canada Fast Reaching Point Where the Exports and Imports Will Be Equal.

MORE OPTIMISTIC.

WINDSOR, Ont., Jan. 18 (Canadian Press)—Reviewing the expansion of Canadian trade within the last few years, Hon. James Malcolm, Minister of Trade and Commerce in the Dominion government, addressed a dinner of the Border Cities Real Estate Board and Chamber of Commerce here last night.

With the rapid increase of export and domestic trade, industry in Canada was fast reaching the point where it would contribute as much to the national coffers as it subtracted for the purchase of goods, the Minister said.

The Canadian people, he declared, were becoming more optimistic and they had a greater faith in themselves and their country than at any time in history. He was not alarmed at the amount of foreign money being invested in the country.

"Capital," he declared, "knows no nationality and no country, and is followed by the owners into the country; so that eventually the capital is nationalized with the nationalization of the owners."

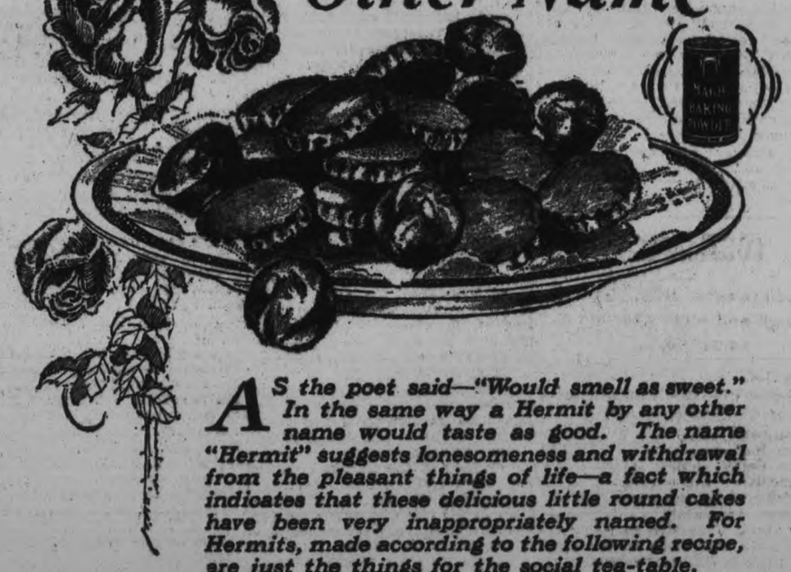
"A Rose by any Other Name"—



AS the poet said—"Would smell as sweet." In the same way a Hermit by any other name would taste as good. The name "Hermit" suggests lonesomeness and withdrawal from the pleasant things of life—a fact which indicates that these delicious little round cakes have been very inappropriately named. For Hermits, made according to the following recipe, are just the things for the social tea-table.

1 cup butter	1 teaspoon each of allspice, cinnamon and nutmeg
1½ cups sugar
3 eggs	2 cups flour
1 cup raisins stoned and chopped	2 teaspoons Magic Baking Powder

(If too dry and liquid is required, add a little cold water)

Cream together thoroughly butter and sugar, then with a wooden spoon work in raisins and spices, then the well beaten eggs, then flour and baking powder which have been sifted together, roll out and cut with very small cutter. Bake in moderate oven about 10 minutes.

PRODUCE.

MONTREAL, Que., January 18 (Canadian Press).—The export trade in grain yesterday was of a very limited character, which was attributed to the fact that foreign buyers did not respond to the offers made by exporters.

Owing to the continued strength in barley futures at Winnipeg the local market for cash barley was strong, and prices were marked up another two cents per bushel with car lots of Manitoba feed grades quoted at 84c per bushel, ex-store here. There was no change in prices for other grains, but the undertone was firm.

A moderate amount of business was done in spring and winter wheat flour and values were firm.

The demand for all lines of millfeed continued fair and the undertone to the market was firm. Standard grades of rolled oats sold well at steady prices.

A feature of the egg trade was the stronger feeling that developed for fresh eggs and jobbing prices were marked up one to two cents per dozen. Other grades were unchanged. Receipts were 935 cases.

The inquiry for butter showed further improvement and the tone of the market was steadier. Receipts were 24 packages.

Extreme dullness again marked the cheese trade, but values were unchanged. Receipts were 38 boxes.

A fair trade was done in potatoes and values were firm. Prince Edward Island Whites sold at 85c, Green Mountains at 90c per 90 pounds, in Mountains sold up five cents at 70c bags, and New Brunswick Green per 90 pounds, in bulk.

Canadian beans sold at $5.50 per bushel, wholesale. The demand was fair.

PRODUCE MARKETS.

OTTAWA, Ont., January 18 (Canadian Press). — There is a better undertone apparent on the large consuming egg markets of the east and in Montreal prices have reacted sharply upward from the low point established last week-end. Reports from the West, however, indicate that conditions there are still weak with no improvement in sight.

Montreal — The egg market here is firm and active under a good demand. Receipts from Ontario are much lighter. Yesterday British Columbia eggs are selling on spot at extras 43, firsts 40, pullet extras 37.

Calagry — Receipts here continue heavy with the prevailing cold weather apparently having little effect on production. Stocks on had are accumulating and the market is weak. Dealers are quoting at country points for ungraded eggs extras 26-27, firsts 23-25, pullet extras 20, seconds 17-18.

CHICAGO GRAIN.

CHICAGO, Jan. 18 (Canadian Press).—Despite an immense rush of selling to realize profits, corn yesterday not only outdid the season's highest price record, but finished at almost the top. Estimates were current that as a result of crop damage the 1929 probable export surplus of Argentine corn has been curtailed nearly 100,000,000 bushels compared with 1928.

Closing quotations on corn were nervous, ½ to ½c net higher; wheat ¼ to ⅝c up; oats ¼ to ⅝c advance, and provisions varying from 2 to 5c decline to a rise of 12c.

Word of renewed hot winds devastating corn in Argentina was largely responsible for last minutes advances yesterday in the corn market here. Just before the wind-up, values had temporarily given way under increased pressure caused by profit-taking on a huge scale, and had receded to below Wednesday's latest figures. A quick rebound in prices, however, came while the final gongs yesterday were clearing out the crowd of traders in the corn pit. During most of the day, too, as was the case at the finish, the advantage lay with the buying side of the market, despite talk of substantial European cancellations of export purchases of corn in the United States.

Apparent insufficiency of rain in Argentina acted as a continual stimulus to purchase corn, and all deliveries soared early to above any quotation touched heretofore this season. News that the corn market in Buenos Aires had jumped 2⅛c a bushel and that the Liverpool market was up 2⅛c a bushel was regarded by many in Chicago as confirming acute need of copious additional moisture for the Argentine corn crop. Furthermore, this news was supplemented by advices that rain now in Santa Fe province, Argentina, where damage has been heavy, will only prevent worse deterioration and that harm already done is irreparable. Santa Fe province, it was added, raised about one-third of Argentina's total corn crop last season.

Wheat and oats sympathized with corn strength, July delivery of wheat and all deliveries of oats going up to a fresh top-price level for the season. Sleet storms and ice packs reported in domestic winter wheat territory counted as a bullish factor, and there were Kansas reports of considerable wheat being fed to livestock, bran costing more than farmers were receiving for wheat.

Provisions also were responsive to the course of the corn market.

TORONTO PRODUCE.

TORONTO, Jan. 18. —Egg prices were steady at 36 to 37 cents a dozen for fresh extras, delivered in Toronto yesterday, and quotations to the retail trade were unchanged at 45 to 47 cents for fresh extras, in cartons.

The market was extremely dull and retailers were not inclined to place committments in large volume. The day's sales in the egg market nevertheless reflected increased confidence on the part of distributive buyers, to the extent that fresh supplies were absorbed in small quantities more readily than in any session of the week.

Quotations to the retail trade remained at 38 to 39 cents for fresh firsts, with storage firsts, in which the bulk of trading took place, at 29 to 31 cents. Storage extras in cartons were quoted generally at 34 to 36 cents per dozen.

"It is some time since egg markets have undergone the sharp price declines which have featured the situation in the past few weeks," says The Egg and Poultry Market Review. Values everywhere are considerably below last year and in Montreal British Columbia eggs are jobbing on spot from 12 to 13 cents below the corresponding date last year.

"The price declines of the past week have been perhaps the most drastic of the present season. Production has continued to show an increase and there have been heavy accumulations on the more important markets. As pointed out above, however, recent developments should improve the situation materially.

"Except for the increased demand following naturally on the lower values, conditions in British Columbia show little change. With the heavier production on the prairies these markets have practically been closed to British Columbia and there have been slightly heavier shipments to the East. This movement during the past week totalled 13 cars," The Review concludes.

Butter at 40-cent Level.

Butter sales were made at a general level of 40 cents for No. 1 creamery, delivered in Toronto. New Zealand supplies ruled at the level for domestic butter, and the undertone of the market was firm at 40 cents on spot. Quotations to the retail trade remained at 44 to 45 cents for No. 1 creamery prints, with No. 2 creamery prints at 42 and 43c.

The cheeses market was extremely quiet, prices showing no change at a general range of 20c bid with 20 1-2c asked for No. 1 Government graded new large cheese, waxed, delivered in Toronto. Quotations were entirely nominal as a result of the extremely dull market situation of the past week. Buyers continued to show very little interest in placing commitments in quantity.

The poultry market was quiet at unchanged prices.

MRS. THOMAS LEWIS

NORWOOD, Jan. 18 (Examiner Correspondence).—The funeral of the late Mrs. Thomas Lewis took place on Monday afternoon from the residence of her son-in-law, A. Small. The service at the house and grave was conducted by the Rev. J. P. McLennan. Interment was made in the Norwood Cemetery.

Deceased, whose maiden name was Mary Sloan, was one of the oldest residents of this district. She was born in Dummer in 1846. Since the death of her husband about 19 years ago, she had made her home with her daughter, Mrs. A. Small.

She is survived by two daughters, Mrs. Small of Norwood, and Mrs. R. Crowe of Edmonton, Alta., and one son, Timothy of Detroit. Three brothers and one sister also survive her.

REV. CHARLES MEARING

NORWOOD, Jan. 18. (Examiner Correspondence)—The remains of the late Rev. Charles Mearing were brought here for burial on Tuesday from East Whitby. For the past few years he and Mrs. Mearing, who was buried here just two weeks ago, had made their home with their daughter, Mrs. E. Love of East Whitby. Previous to this they had lived in Norwood for a few years after Mr. Mearing was superannuated from the ministry.

MARTIN GEARIN

PENELLA, Jan. 19.—(Examiner Correspondence)—The passing away of Martin Gearin who died at St. Joseph Hospital, Peterborough, on January 14th, came as a shock to this community. Mr. Gearin who lived with his invalid sister, and who gave up his farming duties to care for her in her needs with the help from others, ever faithful was his love and attention to his sister until Sunday morning, January 6th he was seized with a stroke. He and his sister were rushed to St. Joseph's Hospital, Peterborough when he passed away after a few day's illness. The late Mr. Gearin was most highly respected as a good neighbor and a true friend, his quiet reserved disposition was never changed, he was ever willing to help his neighbor if ever called upon.

Much sympathy is extended to his loving sister, Mary Ann, who is now in the hospital and his only brother Michael of Warkworth, from whose home the funeral took place on Wednesday morning, requiem service was conducted by Rev. Father Ferguson.

BROADCASTING IN QUEBEC.

It was announced a short time ago that the Quebec Government, for the purpose of providing education and entertainment for the people of that Province, proposed to establish a provincial broadcasting station.

That is a progressive step upon which the Government of our sister Province deserves congratulations.

It is to be hoped, however, that the report that the Quebec Government intends to operate its station without any regard to direction from Ottawa or Washington is without foundation.

States or Provinces making use of the air without any regard for other broadcasting would speedily create anarchy in the radio world, and while the Quebec desire for independence in this respect may be sympathized with, it can not in the interests of good radio reception be encouraged.

There must be control of broadcasting, and while the present conditions are far from ideal, they are infinitely better than could be hoped for were broadcasting units given a free hand to use the air how and when they wish, which is rumored to be the intention of the Quebec authorities.

WILL GET AT THE FACTS.

The announcement that Mr. Hoover proposes to appoint a non-partisan commission to investigate the prohibition enforcement situation and other angles of the prohibition question indicates a businesslike attitude on the part of the President-elect that is not unexpected in view of his record.

He can be relied upon to appoint a committee composed of capable and impartial citizens whose findings should be of real value, not a body of rabid drys or ardent wets, incompetent because of their extreme views to fairly investigate the existing conditions.

There are many features in connection with the enforcement of the Volstead Act that seems to call for reform; so far as we on this side of the border can size up the situation the prohibition regulations are more honored in the breach than in the observance in many sections of the United States, and are not only broken with impunity, but have resulted in more or less general contempt for other laws and the development of a dangerous frame of mind on the part of many citizens.

Mr. Hoover is pledged to enforce the Volstead Act, and his first move is what might have been expected of him, that is an adequate effort to get at the real facts and to discover ways and means of making the administration of prohibition regulations more effective.

GOING AFTER TOURISTS.

The City Council at its first meeting this year made a grant of $400 to the Trent Waterway Development Association.

That is an investment that is amply justified—in fact, the city fathers could have doubled the appropriation without being accused of being extravagant or unbusinesslike.

The Waterway Association is the publicity medium by which the Trent district is brought to the attention of thousands of prospective tourists each year.

It has given ample evidence of its ability to get results along this line, and its record of achievement merits support from all the municipalities served by the association.

There is surely no need of saying very much about the value of tourist traffic to this district; there is too much concrete evidence of it in the pockets of the people to require any proof.

Tourist trade is indeed one of the major industries of Canada, and wise is the municipality that adopts an aggressive policy of advertising its claims as a tourist centre.

The Waterway Association has earned the confidence and co-operation of the whole district through what it has done to bring tourists into this part of Ontario.

HARD TO PLEASE THEM ALL.

The difficulty of arriving at an immigration policy that will come even close to pleasing the majority of people in this country is illustrated by the attitude taken by the United Farmers of Alberta on this question.

The Alberta organization condemns the existing immigration schemes as "largely futile" and wants the present immigration policy discontinued and the money diverted to the improvement of the status of Canada's present population.

They would, in fact, discourage the settlement of people from any country in large quantities.

Contrast that viewpoint with the demands voiced by the Border Cities Star and other papers, which forcibly declare that Canada's chief need is more population and which are not very particular where immigrants come from so long as they come in sufficient numbers, and you have an idea of the difficult situation with which Hon. Robert Forke and the Federal Government have to deal in endeavoring to draft a policy of immigration that will stand some chance of meeting with popular approval.

The Alberta attitude represents one extreme, while those who call for unrestricted immigration make up the other; and the policies announced by the Minister of Immigration seem to fairly hit the middle course.

CAUSE FOR REJOICING.

In the January issue of Natural Resources, Hon. Charles Stewart, Minister of the Interior, reviews the work of the department during the past year and makes optimistic predictions regarding the future. "In all parts of this great country the pulsations of economic prosperity are being felt as never before," he says. Referring, first, to the mineral resources of Canada, he notes with gratification that the output is increasing in variety as well as in quantity—the list of minerals now produced, both metallic and non-metallic, comprises all of those of outstanding industrial value with a few exceptions, "some of which may yet be mined in the Dominion." Mr. Stewart regards it as "more than possible" that the record mineral production of 1927 will be found to have been surpassed when the final figures for 1928 are completed. The production of oil in Western Canada is increasing, and drilling is being attended by very satisfactory results. The extensive deposits of copper, nickel, lead and zinc have attracted world-wide attention. Then there is the development of hydro-electricity, 550,000 horse power having been added in the past year, making a total turbine installation of 5,328,000 horse power, with another 1,200,000 of new developments in course of construction. Quebec, Ontario and Manitoba are the Provinces where most of this development has taken place. The net annual value of the products of the forest is put at about $475,000,000.

The care of the native Indians and Eskimos is another responsibility of the Minister, who reports that their well-being is being furthered in many practical ways. Suitable employment has been provided by encouraging certain handicrafts for which the native races are peculiarly adapted and large areas have been set aside for their use, "serious consideration being given to the establishment of domesticated reindeer and conservation of musk-ox." Another important matter referred to is the exploitation of Canada's recreational resources, by which tourists have been attracted and brought in great additional revenue to the country, estimated at no less than $276,000,000.—Hamilton Spectator.

WHERE ONTARIO LEADS THE WAY.

The Workman's Compensation Act of Ontario has been accepted by the British Trades Union Congress as a model measure, and efforts will be directed towards the securing of a like law for Great Britain. This is a high compliment to the late Sir William Meredith, who, as Chief Justice for Ontario, framed the act, and to the late Sir James P. Whitney, whose Government enacted it—the first of its kind in Canada, and one of the first in the world. The decision of the British workers was not arrived at hurriedly, but is a result of three years' investigation covering workmen's compensation laws the world over. And, remarkable as it may seem, the British Trades Union Congress believes no other workmen's compensation law provides the same protection and such liberal benefits, without undue burden upon industry, as the Ontario Act.

Under the present British Act insurance against injuries of workmen is carried by employers in private insurance companies and the courts adjudicate claims for injuries arising in employment. This, British workers claim, has been a costly and wasteful process. In submitting its recommendations to the recent convention of the British Trades Union Congress the committee pointed out that in a Government report, issued in 1920, returns from insurance companies for the previous five years showed that for every £100 paid in premiums only £49 were paid in benefits and that this diversion, from its proper channel of money paid for compensating injured workers, became so pronounced that in 1923 an agreement was made between the Government and the insurance companies whereby the amount of premiums to be used for administrative purposes was limited to 40 per cent. and in 1924 and subsequent years to 37 per cent. During 1926 the income of British insurance companies from employers' liability insurance, after making the necessary adjustments in respect of unexpired risks, was £5,638,321, and from interest and dividends on reserves £145,224, making a total of £5,783,545. Of this sum £3,248,032, or 56.16 per cent., was allocated to payments of compensation, including legal and medical expenses incurred in connection with the settlement of claims. Of the balance, £1,886,213, or 32.61 per cent., was spent in payments for commission (8.98 per cent.) and the expenses of management (23.6 per cent.), leaving £649,300, or 11.23 per cent. for profits. Of the original cases dealt with by the courts in 1926, 74.4 ended in the workers' favor, indicating that many cases were taken to the courts unnecessarily and money wasted which should be available to properly compensate injured workers in place of harassing them and treating them as malingerers.

A very different condition exists in Ontario. The insurance is carried by the state in an accident fund raised by assessment upon industry. Administrative costs are exceptionally low and have never exceeded more than 2 per cent. The purposes of the Ontario Act are to provide adequate recompense for accidents to workmen in their employment; to get rid of litigation; and, to secure promptness and certainty of payment to workmen or their dependents without unduly burdening the employer. It extended the workmen's protection to all accidents arising out of and in the course of the employment instead of merely those caused by the negligence of the employer; it placed the adjudication of claims in the hands of the Workmen's Compensation Board, upon which labor is represented, instead of the courts; and in most industries to which it applies—and that is practically all with the exception of agriculture—it made employers' liability collective instead of individual.

Under the Ontario system a workman knows if he is injured in his employment he will receive proper medical and hospital attention, free of cost to himself, and in addition will receive 66 2-3 per cent. of his wages during all of the time he is unable to follow his occupation, with liberal allowances for permanent total or partial disabilities. There is no litigation, confusion or delay.

The Ontario Act has been copied in all the Provinces with the exception of Saskatchewan, Quebec and Prince Edward Island. True, Quebec did enact a new law which came into operation on Sept. 1, 1928, but while labor admits it is an improvement over the old law, it fails to recognize the principle of state insurance and collective liability. Quebec, as yet, can see no good in any form of public ownership.

In view of the outstanding features of the Ontario Act, it is not surprising that British workers have accepted this law as model legislation and is a fitting tribute to the people and administrators of this Province. —Ottawa Journal.

EDITORIAL NOTES AND COMMENT.

The Globe truly says that every dollar sent to Wales is a real advertisement of Canadian prosperity—and as a demonstration of practical loyalty.

Ald. Huffman declares that he is not opposed to town planning. That's fine, and he can prove it by refusing to let the Confederation Square area be invaded by a service station.

Mr. Hearst has been talking about "a violent effort to enforce prohibition in the United States," which is something that has not yet been in evidence.

This seems to be a normal winter after all with all the accessories, including the January thaw and a Lindsay success in the Tankard series.

The present controversy is giving the Salvation Army the sort of publicity it would prefer to do without.

Horoscope

The Stars Incline, But Do Not Compel

SATURDAY, JANUARY 19, 1928.

(Copyright, 1929, McClure Syndicate.)

According to astrology this is an uncertain day in planetary direction, but benefic influences seem to dominate.

It should be fairly favorable to merchants and manufacturers who will find much promise of increased business, the seers declare.

Lawyers are to occupy much attention at this time, it is foretold, and sensational lawsuits may be expected.

Honors to men of legal training will be numerous, it is forecast, but financial wizards are to meet with special good luck that brings favors from Europe.

The press is to gain marvelously in power everywhere in the world, if the stars are rightly read, and will discover state secrets that may precipitate serious troubles.

The total eclipse of the Sun next May is looked on as of serious import for Mars will be setting over the eastern part of the United States. Astrologers declare that increase of armaments will be demanded.

Countries ruled by Jupiter are to benefit greatly. Success and prosperity continue in America. Mexico is to be much favored.

As the year advances women will be more and more involved in important public service, astrologers forecast. They will work with men on the same plane of intelligence and training, for the era of woman's special place in national acclaim has passed, and equality must be proved by ability, the seers point out.

The theatre today is subject to especially fortunate planetary guidance, it is announced. Dramas worthy of those who hold high ideals of acting are to be produced, it is prophesied.

The vogue of materialism and the exploitation of unpleasant subjects in art and literature is passing, the seers explain, for stars that uplift the soul and appeal to the intellect are to gain power.

The stars at this time are supposed to be favorable to the use of coal, iron and lead in many lines of manufacture.

This is read as a day of good luck for the President of the United States who will benefit greatly in a surprising manner.

Persons whose birthdate it is may gain through a secret financial transaction, but there is a certain amount of danger from losses. There should be care to prevent robbery.

Children born on this day have the augury of success in life. They are on the cusp of Capricorn and Aquarius, and should be remarkably gifted. They are likely to be of fine nature and noble aspirations, but inclined toward stubbornness.

Why We Do What We Do.

WHY WE ARE EMBARRASSED

By Mehran K. Thomson, Ph.D.

(Author, The Springs of Human Action)

No one likes to be embarrassed. Embarrassment is due to self-consciousness, fear, social pressure, wounded pride, etc. It throws the individual off balance, disorganizes him, and frequently causes him to blush. The sense of shame is a common cause because it interrupts the course of action so that a person is torn between two forces. He can't go ahead and he can't turn back.

The person who is thoroughly bad or consistently good has no sense of shame or embarrassment. He functions as a unit, a total personality. The moment doubt, fear or a sense of guilt appears, the personality is split, and you have a confused organism. The gears do not mesh; and like a standing automobile out of gear, stepping on the accelerator only makes a lot of noise and confusion. There is no progress.

Embarrassment, however, does not always involve guilt or sense of shame. One may be embarrassed when he is made painfully self-conscious, as when he is being decorated for bravery or otherwise applauded and congratulated for doing something worth while. The man who faces bullets bravely may break down before the applause of his friends. In the first instance, he is thoroughly organized and acting as a unit; in the second his mind is filled with ideas about himself when he needs to be thinking of other things. He is a split personality.

Some people are more easily embarrassed than others. The immature, the inexperienced and the timid suffer the pangs of embarrassment more frequently than the accomplished public speaker who has confidence in himself.

Poise is the greatest antidote for embarrassment. It is born of confidence, experience, presence of mind and the lack of the inferiority complex. It implies that the personality functions as a unit, and refuses to be divided against itself.

Why do you do what you do? Ask Dr. Thomson. Write care of this paper, and send stamped addressed envelope for reply.

FAVORS GAS STATION

To the Editor of The Examiner:

Sir:

As an old member of the 93rd I think the new filling station opposite Central Park would be a great ornament with its flowers in summer time and its bright lights every night. It would be much better than the houses there now and the sales shed.

THE LUCKIEST LADY

TODAY'S INSTALMENT

XXXVI—JEALOUSY!

There was a moment of blank silence, then Martin let Marna go and moved back a step, shrugging his shoulders.

"That was unlucky!" he said coolly.

Paget came forward; his fists clenched and his face white.

"He will kill him," Marna thought, and wondered why it only seemed like a dream. She wanted to move forward, to step between the two men, but her feet seemed chained, and Renny Martin said again calmly, a detestable smile on his face:

"That was unlucky, George! Don't be mad about it. It was the moonlight that went to our heads."

"Went to your heads! Do you dare to insinuate that my wife——"

Marna moved then; she ran to her husband and clung to his arm.

"George! Listen to me! Don't be foolish! It was nothing; you must know it was nothing—just silliness! Oh, please don't make a scene here! Remember Biddy——"

He turned on her like an enraged giant.

"Biddy! Did you remember her a moment ago?"

"George—dear George—" But he was past listening. His vague jealousy of weeks past had burst into fire at last, and there was murder in his eyes as he looked at Renny Martin.

"Hound! You despicable hound!"

Martin shrugged his shoulders. He was pale, but otherwise he appeared quite unmoved.

"I rather think you're barking up the wrong tree, old fellow," he said. "You do me the honor of being jealous of me—but wouldn't it be better if you turned your attention to Hugh Hubbard? Or do you think he is too far away?"

There was a tragic silence. Paget stood like a man turned to stone, then suddenly he seemed to awaken; he lunged forward and struck Martin a terrific blow between the eyes.

Marna screamed.

"George—George, I beg of you!"

But she was like a child clinging to him; he put her aside as easily as if she had been a doll.

"Let me go—stand away, or you'll get hurt. I've waited for this for weeks. I've always guessed—known. Now then, you cringing hound!"

Marna fled towards the stairs. In the doorway she met two men.

"Stop them! He'll kill him. Oh, I beg of you—it's all a mistake!" she panted incoherently.

One of the men knew her well.

"Why, Mrs. Paget——"

"It's George and Renny Martin—they've quarrelled. Oh, stop them! George will kill him!"

The two men passed her hurriedly and went on to the roof garden.

"You go down—keep away," they told her.

Marna went back to the ballroom. Biddy had just finished a dance with John Blair.

"Wish I'd known you were coming, Mrs. Paget," he said as Marna joined them. "I only came along at the last minute. Is Mr. Paget here?"

"Yes, but we're just going home. Biddy, we must go home at once. Fetch your wrap and mine. George will come presently."

"But, Marna——"

"At once, Biddy."

John Blair looked distressed.

"Is anything the matter? Anything I can do?"

"If you'd find Harnigan. He may not be here, as I told him not to come till two. If he's not there, please get me a taxi."

Biddy came back with the wraps; she gave a swift glance at Marna, but asked no questions. She knew that something dreadful had happened; when they were driving away in the taxi Marna told her a little.

"George quarreled with Renny Martin and knocked him down." She shivered at the memory. Suddenly she covered her face with her hands and began to sob.

"Oh, I wish I were dead! I wish I were dead!"

The Little Flapper did not know what to say; she sat very still with her eyes closed.

Lately life had seemed a riddle far beyond her understanding.

When they got home she went to her own room, leaving Marna alone.

"I'll come if you want me," she said, but she knew Marna did not want her.

The Little Flapper went to her own room and sat down on the bed, not attempting to undress.

It seemed an eternity before she heard Paget come home. She heard the opening and shutting of the door, and then for some time she heard him moving about downstairs. At last he came up.

Biddy went to the door and peeped out. She saw him go straight to his dressing-room. She waited for some time, then she undressed and crept shivering into bed.

Marna had not undressed. There was a fire lit in her room, for the May nights were still chilly, and she sat close beside it, her eyes fixed on the flames. She tried to think, but her head felt muddled and confused.

She could only remember what Martin had said:

"You do me the honor of being jealous of me; but wouldn't it be better if you turned your attention to Hugh Hubbard, or do you think he is too far away?"

What else had he said after she left him?

Well, it did not matter much: nothing mattered.

She heard her husband come upstairs and go into his dressing-room; but she still waited.

She had not locked the door, and every minute she expected to hear him trying the handle; but the time went by and he did not come. She looked at the clock; it was past two! An hour and a half since she came back from the Star Club.

Was anything the matter with him? Had he been hurt?

She softly opened the door which led between the two rooms and spoke her husband's name.

"George!"

"Well?"

It was quite dark, and she groped along the wall and found the switch. Then she saw him sitting on the bed in his shirt sleeves, staring before him. He did not even look up when she entered, and she went swiftly to him.

"Oh, are you hurt?"

He raised his handsome head slowly at that, and laughed mirthlessly.

"Hurt! Do you think that hound could hurt me—eh, what?"

"I was afraid, that was all."

"Afraid!" His eyes scanned her face. "Why were you afraid?"

"That you had been hurt."

"Oh! Thought perhaps it was somethin' else."

He looked like a big, overgrown boy, and Marna's heart was tender towards him.

"What else could it be?" she asked. He did not move or answer for some time, then he caught her by both arms, pulling her almost roughly towards him.

"How much truth is there in what he said?" he demanded thickly.

She caught her breath sharply.

"What do you mean? What did he say?"

"You heard. About you and.... Hubbard."

"Do you believe what he said, George?"

"I'm askin' you to tell me the truth. I'll believe you; you know I will."

"Well?"

If only her brain would work; but she felt as if something had clogged it, keeping it at a standstill.

"Well—ask me what you want to know," she managed to say.

Paget rose to his feet still holding her by both arms.

"He said that you and Hugh . . . Oh, damnation! I can't tell you. He said things that a decent man can't repeat to his wife. He said . . . God, I wish I'd broken his blasted neck!" He broke out in sudden passion. "Hugh's my friend —been my best friend all his life, and he said that you and he—you and he—been behind my back—meetin', and things like that! In love with each other—my wife and my best friend. . . ."

He let her go suddenly and turned away, covering his face with big, shaking hands.

"Know such things do happen, of course," he said brokenly. "But you never bring 'em home to yourself, I suppose. Doesn't seem possible. I've always done my best for you. . . . never thought the earth good enough for you. . . ."

"Oh, George! George!"

He turned round swiftly.

"Isn't it true. I'll believe you, whatever you say! I know Martin's a lying hound, and I know you're the whitest woman who ever lived. I adore you Marna, you know that. I'm not clever, or anything to be proud of—but I'd give my life for you. . . ."

"Oh! Oh!" Marna sobbed.

She was ashamed to the depths of her soul by his sincerity and simplicity. At that moment she would have given half her life for the power to tear Hugh Hubbard out of her heart, and yet she knew its futility.

She would always love him because she could not help it. She would never forget him, because the day of miracles was at an end; but at least she could pretend!

"Isn't it true?" Paget asked again.

He was almost sobbing. He bent over her, his face broken with grief, but he did not touch her.

"I'll ask pardon on my knees if it's not true, Marna. . . . Ought not to have believed it at all, I know, but somehow—well, I was mad with jealousy. . . ."

He laid his hands on her shoulders now, surprisingly gentle hands for all their bigness.

"Do you—is it—is it Hubbard you want, Marna, and not me?"

The tears were running down Marna's face, and she felt as if her heart were breaking. She shut her eyes before the tragedy of George Paget's as she answered him in a whisper:

"Oh, you know it's not!"

"Marna!"

He dropped clumsily to his knees before her, his arms round her waist.

"Forgive me, Marna!. . . .I've been a fool—but that swine was so sure—swore he could prove it! I wish I'd killed him! . . . I will kill him if he ever comes here again. He might have ruined both our lives—might have smashed everythin' up, don'tcherknow! But now I'm so happy! . . . Lord, I could cry with happiness, only I know you'd think I'm a fool. So I am a fool—about you, anyway. Kiss me and say you love me! Put your arms round my neck. Marna—kiss me, Marna! . . . Oh, my darling!"

Marna had slipped fainting into his arms.

Uncle Wiggily

A Bed-Time Story by Howard R. Garis

UNCLE WIGGILY'S QUEER ADVENTURE

(Copyright, 1929, McClure Syndicate.)

"Uncle Wiggily! Oh, Uncle Wiggily!" called Nurse Jane Fuzzy Wuzzy to the rabbit gentleman as he hopped down the front steps of his hollow stump bungalow one morning.

"Yes! What is it?" inquired Mr. Longears as he turned around.

"Please bring me a yeast cake when you come back!" called the muskrat lady housekeeper. "Don't forget; will you?"

"Oh, no!" promised Uncle Wiggily. "You can easily remember," went on Nurse Jane. "A yeast cake is small and it is light and you can easily put it in your pocket."

"That is a milkweed," said the rabbit.

"I'll remember," and Mr. Longears twinkled his pink nose as he hopped along over the fields and through the woods.

Now it happened that it was a cold, blustry, snowy day and Uncle Wiggily was so busy trying to keep his fur coat rom blowing off him that he quite forgot about Nurse Jane's yeast cake. It went right out of his mind. And of course he was looking for adventures all this time, but he could not seem to find any.

So along in the afternoon when it was almost time to go home and the rabbit gentleman had not yet found an adventure to cheer him, he thought he had better turn about and hop back to his bungalow.

Just then he was near a clump of weeds that grew up out of the white snow which covered the ground and more white sonw was falling from the gray clouds overhead. And then, all of a sudden, Uncle Wiggily saw one of these weeds nodding and bending more in the wind than any of the others bent or nodded.

"That is a milkweed," said the rabbit gentleman as he noticed it. "And it has a seed pod filled with fluffy cotton."

All of which was true enough, but still, and with all that, it did not make an adventure yet, though it was almost time. Uncle Wiggily could see that because the seed pod of fluffy cotton on the tall weed was bending and swinging faster and faster as if something would happen soon.

And then, all of a quickness, Uncle Wiggily happened to think:

"Nurse Jane told me to remember to bring something home with me. What was it? Dear me, have I forgotten? No, it must be that she wanted a pod from the milkweed plant! I know she said it was small and light and would easily go in my pocket.

"Now this milkweed seed pod is as small and light as a feather and it will fit in my pocket so I will pick it and take it to Nurse Jane."

So, not thinking at all about the yeast cake Nurse Jane had asked him to bring, but thinking it was the fluffy seed pod Miss Fuzzy Wuzzy wanted, Uncle Wiggily picked it and put it in the pocket of his fur coat. And then he hopped on through the wind and storm of snowflakes toward his hollow stump bungalow where he knew it would be warm and light.

"Tra la la!" sang Uncle Wiggily aloud as he hopped along. "I am very smart. I didn't forget what Nurse Jane told me to bring. Tra! La! La!"

And then from somewhere in the storm a tiny little voice sang:

"Tra! La! La!"

"That must be the echo!" said the rabbit gentleman and he hopped on faster than before. Soon he was at the hollow stump bungalow.

"Dear me!" said his wife. "I feared you were lost in the storm."

"No, here I am home safe!" said Uncle Wiggily, kissing her.

"Did you have an adventure?" asked Nurse Jane.

"No," answered Mr. Longears, "I didn't, except that I heard an echo singing after me. And I didn't forget to bring what you told me, either, Nurse Jane! There it is!" He took out the milkweed pod. "Something small and light that easily went in my pocket. There it is!"

"Oh, my goodness! What a funny rabbit!" cried Nurse Jane. "I told you to bring me a yeast cake and you bring a milkweed pod. Ha! Ha! Ha!"

And then from within the seed pod of fluffy cotton came a voice:

"Ha! Ha! Ha! Tra! La! La!"

"What's that?" exclaimed Nurse Jane in surprise.

"It must be an echo inside the milkweed pod," spoke Uncle Wiggily. "But I never knew such a strange echo! Oh what a queer adventure this is going to be!"

"Quick!" cried Mrs. Longears. "Open that pod and let us see the echo. Though how one can see a noise, which is what an echo is, I don't understand."

Carefully Mr. Longears began opening the fluffy cotton seed pod. And such a surprise as he had!

Lyrics of Life

By Douglas Malloch

ALL THESE YEARS

After all these years I sit
Looking down the road I came.
What's the use of all of it,
What's the good of gold or fame?
Little praise, and so much blame,
Little laughter, so much tears—
Where the winnings in life's game
Left me after all these years?

Once I loved, and then I lost,
Heaven took my loved away.
Yet it all was worth the cost;
I can bow my head and say:
Every joy of that old day
In some memory appears,
Every moment, sad or gay,
Still remembered, all these years.

Is the summer not worth while,
Just because it brings the snows?
Ah, the summer leaves a smile,
Even after summer goes.
Many a day a sweetness knows,
Many a night a whisper hears,
And I see a gate unclose
Worth the waiting all these years.

News From the Mines

Through
Solloway, Mills & Company

Towagmac

A report from our field man in Rouyn states that 14 feet of low grade copper ore, in addition to the 14 feet of 6 per cent. copper, was intersected at the 500 foot level of Aldermac. Lateral work is being pushed at the 1,125 and it is anticipated that results in this section will be had in the near future. A new hoist is being installed to further speed up work.

Amulet

High grade ore continues to be had in the east raise of Amulet and timbering is now in progress. Very slow progress is being made in diamond drilling the "E" orebody with the small gas drill now being used, but we understand a steam drill is being sent to the property and will also be used in the exploration of "E". This hole will be spotted 100 feet north of the original hole put down in this section, which was 500 feet east of the shaft.

Mining Corporation

Last night the Mining Corporation shaft on the Murray property had reached a depth of 484 feet and it is understoood a conference will be held to-day to determine whether or not any lateral work apart from station cutting will be carried out at the 500 foot horizon before the shaft is completed to the 900 foot horizon. It is just possible some exploratory diamond drill holes may be put out horizontally from the 500.

Crow River

We understand the Crow River group of claims optioned to Connell interests have been extensively resampled, and assays have fully substantiated previous checking. We believe it has now been decided to immediately form a company to take over this property and start exploration work immediately instead of waiting until the spring opening, as was originally proposed.

Dunkin

The recent strength in Dunkin has no doubt been due to expected results in cross cutting now under way from the 250 foot level. Although no information is as yet available, it is just possible the downward continuation of the main deposit has already been intersected. On surface the main vein was traced for 1,500 feet, and while good average values were obtained, some of these samples were spectacularly rich.

Canada's Trade Balance Favorable For the Year

OTTAWA, Ont., Jan. 18. — (By the Canadian Press). — Canada's favorable trade balance for 1928 stands at $151,812,281. This compares with $151,664,074 for 1927, $275,597,357 for 1926 and $392,905,447 for 1925.

Domestic exports for the twelve months totalled $1,349,751,403 an increase of $131,000,000 over 1927. Imports amounted to $1,222,317,916 and were $135,000,000 heavier. Exports of foreign origin were valued at $24,378,794 and were $4,000,000 greater.

Mineral Production Amounts To $100,000,000

TORONTO, Jan. 18.—The value of minerals produced from mines in Ontario during 1928 is estimated at a total of $100,000,000 by W. R. Rogers, director of publication and statistics, Ontario Department of Mines. "Never before in the history of the province, outside abnormal war years, has there been such a marked advance in the value of mineral production as the figures from 1928 will show when compared with 1927, the record year to date," says Mr. Rogers. The metallics are estimated at $70,000,000 as compared with $62,631,255 for 1927; the non-metallics at $750,000,000 as against $7,638,665; structural material at $16,000,000 compared with $14,160,552 and clay products at $6,500,000 against $5,853,035.

IMPERIAL LIFE HAS GOOD YEAR

Amount of Insurance in Canada More Than Doubled in Eight Years.

267 MILLIONS

"Life insurance in Canada at the end of 1928 stood at the amazing total of 5½ billion dollars, an increase during the year of 500 million dollars," said G. A. Morrow, president of the Imperial Life Assurance Company of Canada, in the course of his remarks at the annual meeting of the company, "and in the last eight years the amount has more than doubled. This is attributable to the steadily increasing prosperity of the country—prosperity which is spread all through the Canadian business fabric."

His own company now has over 267 millions of assurances in force on its books which is an increase of more than 25 millions over the previous year. The cash income from premiums and other sources reached $12,800,000 which is about double the amount of five years ago. Payments to policyholders and beneficiaries amounted to 4½ million dollars. Having added nearly 6¾ millions to the assets, a total of nearly 52 millions is now noted or again a doubling of the figure of five years ago. The company's investments in Western Canada are steadily increasing and arrears of interest on mortgages from that part of Canada are less than a third of what they were a few years ago.

The appointment of new directors, Pat Burns of Calgary, and Raymond Donat of Montreal, during the year, was noted and a very favorable New Year's business is forecasted.

British Investors Re-enter Canadian Market, Indications London Interest In Canada Revived

I think there was one outstanding influence in the unexpected change from stagnation in midsummer to unprecedented activity in the autumn, namely, the re-entry of investors in Great Britain into our market on a larger scale than at any time since 1912-1913. Earlier in the year there had been indications of a reviving interest on the part of London in our market situation. It is believed for example that considerable amounts of Brazilian Traction sold to Canada from Great Britain in 1927 were repurchased in 1928. The transmission in the spring by which control of the British Columbia Electric property was transferred from London to Montreal was followed by London absorption of a large amount of the securities of the new British Columbia Power Corporation during and subsequent to the original offering of the shares of the new company. On balance, London was credited with being a substantial buyer of Canadian stocks in the first six months of the year.—Joseph H. Copeman, Greenshields and Co.

ISSUES REACH NEW LEVELS ON NEW YORK CURB

Strong Pool Support Evidenced By Heavy Volume of Trading.

NEW MONEY ON MARKET.

Bond Offerings Total $32,600,000 For Week—Business News Favorable.

NEW YORK, N.Y., Jan. 18 (Canadian Press).—The stock market gave an impressive demonstration of strength to-day in the face of a further increase in brokers' loans to around record high levels. Weakness developed in a few high-priced specialties, but the general list moved upward with scores of issues lifted 2 to 13 points above yesterday's final quotations. Trading was fairly heavy in volume, several blocks of 5,000 to 35,000 shares changing hands, indicating strong pool support.

A flood of new money appeared in the market and the call money renewal rate was marked down to 6 per cent. While New York banks, as shown by the Federal Reserve statement, are putting little new money into the market, the recent high rates have attracted a large influx of funds from out-of-town banks and large corporations. New bond offerings this week totalled $32,600,000, as against about $16,000,000 last week, and $123,000,000 in the corresponding week last year.

Business news continued generally favorable. The Sinclair Consolidated Oil Corporation announced that it had acquired a block of vacuum oil in exchange for some French oil securities. Prospects of stock splitups stimulated bullish activity in several high-priced specialties, Johns Manville scoring an extreme gain of 13 points to a high record at 213.

International Nickel new stock was a spectacular feature, opening 5¾ points higher and then extending its gain to 75-8 by touching a new high record at 64 7-8. National Cash Register ran up more than 5 points to a new high at 107 3-8.

U. S. Steel Common returned to the leadership of the market in the early afternoon by climbing 3 points to 175, a new high price for the present stock. Standard Plate Glass advanced 3 points to 8.

Canadian Pacific, with a gain of nearly 6 points, was the leader in the railroad group.

TRADING LAX ON STANDARD

Amulet and Vipond Among the Leaders—Reach Higher Ground.

FEW ISSUES GAIN.

TORONTO, Ont., Jan. 18. —(Canadian Press). — With activity still confined to a few issues which have maintained prominence during the past week, a rather slow session was experienced on the Standard Stock and Mining Exchange this morning. Only about 42 per cent of the stocks appeared on the board and some of these had only enough sales to register. Amulet and Vipond as usual held a good deal of interest and both moved to slightly higher ground, the former 5 points to 3.10 and the latter 1 to 1.12.

Wright Hargreaves weakened under profit-taking and lost 6 points of yesterday's spectacular rise, to sell at 1.80. The majority of stocks of this calibre were at a standstill.

Kirkland Lake was in constant demand and soared 17 points to 1.73 with a good many sales at 1.75. Nipissing scarcely appeared and sold 15 cents higher to 3.40, while Siscoe in active selling moved up to 1.14 for a net advance of 8 points. Dome Mines sold around 10.00 an increase of 20 while Noranda continued its see-saw movement, rising again to 62.75 for an increase of 50 cents. Grandview provided a bright feature, firming two points higher at 76.

Big Missouri continued as leader in the Western Canada section and in fairly active liquidaion, dropped four cents to 1.53 while Central Manitoba under similar conditions lost 2 to 70. Pend Oreille after selling around 12.50 recovered to 13.00 but still 20 cents lower than its previous close.

The Twin Cities of Port Arthur and Fort William lead the world in grain storage, capacity of 70 million bushels.

INTERNATIONAL REGISTERS SIX POINT ADVANCE

More Than 70,000 Nickel Shares Change Hands in Active Session.

ON TORONTO CURB.

Trading Lax in Other Well-Known Issues—Page-Harris Down.

TORONTO, Ont., Jan 18.—(Canadian Press.)— Tremendous demand, coupled with rumors of "finds" of extraordinary nature in the Frood mines, sent International Nickel up to a new high for all time at the Toronto Stock Exchange to-day. In transactions totalling more than 70,000 shares the issues sold up from 59 to 65 and at noon was standing firmly at 64, for a net increase of six points. With the bulk of trading centred on Nickel and two or three of the prominent leaders, many of the well-known issues as well as the cheaper stocks, failed to register in the sales list.

Cockshutt Plow was second only to the International stock, and in a turnover amounting to more than 28,000 shares sold 7-8 higher to 49 3-8. The other industrials, with the exception of Page Hersey which gained 2 points to 131, lost ground. Massey-Harris was off 1 to 91. McKinnon 2 to 67 while Riverside Silk Mills failed to retain its advance of yesterday and fell 5 points to 30.

In light trading scattered around the Board, Weston's moved up 2 points to 98, C. Flour 1 to 40, and Canadian Dredging 1 to 75½.

Service Stations Equipment continued in strong demand on the curb and in the heaviest turnover for the week climbed 2 1-8 points to 75 3-8. International Petroleum followed closely in the footsteps of Service Stations, but failed to make as much headway, holding steady 3-4 higher at 57½. The remainder of oil stocks were not prominent and the beverage was scarcely touched.

Manufacturers' Life Forty-Second Report Shows Splendid Growth

The forty-second annual report of the Manufacturers Life Insurance Company for 1928, as submitted to policyholders and shareholders at the annual meeting here on the 17th of January, shows splendid growth.

The new insurance issued during the year exceeded that of any previous year in the history of the company, and amounted to $87,322,612. The gain in insurance in force also constituted a record, bringing the insurance in force to $453,323,912.

The assets of the company increased by over eleven million dollars and amounted to $87,495,370. Over thirty-six million dollars of this sum is invested in Government, Government Guaranteed, Municipal and Public Utility Bonds, while first mortgages on improved real estate comprised $30,706,377. The net rate of interest earned was 6.4 per cent.

The payments to policyholders also constituted a record and amounted to $8,387,508. Beneficiaries under death claims received $2,925,758, while payments to living policyholders for matured policies, annuities, etc., were $3,507,617, and dividends to policyholders $1,954,133. In addition to the above the company set aside $2,521,781 for dividends to policyholders in 1929. The mortality was again very favorable.

Surplus earnings in 1928 were very satisfactory and have made possible an increase in the scale of dividends payable to policyholders for the fifth consecutive year.

Corn Reaches New Mark On Chicago Grain Market

CHICAGO, Ills., Jan. 19.—(Canadian Press).—Reports of increasing drought damage to the corn crop in Argentine pushed all corn prices to new record height to-day. Some deliveries of wheat and of oats went also to above any level reached heretofore this season.

Opening ½ to 1½ higher, corn subsequently held near to the initia range. Wheat started at ¼ to ⅜ to ⅝ advance, and afterward rose a little more. Oats followed other grain. Provisions were easy.

COMMISSIONER OF ARMY DEAD

quickly served as the councillors were assembling to expedite the election of the new Army chief. A warning of Bramwell's move had been received here and the Council excitedly attempted to gather a quorum immediately to forestall service of the injunction—but too late.

The legality of this method of service may give rise to test proceedings.

An official communique issued after to-day's meeting said:

"The High Council met this morning for the purpose of electing a successor to General Booth. On reassembling for the afternoon session the Council was informed by the Army's solicitor that he had just heard General Booth had applied to the court and obtained an injunction restraining further proceedings of the Council until after a hearing on Monday next. The High Council received this announcement without comment, and after prayer adjourned until Tuesday morning."

Expected Announcement.

It was stated on good authority here this afternoon that the name of the High Council's choice as new commander of the Salvation Army might be announced this evening. The Council apparently had not been notified of the injunction granted in London when this word was given out.

The commissioners abandoned as invidious the plan of having nominees openly state their platform. Instead there was a general discussion of suggested reforms in which each member was free to air his views. It was believed that a definite program would be agreed upon before any vote was taken on the election of a new General.

It was explained that whoever he new Commander might be, he would not be asked to give definite pledges but would be considered honorbound to carry out the wishes of the High Council to which, as a commissioner, he would have agreed before election. There doubtless will be incorporated in the reforms a new and easier method of deposing the General, thus anticipating a possible failure of the next Commander to carry out the Council reforms.

FIRE DESTROYS FINE RESIDENCE

M. B. Slack, of Lyn Village, Suffers Heavy Loss This Morning.

DEFECTIVE STOVE PIPES.

BROCKVILLE, Ont., Jan. 18. — (Canadian Press). — Fire early today gutted a three-storey stone building in the village of Lyn, formerly used as an hotel and lately occupied as a dwelling by its owner, M. B. Stack, and destroyed part of an adjoining frame building occupied by John C. McCrady as a drug and grocery store.

A unit of the Brockville brigade which went to the fire at 2 o'clock, assisted in preventing the spread of the fire to other buildings. The fire, believed to have started from defective pipes, was discovered by Mrs. Stack, who, with her husband, was able to reach the street without, however, saving any of their belongings. Stack was burned about the hands in getting out. Several outbuildings attached to the place, one of them containing a motor truck, were also destroyed before the fire was brought under control at 4 o'clock.

RETURNED MEN STICK TO THEIR FIRST MOTION busy rather than leaving everything to the War Veterans, who might come to be regarded as agitators, since the newspapers had given them credit for every paltry question.

While he had no objection to service stations in the city, he felt that with the city promising expansion, a restricted area should be declared. "We have sufficient number of stations now, and it is time the business section was restricted," said Comrade Clancy. Not long ago, the Oil Companies sent in their high pressure salesmen who persuaded individuals to put in gasoline pumps. Now they come in and take the business and the council kicks the old residents off. The companies have the money to get them the choice locations. Our City Engineer should have consulted with the City Solicitor in this, but it came out too suddenly in the newspaper and if it hadn't been for the gun question there would have been no service station question.

"I don't think the city has a leg to stand on in preventing the Imperial Oil Company from building a station, if in came to a point of law. There should be a public meeting held to choose a deputation to go to the Oil Company in the matter, rather than putting it all off on the returned men.

Major N. H. Sutton

Voicing the belief that it is not desirable to have any more of the neighborhood alienated by strictly commercial enterprises such as service stations, Major N. H. Sutton addressed Mr. Gordon and District Manager Arthur Blade, in the hope that their company would be big enough to see the advantages of respecting that belief. That this feeling against the erection of the service station opposite the memorial was general, he felt from the protests of the local council of Women, the Chamber of Commerce and other public bodies.

A Tense Moment

There had been no indication of strong feeling until suddenly Comrade Burrows jumped to his feet and demanded of the chairman that another member of the meeting be ordered from the room, for a remark regarding the memorial. The other retaliated that he had only remarked that the war memorial might become hidden, and therefore asked that Comrade Burrows withdraw his charge. "All right then, I do" said the latter, and sat down.

Comrade "Buck" Guerin, as seconder of the resolution of the November meeting, here arose and stated that he too would be willing that the resolution be withdrawn, provided that the rest of the men were willing.

Mr. Gordon did not wish the inference to go abroad that there had been any pressure brought to bear on the employers of any of the war veterans. He recalled that Mr. Burrows had said "I am willing to accept what the majority decide."

Defend Proposed Building

Chairman Heron pointed out that it would be necessary to make some move toward getting an expression of opinion from the meeting, such as a resolution. Manager Blade at this juncture, stated that his company would be unable to obtain another site on George street if it gave up this one while Comrade Dainton felt that the veterans had acted too hastily at that meeting in November. He felt that the service station would be in the nature of an industry and as for the individual service men being asked to remove their curb pumps, he did not believe in one man having a number of jobs as was the case where a grocery man, for instance had a gasoline pump in front of his store.

Previous to the moving of the above resolution as adopted, Captain R. E. Layfield spoke of the days when he had helped choose the site of the Canadian Legion Hall, and when there had been dreams of new city buildings, Masonic and other buildings being erected in the neighborhood surrounding the War Memorial square. These were still very possible and would mean an enclosed square second to none in beauty as surroundings for the Memorial. He believed that there had been a general disapproval of some of the best sites in the city being taken up by service stations as on Charlotte street, and declared that the city fathers, at their meeting the other night had passed the buck after being told by their solicitor that they could pass a by-law to restrict gasoline and oil stations.

Given to Solicitors.

The Hon. G. N. Gordon was asked this morning by The Examiner what he thought of the meeting called last night, and he stated that it was a very friendly and a very fair debate. He said that he had an opportunity of meeting a number of his old friends that he had not seen for a considerable length of time, and he felt that there was no question, if the resolution had not already been passed some weeks, regarding the service station on George Street, that the meeting would not have raised the objections made, but he thought that any man felt that as they had once reached a decision in a matter it was not good policy to go back on it.

President J. R. Heron, of the Canadian Legion, according to the Hon. Mr. Gordon, was well acquainted with Parliamentary procedure, and knew when an amendment was a negative of a motion, and he so ruled on one occasion.

Mr. Gordon said that he was handing the matter over now to the general solicitors for the Imperial Oil Company, because he had done as he was instructed to do, and that was to present the case to the City Council and the ex-service men.

W. T. CURTIS IS LAID TO REST

I would say of our brother departed:

"About Een Adhem may his tribe increase
Awoke one night from a deep dream of peace
And saw within the moonlight of his room
Making it rich and like a lily in bloom
An angel writing in a book of gold.
Exceeding peace had made Ben Adhem bold
So to the presence in the room he said 'What writest Thou?'
The vision raised his head and with a look made of all sweet accord answered:
The names of those who loved the Lord.
And is mine one? said Abou. Nay not so replied the angel.
Abou spoke more low and cheerily still and said
I pray thee then write me as one who loved his fellowmen.
The angel wrote and vanished. The next night he came again with great awakening light,
And showed the names whom loved of God had blessed,
And how Ben Adhem's name led all the rest"

This poem, dear friends, Mr. Archer concluded, tells the story. Brotherhood was large in him. He loved his fellowmen.

The speaker made mention of the real spirit of brotherhood exemplified in the life of the late Mr. Curtis not only in his immediate relationship with the Independent Order of Oddfellows of which they were both members and under whose auspices the funeral was being conducted but in his kindly relationship with his fellowmen everywhere.

The pallbearers were: G. A. Gillespie of Peterborough, ex-reeve W. Montgomery of Norwood, ex-reeve Scott of Asphodel, reeve Smithson of Otonabee, reeve Leahy of Douro, ex-reeve Welsh of Otonabee.

Born in Almwick

The late Mr. Curtis was born in Almwick county 68 years ago and received his education at Centenary school west of Roseneath. He has been a resident of Havelock for forty three years, coming here in 1885. For two years he was engaged in lumbering but in 1887 went into th employ of the C. P. railway Company. For the past thirty-two years he has successively conducted a furniture and undertaking business. He has always taken a keen interest in municipal affairs and in all has served the village about twenty years, nine of which he was reeve. The latter office he has held for the past five years and in 1923 had the distinction of being warden of the county. His tenure of office expired at eleven o'clock on Monday forenoon, his death being reported at the inaugural meeting of the council the same evening. He was also a member of Havelock Lodge A.F. and A.M. No. 435 and in politics was a staunch liberal. Left to mourn his loss besides his wife are three daughters, Miss Madge Curtis, of town, Miss Dorothy of the Dental College, Toronto and Misses Bessie and Helena of Lakefield and Maxwell respectively, one son Bruce of town, two sisters, Mrs. Robert Barlow of Toronto, and Mrs. Thomas Arthur of Penella; four brothers, Col'n of Toronto, Robert of Smith Falls, Harrison of Edmonton, Alberta and John of Roseneath.

Among those, besides the pall-bearers, from out of town who attended the funeral were: Ed. M. Elliott, county clerk of Peterborough; Reeve Rye of North Monaghan; F. D. Kerr, K.C., of Peterborough; D. McFarlane, road engineer of Peterborough; Mr. and Mrs. R. Barlow of Toronto, Mr. William Weese of Toronto, Mrs. J. Smallshaw of Smith Falls, Mr. Arthur Backus of Bowmanville, Mr. W. B. WATER METRES FOR CHICAGO

Check-up Will Be Made On Amount of Water Being Used in Windy City.

PERMIT EXPIRES.

WASHINGTON, D.C., Jan. 18 (Canadian Press).—Renewed pressure will be brought to bear by the Federal Department of War to compel the installation of meters in all industrial plants in Chicago as a check on the water diverted by the city from Lake Michigan for industrial purposes. Commenting on the recent decision of the Supreme Court that the Chicago diversion was not warranted as a means of sewage disposal and must be stopped, Secretary of War Davis to-day informed the Canadian Press that the metering order of last year would be enforced irrespective of any plan which Special Master Charles Evans Hughes might work out for the regulation of the Chicago water diversion.

Chicago is authorized under a permit separate from that dealing with the diversion of 8,500 cubic feet per second for sewage purposes to take a certain amount of water for industrial purposes. Not more than 2,000 cubic feet each second is supposed to be taken for this purpose. This water also finds its way into the Mississippi River, and constitutes an additional diversion from the Great Lakes watershed.

Expire December 31.

The question of renewal of the present permits which expire December 31 next will not be dealt with by this administration. The new government which comes into effect on March 4 will probably include a new Secretary of War, and Mr. Davis naturally will not take any steps in the brief weeks left of his regime.

Application probably will be made for renewal of the diversion permit long before Mr. Hughes can take evidence and formulate his plan as ordered by the Supreme Court.

Chicago will want to know whether the permit will be renewed for the full amount and it will press for full renewal. The Supreme Court, however, severely criticized Chicago for taking such a large quantity of water and specifically ordered Mr. Hughes to find means of reducing the amount.

Mr. Davis to-day would not comment on the main diversion. "It will wake Chicago up to the necessity of carrying out the conditions of which the permit was issued," he remarked, "and it will speed them up on their installation of meters I should think. We have been pressing them to get ahead with it and will keep after them."

The charge has been made by states opposing Chicago that plants there are extravagant in the use of water, and it was to check up on this that the metering system was ordered. The meters have been installed in a few plants but the system is by no means completed.

CLOSE BIG HOUSE FOR NINE YEARS

One of Largest Estates in England is to be Closed.

LONDON, Jan. 18 (By The Canadian Press).—Clumber House, one of the most gracious if not one of the largest of the lordly estates of this country, is to be closed for nine years. The present Duke of Newcastle succeeded to the title on the death of his brother last May. It is understood motives of economy, more particularly as prompted by the incidents of the death duties consequent upon his succession to the title, have caused him to take this step.

Clumber is situated in the fairest part of Nottinghamshire, in the heart of what is known as the Dukeries. Not far off is Chatsworth, the seat of the Duke of Devonshire, and Welbeck, the seat of the Duke of Portland. Clumber House possesses a priceless collection of pictures which for the next nine years are to be on loan to the Corporation Art Gallery in Nottingham. The church at Clumber is very fine. The former Duke of Newcastle was an ardent Anglo-Catholic. The present Duke was formerly Lord Francis Hope. A little more than a year ago he presented to Dorking The Glory Woods, a famous beauty spot well known to Londoners, to mark the coming of age of his son, H. P. C. Hope. Besides Clumber House the Duke has seats at Harrowlands, Dorking, and Castle Blayney, County Monaghan, Ireland. His decision to close Clumber House recalls the interest aroused last year by the reopening to the public of Haddon Hall, the seat of the Duke of Rutland, in the Peak of Derbyshire, after it had been closed for nearly 200 years.

LORD MAYOR'S FUND OVER FIVE MILLIONS

Million Dollars Spent Providing Clothing For Children of Unemployed.

LONDON, Jan. 18. — (Canadian Press Cable). — The fund for relief of distress in the mining areas, sponsored by the Lord Mayor of London and his fellow-Mayors throughout the country, reached a total of $2,600,000 to-day and with the Government-al contribution will total $5,200,000. But there is still an urgent need for more. Already $1,000,000 has been spent providing shoes and clothes for the children of the unemployed. In South Wales, Durham and Northumberland, the fund is beginning to undertake supplementary feeding of children through the education authorities, but in other areas relief will be confined for a time to providing clothing and shoes for the women and children.

Sir Kynaston Studd, Lord Mayor of London, will probably make a personal visit to some of the stricken areas shortly to assure himself the relief work is going ahead satisfactorily.

IS RETIRING.

WASHINGTON, D.C., January 18 (Canadian Press). — Formal announcement that he will retire from the Cabinet on March 4, and make his home in St. Paul, has come from Secretary of State Frank B. Kellogg.

It is the Secretary's intention to resume the practice of law in his home city.

ROBERT ANDERSON CHOSEN CHAIRMAN

Edward Fennell Appointed Secretary Treasurer of Havelock Board of Education.

HAVELOCK, Jan. 18—(Examiner Correspondence).—Robert Anderson was re-appointed chairman of the Havelock School Board at the inaugural meeting of the Board held in the school on Wednesday evening. Mr. Anderson said he considered it an honor to be chairman of the Board of Education. He had done his best in the past in the interests of the school and he would continue to do the same for 1929.

A discussion took place regarding the appointment of a secretary-treasurer. Some of the board were of the opinion that if a trustee fulfilled his duties as trustee he has all he can handle without the work of secretary, and also that the board could expect more from an outside salaried man. With this in mind the board interviewed Edward Fennell in connection with securing his services as secretary treasurer. Mr. Fennell received the appointment at a salary of $75 a year.

Trustee Jamieson reported in connection with repairs done to Miss Robert's room, which consisted of changing blackboards, installing new blackboards and repairs to cloak room. An account from T. Cummings for this work, amounting to $9, was passed.

Mr. Jamieson also stated that he had a communication from W. C Hildred, former principal of the Continuation School, claiming that he had a right, as Cadet Instructor, to the grant of $100 which the Board received for 1927. The matter was laid over until next meeting the Board being of the opinion that this should be used for the requirements of the cadets.

Robert Buchanan was re-appointed caretaker of the school at a salary of $900 a year.

F. B. McAdam received the appointment of school attendance officer at a salary of $25 a year.

On motion Trustee Jamieson received the sum of $75 for his services as secretary-treasurer for 1928.

Principal Yuill reported that the school attendance was coming back to normal. The first day school reopened there were seventy pupils absent, while Wednesday there were only between thirty and forty.

The chairman declared the chair of Trustee Fraser vacant and the secretary was instructed to notify the village clerk with reference to this vacancy on the Board and request him to take the proper steps to fill this office at the nomination meeting to be held in the council chamber on Friday, February 1. Owing to the fact that Mr. Fraser's duties on the railroad prevent his regular attendance at the meetings his absence for four consecutive meetings left the Board no option in the matter as the school act states that the Board shall declare the seat vacant, the member being disqualified.

The secretary was also instructed to send a letter of condolence to the family of the late ex-Reeve Curtis on behalf of the board and school section of the village.

All the member of the Board will make an inspection of the school premises on Thusday afternoon

Trustees Brewster and Evans were appointed as a repair committee for 1929.

MARIE, Ont., Jan. 18 (Canadian Press).—Owing to shortage in food supply, wolves in the Bachawana area are rapidly departing to other fields, according to Peter Jones, a trapper, who has just returned from that section. Jones contends that the wolves have destroyed what was at one time, the best deer-breeding ground in Algoma.

OMEMEE BRANCH HEARS ADDRESS

Dr. Munro Gives Interesting Talk at Warsaw Society Meeting.

(Examiner Correspondence.)

WARSAW, January 18. — Dr. Munro gave a very interesting address in two parts on Thursday evening at the open meeting of the Women's Institute. The first part was to read a letter and to give a talk on preventing respiratory diseases.

The following contributed to the program: Miss Eileen Hamblin, recitation, "Mrs. Maris"; song "When the Birds Were Singing", Miss Velma Payne; song, "Starry Night", Cressa Payne; recitation, Mr. Anderson, "The Calf on the Lawn"; song, The Misses Velma Payne and Eileen Hamblin, "Kitty Walker", accompanied by their ukeleles; song, Mrs. Vivian Jackson, "Genevieve."

Dr. Munro's address is as follows. 'Not so many years ago, certain diseases of the digestive tract were very common and considered unavoidable. Now it is know they are avoidable and allowing them to be contracted is considered almost a crime. Diseases of the respiratory organs are very common and very dangerous. Plain common sense can do a great deal to eliminate them. Common colds are often forerunners of pneumonia and it is well to avoid crowds where there are likely to be people with colds. If you must sneeze or cough, do it into a handkerchief. Good ventilation and good food are essential. If you have a cold, go to bed and stay there. Do not do as a woman did. whom I told to go to bed, and say that you have certain things to do and must stay up. This woman had to go to the hospital and pay for the privilege of staying in bed, and had to hire a girl besides.

Children, especially, should be well-clothed and fed and should get lots of fresh air. Low shoes and thinly clad legs are bad. Common sense and plain, every-day hygiene will go far in preventing respiratory troubles." The Doctor gave several examples to stress his plea and put things very strongly.

The other part of his talk was on the old-fashioned family doctor. Twenty-five years ago, when Dr. Munro graduated he did so, after listening to lectures on the practice of medicine being the service of medicine. He spoke of old Dr. McClure in "Bonnie Briar Bush," who took it upon himself to send for the greatest surgeon in England to come and operate upon Elspeth. "The family doctor knew and was personally interested in everyone of his patients. It had been said of them that they were very simple and he tried to keep people from being ill, but made their living by curing the sick. Consequently they made a living, but were never rich. Since the war the practice of medicine has become commercialized. There are specialists' set fees and this idea of specialization has an immense influence over people. Even a diagnosis is now too expensive for many. Specialists and groups cannot have the same emotional interest.

Now villages are advertising for doctors and the country doctor will soon be one of the past. In some places in the United States there are no doctors within thirty-five miles of the cities. Everything seems to go cityward. The truth is that 90 per cent of all ailments can be diagnosed by a family physician, and certain condition defy all of them. The tendency to-day among the majority is not to think. People will not think and so have no confidence in themselves and therefore none in anyone else."

Sometime the Doctor will give a talk on his twenty-one, (twenty-two in April) years in Warsaw, and to the women he will give a talk on pre-natal care.

PRESENTATION MADE

Mr. and Mrs. John Wood Honored by Members of O.Y.P.A.

KEENE, January 18. — On Tuesday evening the members of the O. Y.P.A. gathered at the home of Mr. and Mrs. John Wood, of Villers, to wish them joy in the coming years. The Keene orchestra supplied the music for the evening an dat 11.30 an appropriate address was read by Miss Bertha Limhirst. At the proper moment, Earl Doris presented the bride with a beautiful woollen blanket in gold with a gold silk bedspread to match.

The groom made a very suitable reply, thanking the members for their gifts and invited them to come again at any time.

The orchestra then played "For they are jolly good fellows" with the members joining in. Dainty refreshments were served and the remainder of the evening was spent in cards and dancing.

IRELAND IS PICTURED AS UNITED NATION

All Irishmen Will be Under One Government, Predicts Great Novelist.

DEPORT DE VALERA

Difficulties Increased by the Insistence on Using the Gaelic Language.

MONTREAL, Jan. 18 (Special to The Examiner).—Ireland as a united nation with all Irishmen under one government and with the average Irishman one of the strongest supporters of the British Empire, is the confident prediction of a son of the once distressful country, St. John Greer Ervine, famous as a novelist and a dramatist who is at present visiting Montreal. This desirable consummation will not come about in the near future, declares Mr. Ervine; in fact it will not come in the lifetime of the present generation, but with tolerance and sanity on the part of all concerned, unity between the now antagonistic north and south is inevitable. In this, he confirms the belief of Martin Roddy, Irish Cabinet Minister, who made a similar prediction in Montreal three months ago.

Ireland's evil genius is, according to Mr. Irvine, Eamonn de Valera, really an American citizen and no Irishman, who ought to have been deported long ago for the good of the State. While interested in the progress of Celtic culture, Mr. Ervine is emphatic in the assertion that Ireland's difficulties have been increased immeasurably by the insistence on Gaelic and its knowledge being made compulsory for school teachers and the civil service. Gaelic is, he declares, a language that is obsolete and is totally inadequate to the demands made upon it for the expression of things of modern life.

Pays Tribute to Premier

Mr. Ervine paid high tribute to William Cosgrave, Premier of the Irish Free State, as a highly successful administrator. The Free State to-day is prosperous and the farmer, through the succession of land acts passed in the days of the British rule, was becoming the owner and not the tenant of his holding. Mr. Ervine calls attention to the extraordinary success of a country that has had no experience of government beyond a corrupt local government. This was done largely by the abolition of democracy. "Democracy is all right for the United States and Britain," declares Mr. Ervine, "but we Irish won't have the stuff."

In addition to being a keen political observer, Mr. Ervine is also famous as a dramatic critic and as a student of economics. In the latter role, he recently published a very trenchant criticism of the latest work of his distinguished fellow countryman, George Bernard Shaw, the book being the latter's "Intelligent Woman's Guide to Capitalism and Socialism." Mr. Ervine, who is at present on a special contract as dramatic critic for one year with The New York World is equally outspoken in his criticisms of the stage of the present day. "People," he declares, "are now so accustomed to being entertained by that gigantic machine, the cinema, that they are steadily losing their imagination; so accustomed are they to leaving their brains in the cloakroom before a play, that when they are needed they can no longer use them." Canada has too long been content to accept crumbs from the New York theatrical table, declares Mr. Ervine, who hopes that a day will come when the Dominion will supply the American stage with plays, for in this country is the material for the finest of drama.

Plenty of Humor

This bespectacled, fresh complexioned, typical Irishman has all the humor credited to his nationality. Some of his bon-mots have attained continent-wide celebrity. Here are a few of them:

"When women substituted silk for wool, they gave employment to worms and not to men."

"It takes three governments to govern Ireland and if I were there it would take four."

"The United States is a suburb of Belfast. Wherever you go, you will find the Ulster people making the uncivilized parts of the world fit to be on the same globe with Belfast."

"Twelve of the presidents of the United States were of Ulster origin. The north of Ireland provides the United States with its presidents and the south of Ireland provides the United States with its policemen."

"Plays in New York are the modern equivalent of the Roman arena—in the place of lions tearing Christians to pieces, there are comedians tearing jokes to pieces."

"The theatre to-day is being ruined by frozen mutton managers not fit to be dignified by the name of sheep."

Mr. Ervine who, as one soon realizes after a few minutes of his conversation, is a native of Belfast, was an officer in the Dublin Fusiliers during the Great War, and was severely wounded in 1917.

AFFIRMATIVE SIDE VICTORS IN DEBATE

Series of Debates Held in Millbrook Public School Brought to Close.

(Examiner Correspondence).

MILLBROOK, January 18. — The series of debates which has been held in the senior room of the Public School, of which B. B. Dawson is teacher and principal, was brough to a close last week, the team captained by Dorothy McDowell coming out with first place.

The subject for the final debate was: "Resolved: That myths and fairy tales should not be told to children." The sides were: Dorothy McDowell, Henry Raper, and Eric Clarke for the affirmative; Jack Stinson, Harold Howson, Norman Armstrong, and William Jessup for the negative. The affirmative side was one member short, Myrtle Nattress having gone away on a visit before the debate was held.

There have been four debates in the series, and the training in public speaking for the boys and girls, together with the development of their reasoning powers in upholding their several sides, will undoubtedly prove of inestimable value in connection with their educational expansion.

CANADA LEADS WORLD.

Aviators Mapping Sections of Country Which Have Never Been Explored.

MONTREAL, Que., Jan. 18 (Canadian Press).—Canada could boast of little in the matter of spectatcular flying, but nevertheless the Dominion led the world in aviation, declared A. M. Narraway, Controller of Aerial Surveys, Department of the Interior at Ottawa, in an address here yesterday.

While nations could point to remarkable flights to the poles, across Atlantic and Pacific, Canada could produce a record that none could equal in the matter of using aviators to open up the country.

The most important use to which the Dominion Government was putting her aviators was the mapping of the country, many sections of which had never been explored.

THROWN AGAINST SAW.

EDMONTON, Alta., Jan. 18. — (Canadian Press). — Thrown against a buzz saw when the sleeve of his sweater caught in the rapidly revolving shaft of the machine, John Mylly, aged 47, was almost instantly killed at Abee, near Radway Centre. The saw cut a deep wound in the base of Mylly's skull and he died within a few minutes after being picked up.

Canada exports 90 per cent of her newsprint.

The "beauty diet" that made her ugly

SHE was one girl who was going to stay attractive—so she watched her "beauty diet." But, all the time, she was missing something every diet should have. In the dishes she so carefully selected there was scarcely any roughage. Constipation gained a foothold. Soon, her charm, her strength — the very youth she thought to protect — were paying the price!

Thousands of women and men are paying the price of soft, fibreless meals. Many are dieting—and yet they defeat their own purposes because constipation continues to poison the system. No other evil is more widespread. It may start with aching heads and blemished cheeks. It often ends with serious trouble and disease.

And more's the pity when it can be so easily prevented by means of a simple cereal. So quickly relieved. Kellogg's ALL-BRAN is guaranteed to bring sure relief . . . safe prevention!

ALL-BRAN is 100% effective

ALL-BRAN is practically all roughage, or bulk. This bulk carries moisture throughout the digestive tract. Gently distending the intestines, sweeping out poisonous wastes. Part-bran products seldom contain enough bulk to be completely effective. Doctors recommend ALL-BRAN. It is 100% bran. It accomplishes results part-bran products cannot hope to equal.

Kellogg's ALL-BRAN is infinitely better than habit-forming pills and laxatives. A naturally healthful cereal! To enjoy with milk or cream. Delicious with fruits or honey added.

Use it in cooking too. Recipes on package. Mix it with hot cereals. Sprinkle it into soups. Just eat two tablespoonfuls in some form daily — chronic cases, with every meal. Its regular use will protect your family from the dangers of constipation.

Insist on genuine Kellogg's, the original ALL-BRAN. Sold by all grocers. Served at hotels, restaurants, cafeterias. On diners. Made by Kellogg in London, Ontario.

Kellogg's ALL-BRAN

Guaranteed! Kellogg's ALL-BRAN is sold with this definite guarantee: Eat it according to directions. If it does not relieve constipation safely, we will refund the purchase price.

Facts about Food, Nourishment & Vitamins

Why delicious "Ovaltine" stands supreme as the food-beverage for every home

THE subject of food and nourishment vitally affects the welfare of every man, woman and child of the Empire.

It is not the amount of food eaten that matters, but the kind and quantity of nourishment extracted and assimilated into the system.

The food elements required for nutrition must be correctly balanced. Proteins, fats, carbohydrates and mineral salts must all be present in correct proportions.

"Ovaltine" contains these vital food principles exactly as required, and is especially valuable because the natural food ingredients from which it is made contain all three vitamins named by scientists as fat-soluble A and water-soluble B and C. Furthermore, the process of manufacture, originated and used exclusively by the manufacturers of "Ovaltine," preserves these delicate vitamin substances and other equally important elements totally unimpaired in the finished product.*

The composition of "Ovaltine" explains the wonderful food value it possesses. Ripe barley malt, creamy milk from England's richest pastures, fresh eggs and cocoa. These choice natural food products are acknowledged by dietists as being richest in nutriment for restoring the depleted cells of the body and for building up the reserve of strength and vitality necessary to ward off ill-health.

Scientific research and practical experience all over the world continue to confirm that no other food compares with "Ovaltine" for presenting in a delicious and highly concentrated form the vital elements needed for giving and maintaining health, strength and vitality.

It should be noted that "Ovaltine" is scientific in conception and manufacture. High temperatures are strictly avoided, as these would destroy the vitamins and digestive properties. "Ovaltine" is all nourishment — strength-restoring and health-giving nourishment. It contains all the vitamins in correct ratio, and, furthermore, it is emphasized that "Ovaltine" contains all the other equally essential factors necessary for a complete and perfect food.

Visualise your breakfast table containing 12 cupfuls of beef extract, 7 cupfuls of cocoa or 3 eggs, and then remember that one cup of fragrant, health-giving "Ovaltine" contains more nourishment than any of these.

The delightful environment in which "Ovaltine" is prepared is another very important feature. England is at its fairest in the beautiful country district where "Ovaltine" is made. The factory itself is the ideal of what a factory should be. Spotlessly clean, full of sweet country air, and surrounded by gardens and playing fields to make a happy, healthy staff.

This, then is "Ovaltine"—the complete, easily digested and all-nourishing food beverage. If you enjoy health you need to drink "Ovaltine" daily to maintain it. Should you suffer ill-health, then no other food exists that will assist you to win it back so quickly as this delicious, nourishing and invigorating food.

In every home where "Ovaltine" is the daily food beverage real health protection is enjoyed.

To those desiring more detailed information on the vitamin content, A. Wander Ltd., will be pleased to send on request a booklet describing the results of extensive physiological tests.*

"Geraldine" Tells How Planning Meals Helps; Gives Dessert Recipes

MARION'S MAIL

Address correspondence to Marion at The Examiner Office.

"Dear Marion,

You have received so many very interesting letters recently, and printed them for our benefit, that I feel I must contribute my little share. I think your mail is getting more interesting all the time, and it DOES help when we read about the experiences of our neighbors.

My idea arose out of a conversation at a tea the other day, when one of the party expressed a wish for 'something new' in the way of dessert. I happen to have two or three rather good deserts in my recipe box, and I thought I might as well pass them on.

I may say that I am a disciple of yours in a plan you wrote about sometime last summer—I could tell the date if I took the trouble to look up the clipping. You told how to plan menus for the week ahead, with the idea of saving time, worry and money, and I'll say you surely knew what you were writing about! I tried it out for a few weeks, slipped, and then finally made the grade on a permanent basis. It's the greatest comfort I know. Every Sunday afternoon I take my recipe book, my own recipe box, and a sheet of paper ruled into spaces for three meals every day. Then I pick out the most appetizing meals I can think up, within my means, and arrange them economically. For instance, I can often use the soup left after a stew for next day's luncheon basis; or the sweet meat that is always left on the roast bone can be put through the chopper and used for sandwich filler for supper. I know I have saved dollars in money, and avoided many a headache, through following your advice. I'm never afraid, now, that some unexpected visitor will find me without anything in the larder, because all my groceries for the week are ordered on Monday, and my kitchen cabinet is always well stocked. Nothing is wasted, because I can find a recipe for some day in the week to use up whatever I have a surplus of—and everything is fresh at least every two weeks. Is it any wonder I wish to show my appreciation?

Well, Marion, here are my suggestions for sweets—if you wish for more I can send them again. Cocoa marshmallow pie has made a big hit with my family, and I have it for special occasions. To make it, combine four tablespoons of cocoa, three tabelspoons of cornstarch, and half a cupful of sugar, and add this to two cups of milk. Place in the top of a double boiler, and cook for thirty minutes. Then add one teaspoon of butter and an eighth teaspoon of salt, and remove from the fire. Allow to cool, and then add one teaspoon of vanilla. Turn into a baked pastry shell. Place one dozen marshmallows cut in strips over the surface of the pie, and sprinkle with one tablespoon of shredded cocoanut. Place in a hot oven of about 400 degrees F. and brown quickly.

My cream pie has been commented on, too; it is made from a recipe my mother used. So much so-called 'cream' pie is only custard filling, but this is a REAL cream pie. Mix together half a cup of sugar, half a cup of flour, a quarter teaspoon of salt, and a half teaspoon of nutmeg. Add one pint of thick cream and stir together until smooth. Have a deep pie plate lined with plain paste, pour in the cream mixture, wet the edge and put on an upper crust in which vents have been cut. Bake for 45 minutes in an oven about 425 degrees F.

I don't wish to take too long this first time, Marion, but I hope these two ideas for desserts may be useful to some neighbors. Good luck to you!

Most sincerely yours,
Geraldine."

* * *

Thank you, "Geraldine," for your splendid recipes, and for the nice things you write about our pages. I am so glad that you found my meal-planning idea good. I will be looking forward to receiving another letter, with more recipes, from you soon.

"Dear Marion:

I am very sorry, owing to being absent from our fair city and the pressure of work since returning, to have overlooked one of your contests, which I am usually very interested in. Last evening I noticed New Year's Resolutions listed. Possibly I am too late to enter the contest but having had an exceedingly interesting lesson in my class on just this subject I feel a few lines on the resolutions of the younger generation would be interesting to many.

I was more than delighted to hear our worthy Premier in his address at the opening exercises of our new Technical school say that, in his opinion, one of the main aims in teaching and educating our girls and boys of today is to prepare them to live agreeably among the people with whom they come in contact. That is precisely my idea and for some time past it had been my aim to impress this upon my pupils. If they learn, while at school, this invaluable lesson then their career at school will be a success and consequently their after life.

It was rather an unique instance when I called for New Year's resolutions from my classes for my classes for 1929 that the first child to answer should say—'Let us work together.' This was precisely the one I was after. Another child added, 'agreeably and well' so that our motto for 1929 is:

'Let us work together agreeably and well.'

To my mind there couldn't be a better resolution for a class of students. If this resolve is carried out it follows as naturally as the night follows the day that the work will be excellent and a delightful spirit will prevail.

Among other resolutions was, 'Work quietly.' The child citing this gave as her reason for this one that well-bred people are those who act quietly, speak quietly, in all things are unobtrusive in manner therefore she claimed if girls learn to work quietly they were well on the way to appear cultured and genteel, another child to strengthen this reasoning quoted the verse—

'The wise old owl sat in an oak,
The more he heard, the less he spoke,
The less he spoke, the more he heard.
Why can't we all be like that wise old bird?'

Three other verses were quoted containing the thought of the resolutions these girls wished to convey. They were:

'Politeness is to do and say,
The kindest things in the kindest way.'

Also:

'Work while you work,
Play while you play,
That is the way to be happy and gay.
All that you do, do with your might.
Things done by halves are never done right.'

Also:

'Early to bed, early to rise,
Makes a man healthy, wealthy and wise.'

There were many other such as 'Be punctual'; 'Help one another'; 'Brush one's teeth three times a day'; 'Cleanliness is next to godliness'; but possibly I have over-satisfied you ere now. Wishing your page its merited success, I am,

Sincerely yours,
Dagmar."

* * *

I, too, am sorry that you missed this competition, "Dagmar;" but your letter will be very interesting to all those who wrote entries, and the other neighbors.

The children, many of them, have the right idea about life, haven't they?

"Dear Marion:

I have found the following hints very good.

To stiffen a crochet basket dissolve granulated sugar and after placing the basket on any desired form dip in syrup and let dry.

To keep juicy pies from boiling out while cooking, line the plate with paste, then take dry flour and rub all over the paste. For rhubarb or berry, one tablespoonful or more, then put the amount of sugar required for sweetening and fruit on top. Dampen edge with egg white or water before putting on top paste.

We are enjoying the recipes very much. It's like having a meal away from home, trying out new dishes. Can recommend "Lucinda's" Yorkshire pudding, it was delicious, also "Wanda's" Salmon salad.

Dear Marion, let Jack have a good laugh over your tomato juice cure for flu. It is good. I was caring for flu patients in a western city in 1919 and it was the real flu then and tomato juice was highly recommended by doctors.

WHAT IS CORRECT?

C. O.: Q.—Is cutting in at a dance correct?

A.—"Cutting in" is far from polite, but is generally accepted for the present. It would be less polite, probably, to object to it, if it happens to be the custom where you are dancing.

Two of the windows of the new Mark street United Church, the building which will probably be opened about March 3rd, will be Biblical scenes in stained glass which will be placed there by women of the church who are commemorating in this way the memories of their late husbands. The large chancel window is the gift of Mrs. Thomas Smiley of Hunter street east, in memory of the late Thomas Smiley, and Mrs. Maurice Jaynes of Cobourg is giving one of the side windows, in memory of her late husband, John Weir.

Women's societies of Mark street United Church are doing much to assist in the work of erection and completion of the new building. On Friday night of this week, a concert which will be the farewell effort in the old church of the Gleaners' Bible Class, will be presented there, in aid of the building fund, and will consist of a fine program of music, vocal and instrumental, also readings and a playlet, presented by local talent.

This Class of the church, with about thirty-five of the younger women as its members, has for president Miss Mary Wilson, and has outdistanced the other Sunday school classes in its donations towards the building fund. Its allocation was passed long ago and it has already given $125 this year to the fund.

The old building of Mark street United Church, which will soon pass into disuse, and will be sold, if possible, celebrated a short time back the fiftieth anniversary of its erection.

The Women's Canadian Club had as its speaker on Monday night Charles G. D. Roberts, the famous Canadian poet and novelist. His address included an interesting psychological item in his own work, when he read a poem which he said had been brought to him while in a dreaming state, his subconscious mind recording the impression with only the omission of two lines, after he reached a waking condition. "Beyond the Tops of Time" was the title of this extraordinary composition, which was a thing of pure imagery and beautiful thought.

Those who remember reading Charlotte Bronte's masterpiece, "Jane Eyre," will recall how the heroine, under stress of strong emotion, painted two little pictures which were afterward declared by one who had been there as representing very clearly portions of the Island of Patmos, that far-away home of St. John the Beloved, during his earthly pilgrimage, after the death of Christ. Jane Eyre had never been to Patmos, but she had a mental impression of it and transmitted it to canvas. Some such mental impression must have dictated Roberts' poem.

And that brings to mind a story of different vein, in facetious mood. A man who had for a considerable length of time been troubled by dreams wherein he fancied that he wrote splendid things, and, on awaking, was unable to recall a line of these marvellous compositions, resolved to do his utmost to transmit the ideas to his conscious mind, so as to be able to transcribe them when in a waking state. He tried his best and on one occasion, felt that he had achieved the desired result. With burning sentences of wonderful eloquence chasing themselves through his brain, he forced himself to waken and this is what he shouted, as a result of the mind wanderings which he considered as being those of genius: "I have unravelled the fathom and have unfathomed the ravel!"

Major Roberts, in the course of a singularly entertaining talk, spoke of the difficulties which attended the writer at times. On the occasion of the celebration of the Diamond Jubilee of Canada in his native province of New Brunswick, he wrote an Ode which he was to read on the first of July there. But the committee, fearing that he might be unable to attend, had the text telegraphed to Fredericton, N.B., from Ottawa.

It came through perfectly, with the exception of one word, which the puzzled committeemen were absolutely at a loss to decipher. The poet had written: "To beat blind oafish ignorance to their knees," and the telegraphed copy read: "To beat blind catfish." The writer's brother, Captain Theodore Goodrich Roberts, was appealed to, and could give no better solution of the problem than to suggest that "Charley forgot he was writing poetry and thought it was a nature story that he was writing."

But, fortunately for the poem, the composer arrived in time and saved the situation.

NATURE

By Henry W. Longfellow

As a fond mother when the day is o'er
Leads by the hand her little child to bed,
Half-willing, half-reluctant to be led
And leave his broken playthings on the floor,
Still gazing at them through the open door,
Nor wholly re-assured and comforted
By promises of others in their stead,
Which though more splendid may not please him more.
So Nature deals with us, and takes away
Our playthings, one by one, and, by the hand,
Leads us to rest so gently, that we go,
Scarce knowing if we wish to go or stay,
Being too full of sleep to understand
How far the unknown transcends the what we know.

YOUR HOME AND YOU

Here are some notions and prejudices expressed by various interior decorators. See whether you agree with any or all of them.

That ornamental borders should not be used at the top or elsewhere on wallpaper and that the best place for the picture molding is where wall and ceiling meet.

That white woodwork should be given a slight ivory or cream tinge instead of being pure or grayish white.

That all floors should be darker than the walls and woodwork. Dark woodwork with a light wood floor should be avoided.

That there are as many undesirable Oriental rugs as domestic rugs—and that unfigured floor coverings are as a usual thing more reposeful and elegant than figured rugs of any sort.

That glass or sash curtains should never be tied or looped back.

That portieres used in doorways should be of plain toned material.

That rocking chairs are an abomination and should never be countenanced in a well-furnished living room.

That glass-sided china closets are out of place in a well-furnished dining room—and their place should be taken by the built-in cupboard.

That the serving table should be left entirely free from ornament—being used only for actual serving during meal times.

That wall pictures are out of place in the dining room with the possible exception of one or two of an impersonal sort.

THE MIRROR OF THE MODE

By Mary Marshall.

A cami-petticoat of knitted wool and silk mixture such as many French women wear on cool days in lieu of heavy underthings.

There is no acceptable excuse for going around shivering this winter—short of actua poverty. There are so many different ways of keeping warm without spoiling one's ensemble.

There is very attractive wooly underwear this winter—not the long-sleeved red flannel or balbriggan sort, but soft knitted little garments of soft pastel tones. It leaves arms and neck bare but keeps the body snug and warm enough to wear thin frocks with comfort in cool weather.

Or if you prefer to wear summery lingerie all winter then there are woolens for frocks more attractive than ever before—wool voiles, wool crepes, thin tweeds, that are decidedly warm in spite of their light weight.

Grandmother's idea—so often expressed—was that if you kept the "extremities" warm you were safe against chilliness. Hence she insisted on woolies for her children that actually came down over the wrists and ankles. The French idea apparently is that if you keep the body well protected with wool the arms and legs and neck will take care of themselves.

What a transformation has taken place since Amelia Bloomer first gave her name to the loose wool garment which she thought more convenient than skirts! Those first bloomers scarcely showed the ankles—and the newest bloomers to be worn under evening or daytime frocks are barely more than eight or nine inches long. They suggest the little puffs that gentlemen of the reign of Queen Elizabeth wore at the tops of their trunk hose.

FAVORITE RECIPE.

SOUP STOCK

(Contributed by Mrs. L. J. S.)

Six pounds shin of beef or six pounds knuckle of veal, any bones, trimmings of poultry, or fresh meat, ¼ lb. of lean bacon or ham, 2 oz. of butter, 2 large onions, each stuck with cloves, 1 turnip, 3 carrots, 1 head of celery, 2 oz. of salt, ½ teaspoon of whole pepper 1 large blade of mace, 1 bunch of savory herbs, except sage, 4 quarts and ½ pint of cold water.

Cut up the meat and bacon, or ham into pieces about 3 inches square, break the bones into small pieces, rub butter on the bottom of stew pan. Put in ½ pint of water, and the broken bones, then meat and all other ingredients. Cover the stewpan and place it on a sharp fire, occasionally stirring its contents, when the bottom of pan becomes covered with a pale, jelly-like substance, add the 4 quarts of cold water, and let simmer very quickly for 5 or 6 hours. Do not let it boil quickly, when nearly cooked, throw a tablespoon of salt to assist the scum to rise, remove every particle of scum while it is boiling, and strain it through a fine hair sieve, when cool remove all grease. This stock will keep for many days in cold weather.

Stock is the basis of many of the soups, and this will be found quite strong enough for ordinary purposes. Keep it in small jars, in a cool place, it makes a good gravey for hashed meats, one tablespoon of it is sufficient to impart a fine flavor to a dish of macaroni, and various other dishes. Good soups of various kinds are made from it, at short notice, slice off a portion of the jelly, add water, and whatever vegetables or thickening preferred. It is best to partly cook the vegetables before adding to the stock, as much boiling injures the flavoring of the soup. Season and boil a few moments and serve hot.

Reputation Is Upheld By Thrifty Scots

LONDON, Jan. 18.—(By the Canadian Press)—That the reputation of the Scot for thriftiness is justified is proved in part at least by the annual report of the Glasgow Savings Bank. This shows that almost every one in three of the pupiation possesses a bank book. The amount due depositors is $115.000,000, an increase of $5,000.000 over the previous year. The bank has achieved a record in the number of depositors, the volume of business transacted and the amount of the bank's own reserve.

The Whatnot

A Column for Little Bits of Everything of Interest to Women Readers

Conducted by Marion (Copyright)

I WAS IN A SHOE STORE the other day trying on shoes when a young girl came in and sat down near me. She wanted a pair of tie shoes 'for a change' she said and didn't want to go beyond a certain sum for them. The stock was not very wide in range and she was having difficulty. Finally the saleslady asked her if she would try a pair of shoes with straps and she consented. They fitted her well and she decided to take them in place of the ties which she could have worn but which did not fit as nicely.

* * * * * *

After she went out I asked the saleslady what the most common fault of people buying shoes was. She told me that the majority bought shoes that were too short for them. Then she went on to say that so many people would come in asking for a certain width (one of the broader ones) and in a size that was too small, that is, too short. In most cases what the customer required was a longer, narrower shoe.

* * * * * *

I had to agree with her as I had found myself making the same mistake and not so many years ago at that. Since discovering my mistake I have been able to get shoes much more comfortable but, and here's the rub! they always cost more.

* * * * * *

I wonder if this tendency of ours to get shorter shoes is (I was going to say 'throw-back' but wait till you see what is coming) an idea originally acquired from the Chinese. Only yesterday I was reading about the bound feet of their women.

* * * * * *

About a tenth of the population of China has bound feet. The tendency in districts were the English and Americans have become numerous is to let the feet of the Chinese women grow naturally but in the more northern districts the conservative population still binds the feet of it's women.

* * * * * *

One of the most successful of the Chinese generals who controls the provinces of Honan, Shensi and Kansu recently gave a lecture to a large number of girl students in Honan. He has forbidden the practise, but is evidently trying to educate the public as well as to rule them forcibly.

* * * * * *

In foot binding the first bandage is put on at from five to eight years. It is one to narrow the foot, bringing the toes, with the exception of the big toe, under the foot so that they may be seen on the inner side of the foot. This takes about a year and then the bandage to shorten the foot is applied. This brings the heel and toe together so that a coin about the size of a fifty-cent piece may be completely hidden in the crease formed by the flesh on the under side of the foot.

* * * * * *

The poor little girls are required to run about so that the circulation will not entirely cease as in that case mortification would set in and the feet would have to be amputated. The practise is a very rumunerative one for the professional women who are employed. If amateurs were allowed to do this they might bind the feet too tightly and cut off the supply of blood too rapidly, thus causing mortification or even a sudden death.

* * * * * *

Those of us who have worn a shoe an almost imperceptibe shade too short can vaguely imagine the agony which is endured by these small girls who in their desire to attain the mark of high position will sometimes suggest that the bandage be pulled even more tightly than is being done by the foot binder.

* * * * * *

Coming back from our excursion into China to my pleasant acquaintance of the shoe shop, she also said that tight short stockings were as bad as short shoes.

* * * * * *

I have not experienced this discomfort but I immediately thought of a friend of mine who has small children. She had received several pairs of stockings for her children at Christmas, beautiful stockings, but just an exact fit before they were washed even once. You mothers will unders and how it is with those light shades of stockings. My friend said that they always seem to shrink so much more than the dark colors.

* * * * * *

Now what is she to do? Is she to put those stockings that will be too short on her childrens' feet or must she throw them away or give them away, rather. I'm no expert but would it be possible to cut the toes open and add a piece to the end of the foot?

* * * * * *

Some of you may say that the seam would hurt the little feet but if it were put on the outside perhaps that would prevent discomfort. I can well remember the days when my big sister's cashmere stockings were made over for me and even my own were footed with a seam that hurt if put on the inside of the foot but was quite comfortable when placed on the outside. In those days little folks all wore boots so that the piecing didn't show.

* * * * * *

We had a note in the paper some time ago telling of the children in Fierce wearing short socks over their lighter weight stockings. I have noticed a number of small girls who have adopted this style and it looks so nice and comfy. Of course in this climate they are using the sport hose in three-quarter length.

* * * * * *

One mother is making use of her son's shrunken socks for his wee sister. They are pulled on over the shoes in overstocking style and rubbers are worn. Goloshes may be used instead of rubbers but if there is not a great depth of snow the lower gear is very good. Don't forget that the socks may be turned up at the cuff if it is a very cold day.

My New Year's Resolutions

The following have been entered in a competition, the result of which will be announced on Saturday.

(By "Blue Bird.")

"Dear Marion:

I wrote to your page in our paper once before, but have not as yet seen my letter or the reading I sent, but I still keep looking and reading other neighbors' letters, so now I've decided to try once again and write New Year Resolutions.

Ever since I was a little girl, as each year came around there were new resolutions to make and old ones to renew and oh, how I used to hate school just after the Christmas holidays, for always the same two subjects came up for our compositions "How I spent Christmas" and "My New Year Resolutions." I distinctly remember one thing my dad told me when I had asked him what to write, and that was "That New Year Resolutions are like crying babies in church—they need carrying out." Now, however, these resolutions mean something to me and I try harder to live up to them and each year during the Lenten season I like to go over them all again and renew my energy and watchfulness to try to keep them all. One of my resolutions and it is a daily resolve now, is to be more ready to see good in people and less ready to talk about them, and to do my daily task to the best of my ability, and I find it pays.

Isn't every night a New Year's night? Confession to be made, resolves and prayers, and every morning a day to carry them out. Let us think more of the love which never deserts us and which makes us more womanly, more fit for life—better, purer, nobler and not because God loves us any more, but because we are more ready to receive him.

Perhaps my letter is getting too long but just before I close I would like quote these few lines which appealed to me very much.

Day by Day.

Charge not thyself with the weight of a year
Child of the Master faithful and dear;
Choose not thy cross for the coming week
For that is more than he bids thee seek;
Bend not thine arms for to-morrow's load;
Thou mayst leave that to thy gracious God
"Daily" only He saith to thee:
Take up thy cross and follow Me.

Bluebird."

(By "Consula")

"Dear Marion:

I have taken advantage, from time to time of your very generous offering of Helps.

I would like to enter your competition of letters on New Year's Resolutions.

New year's resolutions are like all other resolutions rather hard to outline definitely and rather hard to keep. "If to do were as easy as to know what were best to do, chapels had been churches, and poor men's cottages, princes' palaces."

We must have Courage to know that we are going to succeed. Discouragement is the greatest evil in any effort. In youth, both courage and strength are great. We believe in ourselves and in our efforts to do anything. But as we get older we find that each year or every few years takes from that fair outlook on life. Then when it comes our turn it is not so easy to cling to those good resolutions and carry them out.

"The brain may devise laws for the blood, but a hot temper leaps over a cold decree."

Your suggestion, "I will not envy anyone, anything" is very splendid, includes so many virtues and excludes so many vices that I am sure if we try to carry out that one resolution with all our courage and strength we will be making a great step toward perfection.

Thanking you for accepting my views on this subject I remain,

Yours sincerely,

"Consula."

(By "Marie Christine.")

Once again I stand on the threshold of a new year. Once again I am ready to step out on an unknown path, following its windings, gathering the varicolored flowers that almost spring to meet me, pausing at times to pick the little, homely, almost unperceivable ones sheltered among and beneath the gay riot of color and casting aside the tempting and alluring weeds which greet me on all sides. Once again I may start afresh and go questing down the days.

Shall I gird myself with the armor of resolutions? Is it worth while to bother with resolutions since I am only likely to keep them for perhaps a week or a month at most? Will they be a help to me or only hinder my progress along the way? Are they worth the effort? Truly, I believe they are.

And why? There is a tendency in human nature to strive for something whether we attain it or not. And the great thing is in trying—nothing comes to us without effort and we must strive or climb or learn if we wish to reach the goal we hope to attain. There was never yet a person who made a good New Year's Resolution and failed to live up to it, who wasn't the better for having tried. Moreover very few things are won by a single effort so if I fail this time I can still try again. A neutral nation once said of Great Britain: "Great Britain never won any battle except the last battle' and so, should I fail this time I shall feel encouraged to try again. The time will surely come when I'll win through. And lastly, making resolutions is a habit with me, a habit I can't shake off.

So now, having persuaded myself to follow the usua. once-a-year procedure and make resolutions I'll write them down just to impress them on my mind.

First of all, I'll make a resolution to be cheerful. I'll endeavor to keep in close touch with cheerfulness throughout the year.

I have a rather disagreeable disposition but if I can be a 'Pollyanna' for a year I'll wager my best friends will scarcely know me. Disagreeable dispositions are the cause of half the maladies in the world and so I'll be cheerful. It pays to be cheerful both for oneself and one's neighbors. If I can keep in good humor I'll be happier and those around me will be happier. If I can laugh or sing or grin when things go wrong and I feel all in I'll have accomplished something. And when things are at their worst with me I'll think of someone who is really worse off than myself.

When things go wrong and the world looks blue,
When I haven't any pep and I need lots too,
When the steak is underdone and the pot won't boil,
When the men are late for meals and I fret and fume and toil,
Then cheerfulness will have its way,
And once again 'twill save the day.

My second resolution has to do with the home—to lift the toil of homemaking into the realm of the artistic. I dislike housework; I hate the daily round. And so for 1929 I'll think of the drudgery of home-making, the cooking, the dishwashing, the sweeping, the dusting, the sewing, the cleaning as the paint, brushes, palette, canvas and scaffolding of an artist. And I'll be the artist working out a theme. An artist might say 'mixing paint is drudgery, stretching canvas is tedious, my back aches horribly while I work at this mural panel'—but the great purpose in mind, the great vision one sees, over shadows any small discomforts.

If I can keep this vision before me, if I can forget the drudgery in the pleasure of getting the result, then it will put significance into daily life, give it a mental uplift, a wider perspective and dignity and glory the humbliest duties. If I can keep this resolution to lift the daily tasks to the artist's canvas and blend them into a harmonious whole, then I will not have lived the year in vain.

Lastly, I'll make a resolution to keep my New Year's Resolutions.

Marie Christine."

"Dear Marion:

(By "Quo Vadis?")

My New Year Resolution is that I will tell everyone I can of God's goodness to me and mine. That is will give instances of immediate answer to prayer, of help when no help seemed possible. So many times God had done for me, all undeserving as I am, and I would like others to know how tender, loving and understanding God is. If I can only help one to understand God as he has been to me, I shall feel satisfied. Hoping Marion that you get your heart's desire in 1929.

Yours,

"QUO VADIS"

That Body of Yours

By Dr. J. Barton

PREVENTING GALL STONES

One of the little points that used to bother me as a student was why the gall bladder was so small. As it was meant to carry a reserve of bile, why wasn't it a good size because the amount of bile needed in twenty-four hours would fill the gall bladder many times?

And then I learned that the gall bladder lining was fashioned with tucks, like the intestine, which absorbed the water from the bile and left the solid portions.

Thus the gall bladder can store from twenty times as much as otherwise would be possible. Or as Dr. Lester Whitaker tells us "it is like pressing hay into bales before putting it in the barn; a smaller barn is required."

Now when your stomach empties its contents into intestine the gall bladder empties its contents—the bile—in on this food in order to help digest it, or put it into condition to be absorbed from the small intestine by the blood.

Various things can interfere with the emptying of the gall bladder and one of these is any emotional disturbance such as fear or anxiety.

You know that a good appetizing meal can be suddenly spoiled for you by some emotional disturbance. You don't want to eat; in fact you can't eat.

Now if this bile does not get emptied from gall bladder owing to these emotional disturbances, the bile becomes more and more of a thick solid nature and tends to the formation of gall stones.

Overeating, by disturbing the natural processes of digestion, interferes with or prevents the emptying of the gall bladder and helps to thicken up bile.

Added to this often is some infection from teeth or tonsils which inflames the walls of the gall bladder and prevents it from emptying properly.

So common has the sluggish liver and gall bladder become that many individuals are now using a fine rubber tube which they put down the throat and it goes past stomach to beginning of small intestine. Epsom salts is poured down this and in a few minutes the individual lies down with head lower than body, and the Epsom salts with bile, is drained out.

However, not eating much when mentally disturbed, cutting down on rich foods such as pork, tongue, goose, duck, pastry and alcohol, and giving the liver and gall bladder regular squeezing by bending or deep breathing exercises, will prevent disturbances in the gall bladder.

It is tremendously refreshing after a hard day on one's feet to soak them in hot bran and soda water, dry and rub with alcohol.

BIG EATERS GET ACID STOMACH

Bisurated Magnesia Neutralizes Acidity, Keeps Stomach Clean and Digestion Perfect

If you're a hearty eater; if you must have three big meals a day, eat them. But after each meal be sure to neutralize the dangerous acids that your food forms in the stomach, says a noted authority.

When your stomach is overloaded, the food contents soon sour and develop acid that practically paralyses the stomach's acidity long before the work of digestion can be completed. Then the stomach becomes weak and "cranky" and you are a daily sufferer from Indigestion, Gas, Sourness, Bloating and after-eating pains. Your appetite goes—you're sick and whirly—and what used to be the joys of a hearty meal become a menacing nightmare.

To quickly neutralize this dangerous acid; to cleanse and sweeten the stomach, take care of a hearty meal without pain or distress, go to your nearest drug store and get a little pure Bisurated Magnesia (powder or tablets) and take in a little hot water just after meals. You'll be amazed how quickly this simple treatment works.

Bisurated Magnesia is a powerful but harmless anti-acid and stomach corrective used by thousands of folks every day with the happiest of results.

Y.M.C.A. MADE FINE SHOWING

Y. M. C. A. for boys in terms of this or that being the more worth while. We can only say that in all things we have endeavoured to relate the boyhood of the city to Christ and His standard of Life. Character is the product of this Association and the measure of its service to the community. Whatever claim may be made for recognition as a factor in the lives of the boys of this ecity we base that claim on our efforts toward character building.

"The close of 1928 found the names of 270 members on the roll. In the case of boy-members practically all are privilege users so that the problem of accommodation is presenting itself for solution. The game and dressing rooms are at times inadequate to meet the needs of the numbers in attendance."

It was reported that the boys helped materially in raising funds for foreign work. There were 117 contributors, 32 of which earned $1 or more for the fund, reaching a total for the fund of $70. The Hobby Show in April was also a great success with 138 exhibitors and 355 exhibits of the things a boy makes or does. The boys shouldered the responsibility and put the show over themselves and the plans for the show are already underway.

It was reported that the Leader's Corps is taking on a great deal of the responsibility, physical training in the gym and are to the fore in nearly every activity of the "Y." The "Y" Harriers also reported their progress during the year and an even greater activity was forecasted for this year.

The financial report showed:— Receipts—membership $4,289.20; subscriptions $4,194.000; dormitories $3,858.55;

LOCAL COUNCIL TAKES ACTION

Mowat read a letter from the president of the National Council, Mrs. J. A. Wilson, commending to the attention of the members the drive for membership in the League of Nations society and asking the support of the local councils to the movement.

Soldiers and Sailors

Mrs. W. R. Morris, convenor of the committee having to do with Soldiers and Sailors and their dependents, gave a short report in her usual concise fashion. A more liberal interpretation of the pension question is being taken at present, she said, owing to consistent efforts which have been made, especially by the Canadian Legion.

From the provincial shares of the army canteen funds, a compassionate allowance is being made to dependent parents of dead or incapacitated soldiers and sailors, and Mrs. Morris asked the members who knew of any such cases to bring them to the attention of President J. R. Heron of the Canadian Legion, or Past President James Abraham, who would give attention to such cases.

Prefacing her report with a matter of personal interest to the Local Council, Mrs. Morris referred to the election of Mrs. W. E. Groves of Toronto as chairman of the Queen City Board of Education, and told the ladies that the chairmanship of the local Board of Education had been offered to her this year. Dr. Craig asserting that he would not consider it unless Mrs. Morris, owing to her many years of work on the Board, had the refusal first. After twenty-four hours' consideration, Mrs. Morris decided not to accept, owing to the pressure of other work.

Mrs. Edwards expressed the gratification of the members at the honor thus accorded to one of the energetic workers of the Local Council.

Mrs. Mowat's Report

Mrs. A. Mowat presented a very interesting and well-worded report of the activities of the Council, in the year just ended, paying especial tribute to the work done by the president, Mrs. C. H. Edwards, whose "energetic, capable and tactful support" has made the past year a very successful and pleasant one for the members.

A resume of the work done and the addresses given to the Council was made by Mrs. Mowat, who referred at the close to the appeal being made for membership in the League of Nations Society and to the necessity of every woman co-operating in the effort to help along the great work being undertaken at Geneva.

Thirty-one societies were in affiliation with the Local Council last year.

In the absence of the treasurer, Mrs. N. D. Seaton, the financial report for the year was read by Mrs. Mowat. The balance from last year amounted to $145.35 and various items brought the receipts up to the total of $214.05. Expenditures, including allocation and fees to the National Council of $122.30, amounted to $205.33, leaving a balance of $8.72.

Local council women—Take 3 . . . .

The amount raised by the Local Council up to date, for the National Foundation Fund, is $566. Thanks was expressed to the subscribers, the canvassers, and to R. M. Glover of The Examiner, for publicity.

In referring to the retirement of two of the senior officers of the Local Council, after services extending over seven or eight years, much regret was expressed that Mrs. J. Wearing, the recording secretary, and Mrs. N. D. Seaton, treasurer, both of whom have given such splendid service in the work were unwilling to continue in office any longer.

Affiliated Societies.

Reports showing a very wide range of activity among the affiliated societies were then read by representatives present. Several of the organizations on the roll were not represented at the meeting yesterday.

Mrs. J. E. Johnston reported for All Saints' Women's Guild, Mrs. J. Lundy for All Saints' Auxiliary, Miss E. Scott for the Women's Patriotic League of Ashburnham, Mrs. Bruce Law for the Catholic Women's League, Miss M. Berwick for the Female Voice Choir, Mrs. M. Budd for the Central Home and School Association, Mrs. J. E. Gregson for the King Edward Home and School Association, Mrs. E. Wand for the King George Home and School Association, Mrs. L. C. Deyell for the Queen Alexandra Home and School Association, Miss Cathleen McCarthy for the Peter Robinson Chapter I.O. D.E., Mrs. B. F. McNeely for the Women's Association of St. Andrew's Church ((formerly the Ladies' Aid Society), Mrs. W. Binks for the Ladies' Aid Society of Mark Street Church, Miss E. L. Might for the W.M.S. of George Street Church, Mrs. C. H. Edwards read the report of Mrs. A. Porteous for the W.M.S. of St. Andrew's Church, Miss F. Dixon for Nicholls Hospital Alumnae, Mrs. Mowat read Mrs. Andrews' report for the Young Women's Auxiliary of Trinity Church, and Mrs. W. Blackwell reported briefly for the Women's Art Association, also reading the resolution which is recorded in the opening paragraph of this report. Mrs. T. W. H. Young, the president, reported for St. John's C. W.A., Mrs. W. Hughes for the Ladies' Auxiliary to the Canadian Legion, Mrs. J. F. Allan for the Women's Canadian Club, Mrs. B. F. McNeely, the president, for the Women's Liberal Association, Mrs. J. Plunkett for the Ladies' Aid Society of St. James' Church and for the W.C.T.U.

Mrs. J. Mills gave an interesting report of the work of the Well Babies' Clinic, outlining the manner in which this effort, sponsored by the Local Council of Women, and entered into energetically by Dr. J. Birnie, has grown in the years since its inception. At the conclusion of Mrs. Mills' remarks, Mrs. Edwards referred to the assistance also given by Mrs. Mills, through whose influence the Canadian Legion Hall had been obtained, and without payment, for the meetings held there weekly by the Clinic.

Youthful Late Hours

Miss Amy Wood, of the Salvation Army, in the course of a brief report on her committee connected with Child Welfare, uttered some very potent sentences when she referred to the prevalence of late hours among the youth of the city and their effect on health and education.

"If the boys and girls could get more rest and sleep, they would be better men and women in the future," she summed up her remarks, after speaking of the warnings given by herself to mothers who allowed their 'teen age daughters to attend nightly dances and then expected them to be bright and healthy.

Nervous restlessness, disinclination to study or work, and a general unhealthy condition, both mentally and physically, was attributed by the speaker to this practice, who cited one instance of a girl of fifteen years of age who works during the day and tries to attend night school also, while being a regular attendant at dances.

A brief report on the opening of the Public Library on Sundays for the convenience of those confined to boarding houses, another effort which has been sponsored and supervised by the Local Council, was given by the convenor of the committee in charge, Mrs. Charles Ray. Mrs. J. Mills also reported briefly on her committee of professions and employments for women.

Mental Hygiene.

The president, Mrs. C. H. Edwards, who is convenor of the committee on Mental Hygiene, gave a very interesting short talk, drawing the attention of the members to the efforts which are being made by educational authorities to alleviate conditions for those sub-normal children who enter the world handicapped by a lack in mentality, as compared with their more fortunate brothers and sisters.

"Dr. Hincks, director of Mental Hygiene Research in Toronto, tells us that in Canada we have more beds occupied in our Mental Hospitals than in all the General Hospitals put together, that more people are entering these Mental Hospitals each year than are entering all our universities and colleges. When we think that four per cent. of all our children are doomed to enter these hospitals and that hardly a family escapes it somewhere in their line of descent, it prods us into consideration of this very important subject. In the last five years, research has been made sufficiently to cause the authorities to state that fully forty per cent. of such cases can be cured.

The other and different problem of the sub-normal child, the one who never grows up mentally, was also mentioned as a great problem. "From 2 to 2 1-2 per cent of the population of Canada comes under the sub-normal, and 10 per cent of these need segregation. In Ontario, out of a population of three million people, between two and three thousand require to be segregated, in addition to the 1400 patients at Orillia.

Referring to the local auxiliary class maintained for these children, Mrs. Edwards said there should be a greater number of such classes, and concluded by hoping that the School Board would give this subject its earnest consideration.

CHURCH PLANS TO INTRODUCE BILLS

Would Restore Initial "G. R." Wherever Coat of Arms Used By Government Departments.

TORONTO, Ont., Jan. 18 (Canadian Press).—T. L. Church, K.C., M.P., has given the Law Clerk of the House of Commons at Ottawa notice of two bills which he will introduce at the coming session of parliament.

One of these bills is to restore the initials "G.R." wherever the coat of arms is used by the Post Office Department or other government departments.

The other bill will propose that no permit issued under the Navigable Waters Protection Act affecting an international stream since January 1, 1929, shall be operative until it has received approval, sanction, consent and validation of the parliament of Canada.

2,000 ARTISTS IN STOCKHOLM

Field is Always Crowded and Many Have Difficulty Earning a Livelihood.

MANY GALLERIES

STOCKHOLM, Sweden, Jan. 18—(By Canadian Press).—There are 2,000 artists active in Stockholm today. About a hundred are added each year. The field is therefore crowded and it is not always easy for a painter or sculptor to earn a livelihood.

A Stockholm newspaper has made an inquiry among some of the most prominent artists in the capital to find, if possible, a remedy to the situation. One trouble according to Isaac Gruenewald, well-known decorative painter, is that the young artists are in too great a hurry to produce. In olden days they worked for years before they appeared before the public, whereas now "one-man exhibitions" of inconspicuous painters are held continually.

He also regrets the great number of art galleries in Stockholm. Not long ago artists were on the lookout for a place where they might hang their pictures. Today the vast exhibition halls with acres of walls to fill are hunting up the artists. This in turn forces painters to produce more than they should.

Prof. Olle Hjortzberg, head of the Royal Academy of art, feels however that the Swedish art industry which in recent years has undergone a renaissance, absorbs a great number of young artists and the army of idle painters and sculptors in Stockholm is not so large.

Torsten Palm, another Stockholm artist, maintains the lack of suitable studios at reasonable rentals checks the career of many a promising student, whereas Martin Aberg, a painter, feels the Swedish middle class has a keen artistic sense and is willing to buy the works of native artists, provided they show enough talent.

C.P.R. IS BUILDING NEW FAST TRAIN

Standard for Comfort and Convenience which Excels Anything in Canada Will Be Set.

MONTREAL, Que., Jan. 19. —Fifteen cars with a vita-glass solarium, observation lounge, women's lounge, and bath room, men's bath, smoking rooms, buffet and valet service, are being constructed for service on the Trans-Canada between Montreal and Toronto and Vancouver, and on the Mountaineer, which operates between Chicago and the Pacific Coast, it was learned here to-day. These cars, which are being built to the company's own design, will be completed at the Canadian Pacific Angus Shops in time to be included in the train complement when the Trans-Canada makes its initial run on May 12, and the Mountaineer on June 10. Setting a standard for comfort and convenience which excels anything known in Canada, even on these two deluxe trains the cars will be given over entirely to the comforts of the passengers and will contain no bedrooms. The solarium is considerably larger than the rear end open platform which it replaces, and is entirely enclosed with specially processed glass which does not break up the beneficial light rays. Tapestry covered chairs will seat 17 in the observation parlor adjoining. An alcove with a writing desk and book case occupies a position in the centre of the car. Smoking and lounge space on the car is exceptionally commodious, the ladies lounge and bath room being particularly roomy and to be appointed in a style which will match the other sections of the car.

RADIO COMMISSION SEEKS SUGGESTIONS

Secretary of Local Radio Club Receives Letter From Commission.

The secretary of the local radio club has received the following letter from the recetnly appointed radio commission:

I have the honor to advise you that a Royal Commission on radio broadcasting has been appointed by the Dominion Government to enquire into the existing situation in Canada and to examine the different methods adopted in other countries.

The purpose of the enquiry is to determine how radio broadcasting in Canada can be most effectively carried on in the interests of Canadian listeners, and in the national interests of Canada.

According to the terms of reference of the Order-in-Council appointing the Commission, it is considered that the desired end might be achieved in several ways, provided funds are available, viz.:

The establishment of one or more groups of stations operated by private enterprise in receipt of a subsidy from the Government.

The establishment and operation of stations by a Government-owned and financed company.

The establishment and operation of stations by provincial governments.

The Commission would be glad to give its best coisideration to any views on the subject of this enquiry submitted by your organization.

TRUSTEES FOUND GUILTY.

OTTAWA, Ont., Jan. 18. —(Canadian Press)—The entire board of school trustees for the Township of Aylwin, Que., was found guilty by Judge Roland Millar in Hull Court yesterday, of failing to comply with health regulations of the Province. The members were fined $5 and costs in each of two separate cases.

TRIUMPH FOR BOOTH PARTY

Deed Promises if General Voluntarily Retires He May Name His Successor.

ADJUDICATED UNFIT

(By Henry Somerville, Copyright)

LONDON, Eng., Jan. 18. —(Special to the Examiner) — The unanimous suggestion of the High Council that Bramwell Booth should resign the leadership comes as a puzzling surprise to outsiders for it opens the way to a complete triumph of what was called the Booth party. The deed promises that if the general voluntarily retires the successor whom he has nominated has the right to office of general-ship.

The High Council can only seize the power of nominating, a new General if it adjudicates Bramwell Booth as unfit.

Fifty-six members of the High Council had indicated he would not have been surprised at a request for his resignation and it may be assumed that some of those who voted for the resolution would not vote in favor of adjudicating the General as unfit. The reform party will not be satisfied with the resignation of Bramwell Booth if it means the succession of his wife or daughter. There is, of course, no certainty that the name of any Booth is contained in the sealed envelope the General has delivered to the solicitors. The reform party in calling the High Council were less concerned to get rid of Bramwell Booth than to end the system of personal autocracy but the High Council cannot change the constitution. It can only effect its purpose by appointing a general who is prepared to carry out its views.

Bramwell Booth himself was considering the questions of constitutional reform when he was stricken by illness and it is very probable that any new General even if it be Mrs. Booth herself will inaugurate some reforms

But the advanced reform party will consider itself defeated if Bramwell Booth nominates the next General and that General proves to be his wife or daughter. There were angry feelings when the High Council learned that Bramwell Booth's letter was to be published in the War Cry and the Council gave orders for copies of the War Cry already printed to be destroyed.

W. A. Jowitt, K. C., has been retained by Bramwell Booth as his legal advocate. It depends on the High Council itself to determine whether counsel be allowed to address it.

PLYMOUTH PRICES SHOW REDUCTION

Saving is From $15 in Sedan to $40 in De Luxe Coupe.

Prices of all Plymouth closed cars are reduced by the Plymouth Motor Corporation of Canada Limited, division of the Chrysler Corporation of Canada Limited, The savings are from $15 for the two-door sedan, $25 for the four-door sedan, $30 for the coupe, to $40 for the de luxe coupe.

New economies in manufacture, almost revolutionary even to the building of motor cars, together with the big public demand the Plymouth has created ever since its introduction to the public last July, make this action possible, said R. H. Mulch, Plymouth sales manager.

"The economy in buying and operating a Plymouth, its full size and quality features, have created for that car such a demand that we can pass the savings on it to every potential buyer in the field of lowest priced cars," said Mr. Mulch. "In all Chrysler history, no product it has ever built offers so large a proportion of the public the opportunity for ownership of a Chrysler-built car as does the Plymouth at this new price— a full-sized car with weather-proof hydraulic four wheel brakes, established economy and modern engineering."

The new priced range, which extends from $820 for the coupe to $890 for the four-door sedan, is the lowest at which any Chrysler-built car has ever been sold.

There will be no changes in the quality, large size or economy in ownership of the car, Mr. Mulch continued. Enlargement of manufacturing facilities for the Plymouth to meet the extraordinary demand it has created have been under way practically since the day it was announced and are now nearing completion.

Complete new Plymouth factory prices, effective throughout Canada, are:

Coupe, $820; two-door sedan $860; roadster $850; four-door sedan $890; de luxe coupe $870 and touring $870.

Officials of the Chrysler Corporation state that no price reductions on any other Chrysler products are contemplated.

LUMBER EMPLOYEE FEARED DROWNED

Has Not Been Seen Since January 6, When He Left To Set Trap Lines.

PEMBROKE, Ont., Jan. 18 (Canadian Press).—Fears that Ernest Faulkner, missing employe of the Opeongo Lumber Company, has been drowned in the Opeongo River, were strengthened yesterday when Provincial Constable Allen Kenny returned here after completing his investigation. The constable had been able to follow Faulkner's tracks from his cabin to the river edge but could find no marks showing the man had retracked for this spot.

Faulkner has not been seen since January 6 when he left to set trap lines. His home is at Cormac, Ontario.

DRY MEXICO IS DISCUSSED

Wave of Idealism Has Followed New Administration of Portes Gil.

MANY REFORMS

MEXICO CITY, Mex., Jan. 18. —(Canadian Press). — The wave of idealism that came in with the Portes Gil administration apparently found a public disposed to co-operate. Various measures proposed during the month in which the present government has functioned have aroused interest and favorable comment.

It remained for the president's latest declarations, however, to cause a real sensation, and Mexicans from Huarez to the Guatemalan border are discussing the possibility of a dry Mexico. This land, famous for its tequila and pulque, is wondering whether music and sports—whether the programme of "cultural education" planned by its chief executives can take the place of the liquors so intimately associated with national tradition.

When the president brought forth his new labor project, seeking to set up labor courts, conscript labor in time of emergency and work other drastic reforms, the people displayed lively interest, and when the secretary of public instruction, Esequiel Padilla, announced that the Soviet Russian system of education would be adopted in Mexico, further interest and a furtherance of the favorable atmosphere in which the government is working became apparent. But when the newspapers printed the information that a "cultural education" campaign would be launched in an effort to stamp out alcoholism the prohibition or "estado seco" question immediately became the prime subject of discussion.

Had the president attempted to bring about an immediate ban on liquor it is generally conceded he would have incurred public hostility, but his plan of gradually separating the people from the drink habit has met with applause and the public seems inclined to aid in converting itself by promoting "clean and uplifting entertainment."

The president does not drink, neither does he smoke. He is greatly interested in sports, especially baseball, and believes that if he can interest the people in a similar sense they will lose their desire for intoxicants.

PRINCESS MARY IS THROWN OFF HORSE

Owing To Softness of Ground the Princess Was Not Injured.

LONDON, Jan. 18 (Canadian Press).—Princess Mary was thrown from her horse while hunting Monday with the Bronham Moor hounds and might have received serious injuries, according to The Daily Mail to-day.

Her horse floundered in the mud near Selby House, the story says, and fell on its side. The Princess was thrown clear some distance away, but owing to the softness of the ground was not hurt.

Denver is one mile above sea level.

FANS LEARN FACTS ON CUBS IN FIGURES

Team Had All of Fielding Needed But Faded Out On Punch.

CHICAGO, Ill., January 18.—This is the season of the year when averages are about the only things that keep the smoke curling up the Winter League chimney. Ordinarily these figures are only food for gossip, but this time are of more than passing account locally because they show pretty plainly just why certain things did and did not happen last season to Joe McCarthy's magnetic Cubs. And they also show that at least one of the shortcomings should be considerably improved next season with Rogers Hornsby, the league's leading clouter, in the lineup.

If Mr. Hornsby hits next season as he always has hit and if Messrs Wilson, Cuyler and Stephenson hit as they can hit, it requires no mental gymnastics to reach a conclusion that pitchers who face the Cubs are not going to enjoy Roman holidays. Of course, Hornsby might strain one of his batting eyes or some one of the other clouters suffer physical injury, and in that event the parade would be altered considerably.

As a matter of fact the Cubs have not had much luck in their trades. They took Maranville, Grimm and Cooper from the Pirates and prospects were rosy. Maranville broke his leg in Spring training and never helped any. Cooper was only a bit better, still with us to off-set the others. Grimm is who flopped. Cuyler came along last year and just before the season opened hurt his hand in a crash against the stand. It took him three months to regain his stride

Another deal that didn't assay properly was Freigau from the Cardinals. However, Mike Gonzales came in the same swap and is still around despite his 40 or 50 years.

Sound Fielding Helps Cubs.

Getting back to the averages, the batting marks indicated the Cubs were a bit shy, but this was suspected right along, so why bring that up. Other departments of the figures were more interesting in view of the fact that they provided positive evidence as to why the Cubs stayed up in the race until the very end, their somewhat feeble attack notwithstanding. One reason was they could field. They also had some pitching that was of more than every day ability and you might say that on an earned run basis they had a staff as strong as any in the league. Their wins, however, were somewhat restricted by the aforementioned light attack.

In the shape of fielding, it probably is known by now to most folks that the Cubs topped Mr. Heydler's circuit with a team figure of .975. No great difficulty is involved to explain why this high mark was attained. Captain Charles Grimm led the regular first sackers in fielding. Maguire, now in the the shoes, or predicament of a Brave, practically tied Frisch for top honors at second base; English was a bit down at short; Beck was proportionately the same as the leading Lindstrom at third. Hartnett was the leader among the regular catchers. The outfielders muffed a few, so were not particularly prominent, but they caught a lot that other outfielders would have missed.

The topper of the Cub staff was Blake, in the point of effectiveness. He was one of five men in the league who turned in four shutouts during the year. Nobody exceeded this mark. He was just a few notches below Vance the league leader, in effectiveness. Anybody who can finish even close to the big blond Robin must be quite a hurler.

If Blake is as good the coming season as he was last it will mean much, but there is that element of uncertainty about pitchers. Look at Root, for instance. In 1927 he won 26 games and there was no reason to suspect he would not do as well in 1928, but he fell down.

ANDERSON RINK IN BONSPIEL FINAL

Will Meet Chenhall Rink For Neil Trophy—One Game Postponed.

Two Peterborough rinks, Anderson and Chenhall will meet in the finals of the bonspiel for the Neil Trophy for which rinks from the district competed yesterday at the Peterborough Curling Club. The bonspiel was productive of some splendid curling, and many of the games were only won in the last end.

Fletcher's rink from Keene was the last rink from outside of the city to be left in the bonspiel, and the Keene team, although lacking practice, showed up well, losing out in the semi-finals to Anderson's rink.

The final game between Anderson and Chenhall was postponed because of the soft and watery ice, and it will be played at the earliest date that good ice is available.

TORONTO CLUB TIES CANUCKS; OVERTIME TILT

Howie Morenz Stars For Montreal Team—Standings Unchanged.

BRUINS IN 1-1 TIE.

Americans and Maroons Battle To Scoreless Draw at Montreal.

TORONTO, Ont., January 18 (Canadian Press). — In addition to seeing the Leafs break the jinx that has attended them in the two previous overtime games they have played this season, when they lost here to Ottawa and Americans in the extra ten minutes, another almost-capacity house last night at the Arena Gardens had it convincingly demonstrated to them how important Howie Morenz is to the Montreal Canadiens as far as the type of play that has made them the greatest attraction around the National circuit. The clash, the third between the locals and the Habitants this year, produced two goals, which were scored in the first four minutes of the second period, and this gave the teams a point each, and as the other important struggle, between the Maroons and Americans in Montreal, ended in a scoreless deadlock, the relative positions of all four contenders remain the same.

RANGERS BLANK BRUINS.

NEW YORK, N.Y., January 18 (Canadian Press). — For forty-five minutes of wide open hop, the Chicago Black Hawks held the New York Rangers, leaders of the National Hockey League, on even terms last night before "Bun" Cook, speedy left wing, scored the goal and gave the Rangers a 1 to 0 victory. The game was one of the fastest and cleanest seen here this season. Only three penalties were called.

SCORELESS DRAW.

MONTREAL, Que., January 18 (Canadian Press). — The New York Americans and Montreal Maroons, holders of first and third places respectively, in the Canadian section of the National Hockey League, battled to a scoreless draw at the Forum here last night.

The game was a mixture of good, bad and indifferent hockey. Both teams had real scoring chances, especially the Maroons, but good work by the rival defensive bulwarks proved too much for the offensive thrusts of the two teams.

BATTLE TO TIE.

DETROIT, Mich., January 18 (Canadian Press). — The Boston Bruins and Detroit Cougars, bitter rivals in the American division of the National Professional Hockey League, battled through an overtime period here last night to a 1 to 1 tie, with no change in the standing of either team. Boston remains in second place while Detroit is two points below in third position.

Cooney Welland Bruin wingman scored a long shot that got by "Dollie" Dolson, Cougar goaltender, late in the second period. Toward the end of the final period, Captain Reg Noble scored when the Bruins were a man short because of a penalty

COOMBS HANDLE BELL.

The Peterborough Intermediates play the Oshawa Simcoes at the Brock Street Ring to-night. The Petes have been playing great hockey this season having had two wins in their first two starts and they have strong hopes of continuing their smart work and taking the Motor City outfit into camp to-night.

Oshawa played two hard games with the strong Port Hope Ontarios and they looked good in their practise at Bowmanville on Monday night. The team plays fast combination and are one of the cleanest sextettes in the circuit.

The Petes will have a strong line up to meet them, having been practising almost nightly all week. Jack LeBarr will be in the nets and the defence will be looked after, the forward line went on all six in their recent game in Bowmanville, breaking three abreast for fast combination attacks that sifted through the defence. Ernie Degon is adding a good deal of punch to the attacks too.

Elwood Coombs of Lindsay will be the referee and the fans may rest assured that the game will be well-handled with him in the bell ringing role.

The puck will be tossed to the teams sharp at 8.15.

FAMOUS HOCKEY GAMES OF PETERBOROUGH TEAMS

By F. D. C.

There was a great race in this district in the intermediate series in 1914 when the Petes found themselves grouped with Whitby, Bowmanville, Oshawa, Cobourg and Belleville.

Starting with a loss at home the local crew started on a winning streak that had but on check when they were beaten 3 to 2 on soft ice in Belleville and finally the race narrowed down to a point where by winning in Whitby the Petes could capture the district honors.

This was one of the big games of that season and a special train carried a large number of Peterborough fans to Sheriff Paxton's town for the clash. Whitby were themselves out of the running but they had been the victims of very rough treatment at the hands of the Petes the season before and naturally were ready to work their heads off to nip the championship aspiration of the visitors.

Whitby's big new rink held the largest crowd that up to that time had seen a game in Whitby and the exhibition given by the two teams was worthy of the attendance. The Lakeshore bunch had plenty of speed but were lacking in the team work that distinguished the play of the Petes and this deficiency was fatal to their chances.

Whitby delighted their supporters by running in the first two goals and half through the first half still held their lead. Then the Petes started to travel. Kelly got their first goal on a pass from Bond and then Denison went the length of the rink, pulled Jubb out and pushed the rubber into the empty net. Kelly put his team in front with another sensational play, much like Denison's and made the score 4 to 2 a minute later with one of his bullet drives from the side. Lavery scored for Whitby just before half time leaving the score at the breathing period 4 to 3 for Peterborough.

Whitby staged a rally early in the second half and made things interesting for ten minutes but couldn't score. Finally a Bond to Park play put the Petes two goals in front again and Park went in alone to make the figures 6 to 3. That practically ended the argument although Whitby shoved in another counter from a scrimmage shortly before the finish.

The Petes went into the game handicapepd by the loss of Cyril Giroux, their captain and rover, who had been suspended for a mix up in the Cobourg game and Grover Halpin, captain of the junior team, jumped into his place and did well.

The line up

Peterborough—Goal, "Skid" James; defence, Percy Bond, Fred Denison; rover, Grover Halpin; centre, Maurice Park; right wing, Dave Bradshaw; left wing, Fred Kelly.

Whitby — Goal, Jubb; defence, Smith, McIntyre; rover, Lavis; centre, Rice; right wing, Watson; left wing, Blanchard.

Referee—Chad Toms, Toronto.

It will be noticed that the defence pair for the first time are designated as such, instead of being called point and cover point as they had been up to that year.

FAMOUS JOCKEY IS IN BANKRUPTCY

Steve Donoghue Tells of Transactions With James White, Notorious Financier.

LONDON, Jan. 17. —(Canadian Press Cable). Jockey Steve Donoghue made some remarkable disclosures today in his transactions with James White, notorious financier and racehorse owner who committed suicide at his country home a year and a half ago.

The veteran jockey was being examined in the bankruptcy court. He showed liabilities of $165,000, and assets of $2,900 which are absorbed in a preferential claim. His creditors accepted $1 in $5. Donoghue told the court he had a verbal retainer from white of $30,000 a year. This was never paid him but he was given $15,000 in a financial trust. Eventually White persuaded him to sign a promissory note for $105,000, representing money White presumably paid Donoghue, although in reality the jockey owed nothing.

Donoghue further said he went to the money-lenders and the amounts he received from them went to pay big arrears on a claim by the income tax authorities. He was now a free lance rider, receiving $15 a mount and $15 for a win, Donoghue said, adding he might possibly receive substantial additional presents.

The Jockey who is the only man to have ridden six winners in the Derby, his last victory in the classic being on Manna in 1925, has been more or less out of sight for some time. His son Pat is beginning to make a name for himself as a rider.

Two teams from the Humberside Collegiate, Toronto, will play two teams representing the local Y.M.C.A. at the "Y" gym, this Saturday. Doug. The winners of each separate group play off, as in rugby, for the Central Ontario championship.

Cobourg Collegiate and P. C. I. have always been great rivals in basketball, and the game this Saturday should stretch both teams to the full. The P. C. ART GIROUX HELD TO DRAW

Montreal Boxer Unable To Maintain Fast Pace Against Ross.

GAINS TO DEFEND TITLE.

WATERVILLE, Man., Jan. 17. — (Canadian Press). — Art Giroux of Montreal, who outfought Frankie Genaro in Portland, several months ago, was held to a draw here last night by Johnny Ross of South Boston in a rugged six round bout.

Giroux started fast and could not maintain his lead. The South Boston lad landed a heavy left freely, opening a cut over Giroux eye which effectually slowed up the Montreal boxer in the later rounds.

Will Defend Title.

TORONTO, Ont., Jan. 18. —(Canadian Press). — Playfair Brown, of the Shamrock Athletic Club, Toronto, announced last night that Larry Gains Canadian Heavy-weight champion, would defend his title, against Charlie Belanger of Winnipeg, Canadian light-heavy-weight title-holder here on January 25.

B. C.'S MERMAID MARVEL

Audrey Griffin, of Victoria, has won so many Canadan, British Columbia and Pacific Nothwest swimming champoinships that if she wore all the medals and cups she has and tried to wear them in the water she would sink like a mill-stone. Miss Griffin is the greatest swimmer, male or female, that the West has ever produced. She has been winning races ever since she could purl a stitch and seldom has she met defeat. She has won the Canadian half-mile, 500-yard, 200-yard and 100-yard championships. She has never been beaten in a British Columbia women's championship in twelve years. She has competed for twelve years in The Times' annual through Victoria swim of three miles and won nine times. Only on three occasions has she been beaten bly a man. For the last two years she has attended the Banff winter carnival and won every woman's race. She has received invitations to take part in meets in Eastern Canada and the United States and was considered as a likely prospect for the English Channel crossing a few years back, but she is not a traveller and does not go very far afield. Her times for all events are not far behind those of the far-shifting mermaids from across the line.

The local rink was the scene of some great curling yesterday, when the bonspiel for the Neil Trophy was played. There were in all twenty-five teams entered, Keene, Millbrook, Lakefield and the Peterborough Curling Clubs participating.

* * * * * *

Curling is one of the most keenly amateur games in the whole world of sports. Certainly no one could ever cast even the hint of professionalism at any curling teams past or present. The players buy their own stones, pay their club fees, and play for the sheer love of the game. Curling holds its players in its thrall because every game brings up a new situation demanding a new method of approach, and because it is the essence of good sportsmanship.

* * * * * *

Robert E. Kelley writing in Association Men throws the true light on the ever increasing popularity of hockey in the United States:—

It has been, for the past several years, the practice to sneer, more or less, at professional sport of all kind whenever the discussion of sportsmanship or hard play came up. You were to consider that no branch of professional sport was more than a business and that no one interested in the sport ever cared about doing more than just enough to insure the continuance of the pay checks.

For the past three years, professional ice hockey has been invading the United States with great success. It has been drawing big crowds and the cynics are unable to understand the thing. They are unable to understand it because all of the men play to the extreme of their ability all during a game and the bumps and hard knocks of the sport are such that the injuries are frequent.

"I can't understand these men" said one veteran of professional sport the other day. "Here they are all hired to furnish amusement for the populace and they are banging each other up night after night. I can't understand why they continue to play that way. Why don't they get together and ease off a bit. They're all in it for a living, aren't they?"

The progress of hockey will be interesting to watch during the next few years. It is almost invariably the men on the outside who ruin a sport. The men who play it are sportsmen to begin with in nearly every case, whether they are paid for their services or not. As a rule, any game under the sun requires courage of some sort or another before a participant can become good enough to star at it. And when you have courage, it is not often that crookedness is connected with it. The men playing ice hockey now are almost all from the open parts of Canada, where the sport is taught to them as boys and they consider it the sport of them all. They are passionately fond of their game and they play it for all they are worth. It will be a shame if some of the "sure thing" gentry who hide away in galleries at sporting events are able to mar this rough, fast and thrilling pastime.

It has its legends of course which are added to with each season. The finale of last year's play when the New York Rangers young and inexperienced, found themselves battling for the world's championship without any regular goal guard and their manager years out of active play, stepped into the nets to save the day for them takes high rank for drama and sporting interest with any sport played anywhere.

"IRON MAN" STUNT

NEW YORK, N.Y., Jan. 18 (Canadian Press).—Phil Edwards, Canadian Olympic running star, will attempt an "Iron Man" stunt a week from Saturday night. He plans to compete in the 800 metre special at the Masonic Games in the 102nd Engineers Armoury, Upper Manhattan, and an hour later in the 600 yard special at the Norwegian Turn Society Games in the 2nd Naval Battalion Armoury in Brooklyn.

AT THE GRAND.

THE DARK LADY OF THE SONNETS and FANNY'S FIRST PLAY

When Maurice Colbourne presents Fanny's First Play at the Grand Theatre to-morrow night he will wisely omit the induction and the epilogue. But it was not without a struggle that Bernard Shaw allowed him to do this. Last summer when Mr. Colbourne was in London Shaw maintained that the critics who form the induction and the epilogue were, to use his own words, as "funny as comic green-grocers and mothers-in-law." However, Mr. Colbourne won and indeed these critics have largely lost their savour because their originals (all real London newspaper men) are to-day either unrecognizable or dead. Mr. Colbourne felt that by leaving these critics in their obscurity or their graves, and by putting that delicious bit of impertinence "The Dark Lady of the Sonnets" in their place, he would be giving theatre patrons more of a dramatic feast for their money. Also it was felt that the production of this one-act master trifle was extraordinarily opportune this Season, seeing that the Stratford-upon-Avon Festival Company are this year paying their first visit to this side of the water. The connection between the two is obvious when it is remembered that the characters of "The Dark Lady" consists of a Beefeater, the Dark Lady, Queen Elizabeth and Will Shakespeare himself.

Maurice Colbourne himself will play the part of Shakespeare; and in "Fanny's First Play" Miss Phillis Coghlan one of the loveliest members of Mr. Colbourne's Company will make her bow in one of the most farcical and amusing of all Shavian parts, that of "Darling Dora" while Mr. Colbourne will play "Juggins," the inscrutable foot-man, with a past and a future.

So full of music were the Lad's words that William was at once enamoured and commenced to woo her—and just at that minute Mary came out to keep her date! Jealousy and chagrin know no discretion; so Mary in her rage strikes the faithless one from the embrace of the cloaked figure. Whereupon the Queen becomes very wide awake and revealing her identity, calls William some very nasty things. Mary quakes, Elizabeth storms, and William protests, parries and at last persuades Her Majesty to take an interest in plan for an endowed Theatre.

But even Sovereigns are given to procrastination; Shakespeare and all his direct heirs had perished, Elizabeth had passed to her reward and almost a dozen other British Monarchs followed, when Shaw wrote this ironic little piece in aid of the same pet scheme. It was produced in 1910 as a benefit for the Theatre which Victoria's reign had at last seen fit to endow in memory of the world's greatest playwright and poet.

AT THE CAPITOL.

"THE WHIP."

This feature is one of the horse-race pictures in which all the interest centres around the great race and the intrigues which are spun in a web about it. However, the race itself is not nearly as thrilling as others that have been filmed from time to time on the silver sheet, although the bad start given "The Whip" and the manner in which he works himself out of a dangerous pocket, give the onlookers some itneresting moments.

The cast is exceptionally interesting. Dorothy Mackaill is the heroine, the typical English beauty and horsewoman, Diane Beverley, daughter of the Marquis of Beverley, owner of the fast and temperamental "Whip," which is entered in the Gold Cup races at Ascot and is the centre of a plot wound by Kelly, a fat and energetic bookmaker, and a villain in the person of the engaging Lowell Sherman, who gives at all times one of the smoothest and most convincing characterizations of a suave malefactor that can be met anywhere.

Marc McDermott, as the Marquis of Beverley, is not as convincing as when he takes a role of another and more sinister calibre, but he makes a brave figure, nevertheless, as host as the famous Hunt ball, where numerous developments occur.

Ralph Forbes, who is the hero, Lord Brancaster, becomes involved with a siren-like beauty, Iris d'Aquilla (Anna Q. Nilsson and wishes to marry her. When he discovers her true character, he rejects her and goes on a mad motor drive which results in a bad accident, from which loss of memory ensues. Then Sartoris, the engaging villain who has an eye on Diane and is incidentally liable to lose all his money if "The Whip" wins the great race, gets Iris to present a forged marriage certificate and claim to be Lady Brancaster, trusting to Brancaster's loss of memory to carry the thing through.

Sartoris sets the stage for the girl he wants, the money and the race. To gain the latter, he uncouples the car which contains "The Whip" from the fast train to which it is attached and allows it to collide with the roaring London express, directly behind. But Brancaster, who has been battling with him above the speeding rails in a thrilling episode, and who is pitched off by Sartoris, who believes him dead, revives in time to get the horse out of the car before it is smashed to bits by the express. Then the great race is pulled off, and "The Whip," to the chagrin of Sartoris and Kelly, reappears, runs the race, and wins it.

So the story winds up to a happy and successful conclusion, with the virtuous characters triumphant and the villains led off in disgrace.

—Jeanette.

TRAFFIC HELD UP.

Township Roads Too Heavily Laden With Snow For Motor Traffic.

(Examiner Correspondence)

BAILIEBORO, Jan. 18.—The township roads are now too heavily laden-ed with snow for motor traffic. In many places the banks are two and three feet deep, while the roads are quite heavy for traffic. Many residents of the township have stored their cars in the village where they can run them on the highway throughout the winter months.

There will soon be a heavy motor traffic across Rice Lake to the highway. Last winter this beautiful winter road was used by hundreds of motorists and afforded an excellent highway until the ice became unsafe in the spring.

Holds Annual Meeting.

At the annual meeting of the Victor Tuxis group, held in Mr. Bateson's hall on Saturday evening, Archie Deyell was elected mentor for the ensuing year. Mr. Deyell, who was pretor last year, presided during the regular service, while the reports of the various officers were given and which showed a decided advancement in the local square. The comptor's report showed a balance on hand of $30. Fred. Barnard presided at the election of officers, and the following were elected by ballot, David Taylor and Clifton Harper acting as scrutineers: Mentor, Archie Deyell; pretor, Arnold Brown; scriptor, Karl Lang; comptor, Joseph Barnard; deputy-pretor, Charles Barnard; sponsor, Edmund Earnshaw; captain of hockey team, Edmund Earnshaw; boxing instructor, Karl Lang; janitor, Melville Johnston.

At the conclusion of the election of officers, Keith Barnard, M.B.P., gave a talk on the session of the eighth Older Boys' Parliament which was held in Toronto during December.

A boys' work board for the constituency of East Durham was discussed and heartily approved of, as well as an aggressive bond-selling campaign which will take place within the next fortnight. Last year, more than one hundred dollars was raised in East Durham by selling bonds, and this year it is hoped that the results will be much greater. If the boys' work board is successfully organized, part of the bond selling money will come back to the local board to further advance Tuxis work in East Durham.

Rub a little Zam-Buk over your hands and arms to check and heal all roughness and chafing. It's wonderful.

Zam-Buk contains valuable herbal extracts which lubricate the tissues, soothe pain, allay inflammation and grow new healthy skin. Cold-sores, 'chaps', frost bite, chafing and similar troubles are quickly ended by Zam-Buk.

It provides the handiest and safest antiseptic dressing for all injuries and skin troubles.

COLDS—For cold in the head, smear a little Zam-Buk over the palms of the hands, and inhale. For colds in chest or back, rub briskly with slightly-warmed Zam-Buk night and morning.

A PECULIARITY of influenza is that its toxins upset the digestive system.

Too much "dosing," especially in the case of children, still further disturbs the digestion, and should be avoided except on advice of a physician.

Vicks VapoRub is especially valuable because it is applied externally, and so can be used freely without upsetting the most delicate digestion.

--avoid "dosing"

FLU

How best to use Vicks VapoRub

1. As A Preventive

Several times a day, insert Vicks up the nostrils, also melt a little night and morning in a bowl of boiling water and inhale the steaming medicated vapors.

2. If a Cold Starts

If possible, go home and go to bed. Apply hot wet towels over throat and chest until the skin is thoroughly reddened. Then rub vigorously with Vicks. Spread on thickly and cover with warm flannel.

Leave the bed-covering loose, so that the vapors, released by the body-warmth, may be freely inhaled. At the same time, Vicks acts through the skin like a poultice.

Repeat this treatment every four hours, eat lightly, and stay in bed until the cold is broken. Complete rest helps the body to throw off the cold more quickly.

3. After A Flu Attack

Physicians advise that the chief danger in this epidemic is after Influenza. Then, more than ever, colds attacking the weakened system may lead to bronchitis, sinous-trouble or pneumonia. This is especially true of children or old folks.

Heed even the slightest cold as a danger signal and treat it promptly without "dosing."

1918—
And Now

In the present epidemic, as in 1918, Vicks is proving to be the family standby in millions of homes. In spite of increased equipment it is again necessary to run the laboratories night and day.

and the north channel of Georgian Bay, it was once a busy C.P.R. stop. It has 204 houses of which 202 are now empty. Trains no longer stop there. Row upon row of two storey houses are snow covered and deserted. The doors of a few are open and bang noisly in the wind. Cold blasts from the north whistle through the cracks and virgin snow shroud the village in a ghostly blanket. Part of the roof is off the deserted church. The school is empty and no smoke curls skyward from any chimney.

The population was once 1,769. Today it consists of two families. The reason is easy to find. The Bell Lumber Company saw mill was burned down and never replaced. No other industry came to take its place and the people vanished from the town, leaving their homes behind.

That the sense of humor is preserved in many of the men committed for crime was evidenced by numerous incidents related by the speaker who went on to tell of the part played by the Church Army in ministering to their spiritual needs so that they might, on completing sentences, re-enter private life prepared to be of use to society. He concluded with several stories indicative of the good influences of the Army crusaders on the men who have erred and require correction.

NORTH BAY, Ont., Jan. 18 (Canadian Press).—T. MARSHAL FOCH IS MUCH BETTER

Doctors Are Satisfied With Improvement Shown in Aged General.

PARIS, Jan. 18 (Canadian Press).—Marshal Ferdinand Foch was so much better to-day that his doctors were actually talkative when they left his bedside after a consultation of two hours.

"His heart is better and stronger," said Professor Laubry.

"I am satisfied with the improvement in the condition of the kidneys," said Dr. Heitz-Boyer.

"And you may say for me that I found the Marshal's general condition somewhat better this morning," chimed in Foch's regular physician, Dr. Davenieres.

Together they issued:

"There is a slight improvement in the condition of the heart and kidneys."

Good Night's Sleep.

Marshal Foch had the best sleep last night that he has enjoyed since he was stricken last week.

The doctors said his spirits were high and he was hungry enough to ask for an egg with his breakfast this morning, while millions of younger and stronger Frenchmen were satisfied with coffee and a roll. His meals even when in the best of health are frugal and the doctors now have him on a light diet. He is showing, however, an increasing inclination to take more and more nourishment, they said.

A new heart stimulant which was given the Marshal this morning had highly satisfactory results, said Dr. Davenieres after a short call at the Marshal's bedside.

Ice in First-Class Condition For Oshawa-Petes Intermediate Game.

STRONG LOCAL ROSTER.

The mild weather has not affected the ice at the Brock Street Rink, and it will be in first-class condition for the big Intermediate game to-night between Oshawa and the Petes. Both are fast skating crews.

No skating was allowed in the rink last night so that the ice would be at its best for the game, and at noon to-day, when examined, it was firm and smooth.

Elwood Coombs of Lindsay will toss the teams the puck sharp at 8.15. The game will be well worth seeing, as the Petes have lined up some of the old stars on the team and are headed for the group championship.

Heavy Train Plunges Over Embankment

Fireman Is Killed; Many Are Injured At Stoney Creek

Toronto-Buffalo Passenger Train Plunged Over Embankment Early Last Night—Many Passengers Miraculously Escape Death On Steep Side of Hamilton Mountain.

RECENT HEAVY RAINS UNDERMINE TRACKS WHICH HAD BEEN CLOSELY INSPECTED DURING DAY

Relief Trains With Doctors and Nurses Are Rushed From Hamilton and Welland—Passengers in Day Coach Are Suffering From Cuts and Scalds.

STONEY CREEK, Ont., Jan. 19.—(By the Canadian Press).—One man was killed, one seriously injured, some ten or twelve slightly injured, and many people miraculously escaped death near here last night, when the engine and a number of coaches on train No. 31, of the Toronto, Hamilton and Buffalo Railway, bound for Hamilton from Buffalo plunged down a deep embankment.

The fireman on the train is believed to have met instant death and his body was found under the engine.

The engineer was seriously injured. All the injured were taken to hospitals in Hamilton by a relief train, which was rushed to the scene with nurses and doctors.

A wash-out underneath the track, was the cause of the wreck. Terrific rains which fell here during the day, loosened the ballast, and when the fast train passed over the weak spot the track gave way, precipitating the front part of the train down the side of the embankment. The embankment is along the side of a hill and over a hundred feet in height.

KILLED.

Edward Ricker, Hamilton, the fireman.

SERIOUSLY INJURED.

Daniel Grant, Hamilton, the engineer.

INJURED.

Edgar Mellenby, 40 William Street, Toronto.
J. T. Cassen, Alliston.
Ben Stewart, 944 King Street West, Toronto.

J. G. Lowe, 78 Charles Street East, Toronto.
E. E. Ott, 2136 Queen Street East, Toronto.
T. I. Anderson, 142 Roselawn avenue, Toronto.
The above are in Hamilton Hospital.

At an early hour this morning the train bearing the injured to Welland had not arived and railway officials here had no list of their names. It is said, however, that they all suffer the same type of minor injuries as those in the hospital at Hamilton.

A wash-out caused by the continuous rain of the past 40 hours, was responsible for the wreck officials admitted. The train was No. 83, due here at 8.05 p.m., and bound from Buffalo to Toronto. It was travelling at about 40 miles an hour when the accident happened. The grade at that point is fairly steep owing to the descent from the mountain.

Had Been Inspected.

The road bed was closely inspected late yesterday afternoon, and everything was thought to be secure. As the train approached, the engine and tender left the rails and plunged down the side of the mountain. The baggage car turned over and the day coach was derailed.

Ricker, the fireman, was pinned under the wrecked engine and his body, it was stated, had not been recovered at a late hour last night. He is believed to have been killed instantly when the engine took its frightful plunge to a depth estimated at from 50 to 100 feet.

Engineer Grant had a miraculous

RITCHOT DIES IN HOSPITAL

Province Wide Search For Montreal Man Is Brought To An End.

UNDER TREATMENT.

MONTREAL, Que., Jan. 19. — (Canadian Press).—A province-wide search for Arthur Ritchot, woodsman, wanted in connection with the death of his wife, Annette Ritchot, found with a battered skull in the Ritchot home on Ontario street east on Jan. 7, was brought to an end here with the identification of the body of a man known under the name of Labelle in Hotel Dieu Hospital, as that of Ritchot. Mrs. Ritchot died ten minutes after being discovered lying in a pool of blood in a bedroom.

The police during their two weeks' hunt for Ritchot were led to many outlying places in the province but all clues proved to be false. Ritchot, who had been undergoing treatment for an infected hand before the death of his wife, was probably in Montreal all the time. On Jan. 15, he entered the Hotel Dieu for medical attention. He was not recognized until his death late yesterday by an interne who had seen a description of the wanted man on a circular issued by the police.

This morning the police were notified that a man answering to Ritchot's description had died at the hospital. Captain Vierge went at once to the hospital and identified the corpse.

ST. PAUL'S CHURCH ANNUAL MEETING

Women's Missionary Society Contributed $1,829.86—The Minister Made 947 Calls.

In the report of St. Paul's Presbyterian Church in last evening's Examiner it was stated that the Women's Missionary Society contributed $1,329.86. This should have read $1,829.86.

It also should have been stated in the newspaper report that instead of the usual session report the pastoral letter would appear in the annual report which is to be printed.

The minister during the year had made 947 calls. Ninety-three members had been added to the membership roll during the year, forty-three of these coming by certificate and fifty by confession of faith.

Altogether St. Paul's had a very successful year during 1928.

Government Spent $1,300,000 On Suppressing Fires In Ontario During Past Year, Declares Minister

TORONTO, Ont., Jan. 19.—(Canadian Press).—Detection and suppression of forest fires in Ontario during 1928 cost the government approximately $1,300,000, it was announced here yesterday by Hon. William Finlayson; Minister of Lands and Forests, during the course of a cabinet hearing to an Ontario Municipal Council deputation.

Territory destroyed by fire approximately 100,000 acres, most of which was in the far northwest corner of the district of Patricia, out of reach of both ground and aerial fire fighting forces.

The service's record is generally viewed as a most remarkable one, in view of the fact that it has to face probably the most serious spring fire hazard in its history.

C.N.R. ENGINEER LOSES HIS LIFE NEAR TRENTON

Severe Flood Causes Small Wooden Railroad Bridge To Be Undermined.

ENGINE DROPS 25 FEET.

Fireman Jumps Clear of Wreckage and Is Uninjured—Tracks Are Torn Up.

BELLEVILLE, Ont., Jan. 19 (Canadian Press).—Roy Post, Trenton, C.N.R. engineer, lost his life when his engine overturned, owing to the washout of a bridge one and one-half miles west of Bayside station, early to-day. His fireman, Bert Howson, jumped clear of the wreckage, and was uninjured. The accident occurred about seven o'clock to-day and Post was taken from the wreckage about four hours later.

This district has been visited by a severe flood during the past twelve hours, and this caused the small wooden bridge to undermine. Post drives the way-freight, which leaves Trenton every day. When he arrived at the bridge, the structure gave away and the engine dropped some twenty-five feet; the tender and some of the cars piling in on top. The engineer was pinned in his cab and probably died from injuries and exposure. The wrecking crane was brought from Trenton, but it was impossible to lift the engine. The cab was chopped away and Post extricated.

The tracks are torn up for a considerable distance and it will be some time before the track is cleared for traffic.

BOY FLAGS TRAIN.

POMEROY, Ohio, January 19 (Canadian Press). — A youth, ill with influenza, crawled from his bed and saved a New York Central Railroad train from an almost certain wreck at Dyesville, near here, last night.

The youth, Glen Cline, living at Dyesville, heard a roar along the railroad tracks as he lay in his bed. Convinced that the sound he heard was the crush of stone and dirt in the railroad 'cut" a short distance from his home, he got out of bed, seized a lantern, and made a hurried inspection.

The investigation proved his fears correct. Tons of earth and rock had filled the cut. Knowing the passenger train Number Six was due in a few minutes, the lad ran to a bend a short distance from the landslide, and waved his lantern as the locomotive bore down on him.

Engineer Tom Riley saw the faint light swinging to and fro in the darkness and applied the brakes. The train was brought to a stop just as it entered the cut.

Passengers on the train have already started a move to obtain a Carnegie Hero Medal for the boy.

FURTHER GAINS MADE BY FOCH

Doctors State War Leader Making Steady Progress Towards Recovery.

HAS RESTFUL SLEEP.

PARIS, Jan. 19. — (Canadian Press).—Marshal Ferdinand Foch gained further ground to-day in his fight against attacks upon both his heart and kidneys.

The Marshal has not yet reached the first objective of his doctors which is to get him out of danger and definitely on the road to recovery. He was, however, making steady progress toward that goal.

The morale of Foch was described by his physicians this morning as marvelous. They said they hoped by tomorrow to permit him to read newspapers again. Their bulletin said:

"The perceptible improvement noted yesterday persists to-day."

For the first time since her distinguished husband became ill; Madame Foch came out of the house for a few minutes this morning. She said, the Marshall had enjoyed a refreshing sleep during the night and was "getting on better" at breakfast time. Her remarks were made before the doctors came for their morning consultation so it was evident that to laymen Foch had made some improvement.

Marshall Foch's physicians issued this bulletin this morning.

"The perceptible improvement noted yesterday persists to-day."

The roll of school children in London is decreasing by about 3000 annually, owing to the lower birthrate.

ACTING CHIEF OF SALVATION ARMY

Commissioner E. J. Higgins, shown above, was raised to acting chief of the Salvation Army by the high council, when action was taken to depose Gen. Booth as high commander, but the appointment has been forestalled by an injunction, obtained on January 18, by Gen. Booth against the action of the high council in forcing him out. Gen. Booth remains at the head of the Army until the question is decided in the courts.

BRITISH LIBERALS ENDORSE HOME RULE PLAN FOR SCOTLAND

English Parliament Is Getting Ready For Final Session Before Dissolution.

LLOYD GEORGE ABSENT.

Government Plans To Relieve Productive Industries of Some of Weight of Local Taxation.

LONDON, Jan. 19. — (By George Hambleon, staff correspondent of the Canadian Press). — Parliament resumes its final session on January 22. The principal business before it is the long and complicated de-rating bill through which the Government plans to relieve productive industries —Agricultural, Industrial and Transportation concerns—of some of the weight of local taxation. But important as this measure may be, the coming weeks will be followed with interest more as a "curtain raiser" to the General Elections.

Rt. Hon. David Lloyd George, convalescing on the Mediterranean, will not be present to lead the Liberal forces at the opening. But for the rest no effort will be spared and no move missed to secure a tactical advantage in preparations for the coming fight.

New Developments.

The last few days have seen two significant developments in the political world. On the one hand, the National Farmers' Union threatens a revolt against the Government unless safe-guarding or a measure of tariff protection is extended to agriculture. On the other, Sir Herbert Samuel has pledged the Liberal Party to support the movement for Home Rule in Scotland. Sir Herbert's declaration made in North Midlothian's by-election campaign has brought Scottish Nationalism to the forefront of political discussion. Although one of the four candidates in North Midlothian — Lewis Spence—stands on the definite issue of equal status as between England and Scotland, little was published south of the Tweed of the Scottish Nationalist Campaign.

Sir Herbert's statement, however, have given wide publicity and have drawn a rather surprised attention to the growth of the movement, one London paper observes that Scottish Nationalism suffers for lack of opposition, because its opponents don't know what to oppose.

Control Customs in London.

While supporting a Scottish Parliament and a Scottish Ministry, the Liberal party organizer does not go so far as Spence. Spence would give to the Scottish Parliament full control over customs. Sir Herbert, however, holds that any question of a tariff wall across Britain would inflict great injury to the business, industry and economic development of both countries.

And while the various parties are sparring for political position, the

Twenty-one Cars In Wreck At Madoc

CAMPBELLFORD, Jan. 19.—(Canadian Press.)— Twenty-one freight cars went off the track at Madoc Junction and caused the Canadian National Railways mail train, due here at 6.38 o'clock last night, to detour by way of Port Hope. A wrecking crew from Peterborough cleared the track. Nobody was reported injured.

SUPPER CLUB HEARS ADDRESS

Rev. Mr. Haddow Gives Instructive Talk On Trip To Bolivia.

JOLLY EVENING.

Despite the inclement weather, last evening, the regular weekly meeting of the Y. M. C. A. Friday Night Supper Club was an outstanding success. Forty five boys sat down to an enjoyable meal interspersed by three or four lively songs led by Gordon Dobbin. A very pleasing interpretation of that familiar and ever-popular song—"That Old Gang of Mine," was given by Ken. McCannan, Alan Heideman and Hedley Vickers, who styled themselves as 'The Three Black Crows.' That the boys enjoyed their little stunt was certainly evident from the enthusiastic applause they received. They were accompanied by Reg. Storey at the piano.

Mr. Wallace introduced the speaker of the evening, Rev. Mr. Haddow who has for some years been a missionary in Bolivia. Back in 1903, the meeting was informed, Mr. Haddow lived in Peterborough and was a member of the "Y." His talk last evening on "A Trip to Bolivia" was intensely interesting and from start to finish he held the close attention of the boys. His description of life on board ship and later, of the Panama Canal, was particularly striking. The gratitude of the club to Mr. Haddow was expressed by Ellsworth Deyell and Keith Copping.

Announcement was made during the meeting by Graham Eastwood of the appointment at a recent executive meeting of a new music committee consisting of Gordon Dobbin and Robert Allin.

If the turnout, last evening, may be taken as an indication of the popularity of the club among the boys, then the Friday Night Supper Club is indeed a "live" organization and prospects are very promising for its continued growth and popularity.

MAID POSES AS PRINCESS FOR SEVEN YEARS

Citizens of German Town Believe She Is Daughter of Queen Sophia.

FINALLY TIRES OF GAME.

Newly Made Friends, Disbelieving Her Confession and Willing To Give Money.

BERLIN, Jan. 19—The tale of how Martha Barth, kitchen maid who posed as Princess Margaret of Prussia and had a hectic time among those who basked in the sunshine of her smile and paid for it as though it were radium, was revealed the other day in court at Arfurt. There were 25 charges against Miss Barth who was convicted after the testimony of many witnesses and caused a prominent Berlin counsel to gasp in astonishment, and the judge closed his eyes with a sigh and despaired of human nature.

As penalty for false pretenses Miss Barth will serve two years in prison.

Fantastic Story.

After being in service "below stairs" for a number of years Martha shook the dust of her native town of Postdam off her feet in 1921 and descended, as a daughter of royal house proudly facing temporary adversity in the towns and villages of Thuringia.

In Erfurt she patronized two elderly women who owned a successful dressmaking establishment and she induced them to believe the fantastic story that she was the illegitimate daughter of Queen Sophia of Greece (a sister of the ex-kaiser); that she had been married to King Ferdinand of Bulgaria, but the marriage had been annulled, and that she was later married morganatically to the ex-Crown Prince Wilhelm, who was so passionately in love with her that he had his own marriage annulled.

King Constantine of Greece, she declared, had recognized her, but had not been able to give her the title of Princess of Greece, so that her name, therefore, did not figure in the Almanach de Gotha.

She was, however, entitled to call herself Princess Margaret of Prussia.

These extraordinary tales were believed by scores of tradespeople and prominent residents of Erfurt and the neighborhood, with the result that the "princess" was given credit and ran up big bills in shops, being treated everywhere with the utmost deference.

The swindle only came to light through the two dressmakers going one day to Postdam to visit "her Royal Highness" at the palace They did actually find her there—but in the stables talking to former fellow servants.

The dressmakers in court told tearful tales of how they believed themselves to be the most honored of women because they were on such terms of friendship with the "princess" and sacrificed evrything they possessed in the interests of her and her "royal relatives."

Prince in Poverty.

When the prosecuting counsel asked one of the sisters if they had given the kitchen maid money to help the ex-Crown Prince she replied: "Yes; she threw herself at my feet and told me that the Crown Prince was in such poverty that he had to sell the housuhold supply of sugar.

"We did this because we believed the Royal Crown Prince was hungry and so we were willing to sacrifice all we had."

They were "Crown Prince mad," she said in court, and one day when, to satisfy their craving to see the Crown Prince, she had pointed out a police officer in the street and said it was his Highness they made a court curtesy to the amazed policeman.

Another astonshing witness was the landlord of a hotel in a small health resort. "Martha arrived one fine day. She gave her true name, but managed to get the rumor abroad that she was realy a princess traveling incog."

So widely accepted was the story that the delighted landlord soon found his hotel crowded with social strivers. His faith was only strengthened when one day Martha ground the coffee to show him that "a princess could also work."

This evidence was borne out by Martha herself in her defense and she uttered a gem of wisdom worthy of a real princess.

"I got tired of the pose," she said. "I repeatedly told people that I was not a princess and never had been, but they simply decided that for some high reason I was trying to hide my identity and the more I denied it the more idiotic they were."

Four and Half Feet Of Water in Cellar Of Milling Company

Fire Department, With Steam Pumper, Is Called Out To Pump Water From Company's Cellar—Incinerator Is Flooded.

SURROUNDING FARM LAND COVERED WITH WATER; BETHUNE STREET BRIDGE WAS IN DANGER

City Engineer Persons and a Force of Workmen Spent Most of the Night Battling the Increasing Rise of Water in the Flooded Creek.

Water to a depth of more than four and a half feet poured into the cellars of the Maple Leaf Company on Dalhousie street, the cellar of the Bell Apartments on Hunter street was seriously flooded, and the City incinerator was also put out of operation by the flooding of the Jackson Park creek last night. The City fire department has been called upon with the steam pumping engine to-day, and during the morning worked unceasingly to clear the milling company's property. Later, it will go into action at the incinerator. Several other private buildings are believed to have suffered, though to what extent is not known.

Farm Land Flooded

With water six and eight inches deep covering acres of surrounding farm land, the City of Peterborough was threatened by heavy floods, particularly from the north-west, and only the yeoman service of a staff of men directed by City Engineer Parsons, the Mayor and Alderman Hamilton, chairman of the board of works, who labored in rain and cold, with picks, saws, axes and dynamite until the early hours of the morning, prevented much more serious damage than actually occurred. The danger from ice jams occurring in the Jackson Park and Downie street creeks was only offset by use of the dynamite, while near the outlet at Little Lake, the situation was aggravated by the lessening of the flow. There was also cause for alarm on Woodbine avenue, in East City.

Heavy rains which fell until after 2.30 a.m. were largely responsible, augmenting as they did, the already unwelcome water supply made available by the recent soft weather. It was not until the high winds began and the rain ceased that a slight improvement was noted and by ten o'clock this morning, the danger was past.

Went Over Road

City Engineer Parson, in discussing the situation this morning, stated that the only place where the water went over the roadway was above the Bethune street bridge. Believing that a free outlet would be the best solution to the problem, he and his men had labored to keep the lower part of the creeks open. He pointed out that while there was a heavy flow of water, it was not sufficiently heavy to carry down all the ice, so that the danger from jams was increased. Asked if any buildings had been flooded, Mr. Parsons said he understood that while the Maple Leaf Milling Company had suffered, the water was not sufficiently high to threaten the lower windows of the Ackerman Leather Goods plant, which suffered such heavy losses last Spring. This company had built an earth dam along the west edge of its property after last Spring's trouble and undoubtedly it would have been a great benefit had the water risen higher than it did.

"The largest ice flow came down about 9.40 last night," continued the Engineer, "and we were forced to use a lot of dynamite to keep the way open. The situation was serious near the Townsend street bridge and the C.P.R. bridges, but we do not anticipate any further trouble immediately.

Flooded Roads

Outside the city, motorists encountered almost unprecedented floor conditions, the roads leading through swamp country being, in many cases covered by water that hid them completely. Four cars that carried the Peterborough St. John's hockey team to Bobcaygeon found this to be so at several points on the Peterborough-Lindsay highway as well as near Downeyville, where water flowed down the roadway in a veritable rapids.

The Toronto-Peterborough Canadian National due in Peterborough at noon could not get through to-

SUICIDE BARES SECOND WOMAN

Young Farmer Torn By Love For Two Wives Decides To End Life.

CRIPPLED BY FALL.

SENATOBIA, Miss., Jan. 19.—Romance that faded slowly and torturously, with the cold touch of death putting out the last embers, is the theme of an extraordinary drama of three lives revealed to-day.

The tense and tragic story was pieced together after a document had been filed in court.

Miss Ones Sneed, a school teacher, disclosed that she had been the secret wife of Charles T. Bowden.

She and Bowden met while she was teaching school near her home. They fell in love and were married but decided to keep it secret until the close of the school term. That was three years ago. A little while before the session ended the bride was thrown from a horse and made an invalid for life.

Battle For Life.

Bowden sent for some of the best doctors in the South. They saw the girl, consulted, shook their heads. There was nothing they could do. Meanwhile she continued to live with her parents and to keep her marriage a secret. It was her wish. Their home was 25 miles from Bowden's farm.

The months and years passed. Bowden was thrown into contact with another girl. She knew nothing of his secret wedding. He learned to love her and his love was returned. They were engaged.

Bowden was tortured between his new love and loyalty to his invalid wife. Finally he told her. And she urged him to forget their marriage. No one in the community knew.

"I told him," she said, "that the doctors had pronounced my cass hopeless, that I never would recover; I was a cripple. I wanted him to find happiness where he could. I told him that our dead romance could lie buried forever."

Man Kills Himself.

Reluctantly, Bowden ageed. But he could not reconcile himself to the strange situation.

Last week, three days before his second marriage was to have taken place, he shot himself through the heart while seated on the bank of a creek which ran through his place. The young farmer brooded once too often.

People wondered what had driven him to suicide. No one could imagine his motive until Miss Sneed —or Mrs. Bowden—filed her petition.

The petition, revealing at last the secret marriage, asked that she be placed in possession of Bowden's property. With her claim she filed the marriage certificate.

No loss of life or damage has been reported thus far from the volcanic activities on isolate Krakatao which already have lasted many months.

Five In Race For Generalship Of Salvation Army

LAWYERS ASSURE HIGH COUNCIL THERE IS NOTHING TO FEAR FROM INJUNCTION ISSUED BY BOOTH

Confident Chancery Court Will Set Aside Order When Case Is Heard

FIVE IN RACE.

General Booth By His Action Loses Three of His Eight Supporters.

LONDON, Jan. 19. — (Canadian Press).—Lawyers of the Salvation Army are understood to have assured the reformist party in the High Council that they have nothing to fear from the surprise injunction sprung by General Booth. They are confident that the chancery court will set aside its injunction as having no ground in law when the case is called on Monday and that the council will thus be left free to proceed with the election of a new general on Tuesday.

The real proceedings at Sunbury yesterday were not in the Council Chamber but in an informal gathering of officers to formulate plans for reforms and for future re-organization of the Army. Five candidate for the generalship have been put forward. They are Commissioner Rich of Canada; Chief of Staff Higgins, Commander Evangeline Booth of the United States, Catharine Booth, who led the fight to retain her father, and President Hay of the Council. No vote has been taken but well informed circles last night thought that Higgins was assured of the position.

Loses Three Supporters.

General Booth was said to have lost three of his eight supporters by yesterday's legal action. Commissioners Cunningham, Laurie and Smith, on hearing of the injunction, disavowed any responsibility for the action and declared before members of the Council that they had been alienated from the cause of the General by this step.

An official said that the Army regulation that no soldier can go to law without another has been violated by General Booth himself. He pointed out that although the Booths declared the legal action is "friendly" test case it would not be so friendly should they win.

The Salvationists last night were stricken by the death of their popular comrade, Commissioner Haines, feeling that it was directly caused by news of the injunction.

Delegates revealed that he had just finished a speech on the oppression of the present system of the Army.

When told of the injunction he said, "How did they do it?" shuddered and dropped dead.

Died A Martyr.

Commander Evangeline told The Canadian Press correspondent last night "he died a martyr in a noble cause." She said that she had been much distressed at reports circulated in the United States that she had instigated calling the high council with the idea of usurping her brother's position.

"The High Council was called by seven commissioners in London. I had nothing to do with it. I also wish to make it clear that it is untrue that General Bramwell Booth has control of the Army's properties, monies and other assets in the United States. It is well known that the Salvation Army in the United States is an incorporated body under the laws of the various states in which it works and that all assets in the Army in America are held by trustees appointed under these corporations.

"Therefore General Booth is powerless to interfere with any of our assets."

Mrs. Bramwell Booth on hearing at Southwold of the death of Commissioner Haines sent a telegram of sympathy to his widow.

Campbellford Man Wins Window Dressing Prize

CAMPBELLFORD, Jan. 19 (Examiner Staff Correspondence).—It is apparent that Hector McArthur can do more than one thing well. Yesterday he received the first prize for the best Christmas window display of electrical good in the contest sponsored by "The Electrical Retailer," a MacLean publication. The prize-winning window was that of the Denyes Hardware and was dressed by McArthur. Another accomplishment which had won him more than a little fame is his hockey playing. The stone-wall of the local team during the last few seasons has been the McArthur-Ingram defense.

MILL POND OVERFLOWS

Warkworth Streets Are Flooded When Water Rises On Account of Heavy Rains.

LOGS FROZEN IN.

(Examiner Correspondence).

WARKWORTH, Jan. 19.—About 2 o'clock this morning water had been running down the streets of the village, caused by the overflowing of the mill pond. Although the mill owner put forth every effort to raise the logs, he was unsuccessful, as they were frozen down. Blasting was in progress this morning.

Apparently the flood is as bad as it was last spring, but it is thought not much damage has been done to the streets on account of their hard, icy surface. The flow of water seemed to have retarded slightly at 9.45 this morning.

HEAVY RAINS ARE GENERAL

Many Places in Ontario Are Flooded Out By Last 24 Hours' Rainfall.

FRUIT DISTRICT DAMAGED.

TORONTO, Ont., Jan. 19 (Canadian Press).—Heavy rains in this district and throughout Ontario generally, yesterday, caused flood conditions almost unprecedented for this time of year, blocking highways and side roads, inundating business establishments and residences, and wrecking minor though extensive damage.

Weather Bureau measurements showed that three-quarters of an inch of rain fell here during the 24 hours prior to 8 p.m., but Forecaster Frank O'Donnell estimated that considerably more than an inch had fallen up to 11.30 p.m.

This was the heaviest rain of the winter, he said, but not a record in comparison to other years.

GRIMSBY, Jan. 19 (Canadian Press).—Heavy rain which yesterday afternoon assumed cloudburst proportions, is believed to have caused havoc in the Grimsby fruit area. Whole orchards are thought to have been washed out, but in the darkness it is impossible to secure an estimate of the damage.

PORT HOPE, Ont., Jan. 19 (Canadian Press).—The threat of the greatest flood in the history of the town hung over the heads of Port Hope citizens as they went to bed last night.

A mile north of the town, the Ganeraska River was reported at 11.30 o'clock to be pouring over Corbett's pond dam in a volume that had risen, residents said, to a point 15 feet above the overflow line.

PICKERING, Jan. 19 (Canadian Press).—The Kingston Road was blocked for several hours last night, commencing about 10 o'clock, when the Pickering River flooded low-lying portions of the highway. The ice broke late in the afternoon, and the river rose steadily until one o'clock this morning, when it receded sufficiently to allow motors to pass by at two o'clock.

OTTAWA, Ont., Jan. 19 (Canadian Press).—Following a day of spring-like weather, torrential rains which continued almost incessantly during the night rendered Ottawa and district a mass of slush. Traffic in the city was badly demoralized.

Canada has one of the highest tides in the world—59½ feet—in Noel Bay, Bay of Fundy.

Canada has largest railway yards in world operated by one concern—C.P.R. at Winnipeg (258 miles of track).

It was decided to continue holding the school fair in the Fall as it meant encouragement for the children, both in domestic and agricultural interests.

Nearly Fnished

David McGrath's sawmill is nearly finished and will be read to commence sawing in the near future. A quantity of logs have already been hauled into the yard.

A FUNERAL CAR OF DISTINCTION

Above picture shows the handsome Studebaker De Luxe Type Funeral Car, recently purchased by A. Comstock and Sons from Selkirk and Elliott, local representatives for all Studebaker automotive products. Operated by a Studebaker Big Six engine, and having both end and side doors, this model of funeral car is much in demand by leading undertakers in Canada and the United States. The chassis is neither a truck nor passenger car chassis lengthened, and therefore weakened by splicing. On the contrary, it is a chassis of 158-inch wheel base, specially designed for a funeral coach. This last word in Studebaker funeral car design and convenience simulates the palatial limousine, and possesses a dignity befitting the most exclusive funeral service.

DRURY WILL CONTEST SEAT

Former Ontario Premier To Re-enter Active Political Life.

ON FARM LOAN BOARD.

OTTAWA, Ont, Jan. 19.—(Canadian Press).—Hon E. C. Drury, former premier of Ontario, who was recently appointed part time commissioner on the Federal Farm Loan Board, in an interview carried in the Citizen to-day, disclosed his intention to again seek a seat in the House of Commons.

"Acceptance of the appointment on the Board, Hon. Mr. Drury intimated, will not in any way prejudice his participation in active political affairs," the newspaper continued.

"'I am very enthusiasic as to the purpose of the Farm Loan Board,' Mr. Drury observed. 'The Board has a really constructive work to perform and I feel gratified that Hon. Mr. Robb has asked me to assist in the launching of the Board's work. Of course it's only a part-time job as far as I am concerned, involving possibly two or three meetings a month. I hope to re-enter active political life this time in Federal arena.'"

Mr. Drury unsuccessfully contested North Simcoe constituency in the last general election.

MARMORA, Jan. 19. — (Examiner Correspondence). — The Treasure Hunt was the chief item of interest during the past week and it was a real success. Some of the scouts were stumped for a while with one of the clues but on the average it was a matter of minutes and in some cases a matter of who could run the fastest which decided the order in which they finished. Troop Leader Manley Emmorey just nosed out Second Percy Gray for first place with Patrol Leader Bill Simmons a close third, and after them the rest came so fast that the Scoutmaster had to work hard to keep track of them. The trail started from the hall steps, then to a drain pipe on the south east corner of the office building, from there to the steps in front of the Laboratory, then back to the Scoutmaster's back verandah, with a difficult clue telling them to go to the Scout Club house about half a mile away and the last message to find the treasure in the trek cart in a shed back of the houses. To finish off the day a meeting was held at night and quoit games and ring puzzles, the order of the night, with a dip into the candy or biscuit every time a score was made. For the next two or three weeks a determined effort will be put forth to get the concert ready and a real Scouty display will be presented to those who turn out. A hike on Saturday to pass a few more out-door tests will help break the monotony of concert practice and also provide a good occasion for a real tracking game.

THREE WRECKS ARE REPORTED ON LOCAL C. N. R. DIVISION

At Midnight a Derailment Occurred On Hope Siding East of Keene.

TRAINS ARE DELAYED.

Twenty-one Freight Cars Off the Track at Madoc.

Three wrecks caused by derailments through washouts with traffic delayed all along the lines as a result were reported on the C.N.R. lines this morning in a night that was termed by A. McNabb, local agent, "The worst for Ontario railroads for many a year."

At midnight there was a derailment at Hope siding, just below Keene, because the rails were loosened by the rains.

At Bayside, between Cobourg and Trenton, on the old Canadian Northern main line, with the driver reported under his engine, was one of the severe derailments caused by a washout.

The Port Hope train to this city could not leave Port Hope because of high water that had flooded over the tracks on Ontario Street.

On Thursday night there was a derailment of twenty-one cars near Madoc caused by a washout. The cars were quickly replaced on the tracks and the rails repaired.

Sydenham, east of Napanee, on the Ottawa line, was the scene of another derailment last night through the flooding waters that washed away the tracks.

IF I can accomplish as much with what I have borrowed from the workshop of John Plain this week, as was accomplished by one of the sons of the prophets with an axe which he had borrowed, I shall feel that my last visit to the place of chips and shavings has been one of the most profitable I have ever been permitted to make. He was, as he often is, in deep meditation! In his hand there was part of a newspaper which had come to him from the city of Boston. It is a paper with an international reputation and worth far more than the price charged, although it costs more than the average newspaper. What he held in his hand was part of the "Boston Evening Transcript" with an advance notice of a great city-wide evangelistic campaign under the leadership of the famous British Evangelist, Gipsy Smith.

Let Peterborough Read.

Along with this preliminary announcement there were some lines which ought to be read and pondered by every individual in Peterborough having any church connection. We too easily forget that the last recorded command of the risen Christ, just before His ascension, was:

"Go ye into all the world and preach the gospel to the whole creation, teaching them to observe all things whatsoever I command you: and, Lo, I am with you always, even unto the end of the age."

In the light of that command there seems to be at best but a very superficial sense of responsibility resting upon most professing Christians. Most of us seem content to obey this command by uniting with some organization called a church, paying a small sum each year toward the support of the organization, engaging an educated clergyman and leaving him to do the whole matter of preaching the gospel, reserving the right of freely criticizing him for what he does or does not do, but not lifting a finger ourselves in the matter of making that gospel known to those who are perishing for the lack of it! Under the circumstances the average minister cannot do much towards preaching the gospel to people outside his own church edifice. Too many ministers have their hands full in keeping the members of their own church keyed up to the support of its various activities, so faithless and lacking in Christian zeal are many members in most of the churches.

Where the Church Fails.

As a result of this condition non-church goers get little attention from those who profess the Christian faith, except in a few sporadic cases. Few general attempts are ever made by the Christian Church to reach such people with the gospel of Christ. The churches do not go to them. In too many cases they are not organized to go to them, although that is no excuse. Every church ought to be so organized. If modern Christians had the zeal and enthusiasm for the "good news" which animated the Apostolic Christians they would conduct their own church affairs themselves and give their ministers time and means to go out in the highways and byways and convey the message to the masses who are wandering in the wilderness of sin. The sad thing is that those wanderers will not go to church—and it is not any less sad to think that the church will not go to them! As a rule the non-church goer has no taste or desire for what the church can give him. Often, when he does go, his reception is not such as to encourage him to repeat the visit.

A Difference in Methods.

In view of these conditions Christian Church people ought to welcome and pray earnestly for the success of those missionaries of Christ who attempt to reach with the gospel the pagans in their own neighborhoods, as well as those who go to distant lands for a similar purpose. These missionaries of Christ are commonly called evangelists. It is a peculiar fact that many church people who profess to believe in the evangel are opposed to evangelism and to evangelists. They don't like the methods employed by evangelists to attract people to them so that they can effectively deliver a gospel message. They have been schooled in a different method of receiving the gospel; hence they think no method except their own method is the proper method and they virtually assume the attitude that sinners must get salvation in their way or not at all. They are unmindful of the fact, or else they ignore the fact, that their method offers no attraction to multitudes of people, as is instanced by the smallness of their numbers, and often the barrenness of their services in the matter of spiritual results.

The Ways Are Many.

What seems to be lost sight of by many church people is that Christ has not limited entrance to His Kingdom to any one method.

When the Apostle John, in his isle of Patmos vision, saw the Holy City, the New Jerusalem, coming down out of Heaven, he observed that the city had four sides, one side in each direction—north, south, east and west—and each side had three gates, a total of twelve gates. It is quite possible that when those Christians who now are assiduously guarding their one gate to the city, reach the real city beyond the sphere of the flesh, they may find therein many strangers who have gained entrance by some other gate than theirs. One of the most delicate and perilous things a Christian man or woman can do is to question the power and work of the Holy Spirit in the hearts of other people.

The Aims of a Church.

There are churches, and unfortunately some ministers and elders of churches, who refuse to join and support efforts at local evangelism because in some previous effort they have found little or no accessions to their own church membership. It might be quite proper to ask such people whether they are identified with Christ's Church merely to build up their own individual church membership roll, or for the purpose of advancing Christ's Kingdom wherever it can be advanced.

It is possible to have our hearts and minds too much set on numbers and too little set on the salvation of souls. Christians ought to rejoice in, and co-operate with, any effort made honestly to turn men and women from evil ways, and if other churches reap larger benefits than their own in new members, they ought to rejoice in the fact that souls are saved and men and women are restored to a right attitude of heart and mind towards God and Christ and the Kingdom of Heaven.

Well Worth-While.

It can be said relative to the work of evangelists that it is impossible to judge the results of their labors by the number of new members added to the churches. Every person of long experience knows that a single sentence, a single verse of Scripture, or often a single word, uttered at the right moment, sinks as a seed into the consciousness of a hearer, remains apparently dead for weeks, months or years, but eventually blossoms and bears much fruit.

What though the immediate numerical additions be less than we looked for, an evangelistic effort is well worth-while because of its ability to turn the minds of thousands of careless and indifferent people away from their carelessness and indifference, away from evil associations and sinful practises, and to win them to the cause of righteousness, the cause for which the Son of God came into this world, the cause for which He lived, taught, suffered and died.

—Allan Fairbairn.

The Minister Remarks—

—The two things some people are most liable to forget are sermons and debts.

—I have read a fair amount in my time, but the best thing I ever saw on milk was cream.

—To occupy certain positions in this world is to lead a more lonesome life than an old bachelor and a more anxious one than an old maid.

—I have noticed that it sometimes happens that two lovers like two armies get along quietly until they are engaged.

—When a woman marries a rake to convert him she is taking a big risk—it takes a smart missionary to do it.

—He is likely to remain a fool till the end of his life who hasn't discovered that it costs more to borrow than to buy.

—A. F.

Is This a Young Man's Era

PERHAPS this is a young man's era in the sense that it is becoming increasingly necessary to have the vigor of youth if we are to keep up with the pace that is being set to-day. But, why should the multiplication of years rob any ordinary man of that vigor? It is foolish to think that because a man has passed a certain year in life he should be counted in the human discard. The stimulus of a youthful heart can play an important part in defying the ravages of time. No one should despair until death has foreclosed the mortgage which he holds on our earthly frame. Again and again men have gone ahead and done great things for their fellows while lingering on the borders of the Valley of the Shadow.

We have all heard it said that opportunity knocks but once at any man's door. If that is true, then I want to add that it is only true in part. Great opportunities may not come often, but there are many smaller opportunities lying in wait for us at the dawn of each new day. Not until man has passed the age of possible activity and has seen his powers fade away can he truthfully say that his last opportunity has gone.

A very striking illustration of this was brought to my attention recently. Listening-in on the radio, I got some of the election returns from Toronto, and was greatly interested to hear that Mr. John Linden had been elected as deputy-reeve of Scarboro' Township after six years' absence from the Council. Being honored with Mr. Linden's friendship, I happen to know that he is over eighty years of age, although you would never imagine it to see him. Despite the fact that he had made several successive attempts to get back into the Council only to be defeated—and that chiefly because he was advocating certain reforms which he knew were not popular with many of the voters—he would not be discouraged. Many a man, younger in years, would have given up long ago, but that is not the stuff John Linden is made of. He surely knows what it is to enjoy the stimulus of a youthful heart. Without exaggeration, he seems good for another twenty years. He certainly believes that opportunity will never quit coming until his eyelids close in their last sleep. —A. F.

Think of This

OUR "Nearer, my God, to Thee," must be conditioned by, and often come only through, "E'en though it be a cross that raiseth me." God would rather let it be hard for us to live, if there is a blessing in the hardness, than make it easy for us at the cost of the blessing.

—John Plain.

Church page

It Is Even So

NOTHING can atone for the loss of secret and direct intercourse with God. Even work in the service of God and of love us exhausting; we cannot bless others without power going out from us; this must be renewed from above.

—John Plain.

Life

LIFE has been often and justly compared to a river which, small and weak at the beginning, widens and strengthens as it goes on, till it becomes a strong rushing stream, with a broad opening into the sea. But what makes it broad and strong? The receiving into its bosom of the streams on either side that flow in the same direction. So it is with our moral life. Our strength and our breadth depend on the amount of receptivity; in other words, ever moral nature is great in proportion as it receives into itself, and assimilates the wealth of kindred moral natures But receptivity depends on sympathy, and sympathy is only another name for Love: which in this view is not only the fulfilling of the Law, but the making, of the man. The best man is he who is made up of the greatest number of other men.

Fading In Our Hands

GOD does not like to bestow His blessings where they will be hoarded or absorbed. He loves to put His best gifts into the hands of those who will not store them away in barns, or fold them up in napkins and hide them away but will scatter them abroad. Things we take to keep for ourselves alone, fade in our hands.

—John Plain.

Enjoying Repose

WE must alter for the better always and unceasingly. Nature seems to be at rest only because she is perpetually renewed. The soul enjoys repose on the same terms.

—De Revignon.

A life marked by daily answer to prayer is the proof of our spiritual maturity; that we have indeed attained to the true abiding in Christ; it is in prpactical obedience that the abiding must be maintained.

A Pen Picture

WHAT a beautiful prospect! A rich and well watered plain fertile, and well cultivated. Fine mountains bound the view on one side, and on the other, far away what looks like a great desert.

The road from the place where we stand leads to a town surrounded with gardens and rushing streams. While we gaze with delight upon the exquisite scene an old man passes us making for the town; the view does not seem to attract him, he is buried in thought.

He does not seem like one given to political schemes, nor has he the appearance of a man who aims at power in the State, yet, there is a look in his eye which I think could make a tyrant quail.

He passes on, others have seen him, too, and the news will doubtless be soon all over the town.

* * *

The streets are so narrow that we must step into a doorway to let a procession pass. Are these mounted troops? No, only a string of beasts of burden laden with all kinds of things which an Oriental town can produce. Last of all comes a great man, some nobleman of the Court, with his retinue of servants. Where can they be going? Probably to bear a greeting to some potentate from another land, or at least to the ambassador of aking.

Let us press in with the crowd and see who the honored stranger may be. Is it possible? It is that quiet unpretentious person who passed us on the road. The attendants are left behind and the two men so different in appearance stand face to face.

Not many words are spoken on either side, but one of the two is in tears. The visitor returns deep in meditation; the procession retraces its way along the narrow streets, and I do not think that the burdens seem to have been even unpacked.

The key to this Pen Picture of Bible History will be found in the Second Book of Kings.

The key to the previous Pen Picture will be found in 2 Sam. 4:5-12—and I am glad to be able to say that it was discovered before going to press. —A. F.

ANSWERS TO LAST WEEK'S QUESTIONS.

1. Daniel lived a life of absolute sobriety and earnest piety in the polluted political atmosphere of the court life of Babylon (Dan. 1:8, 6:1-24). 1-24).
2. Daniel was of royal or princely decent, and as a result would be neither ungainly or ungraceful in movement or manner amid the luxurious elegance of the court life in Babylon (Dan. 1:3).
3. Daniel was a contemporary of Jeremiah, and Ezekiel, who were also Jewish captives in Babylon (Ezek. 14:20) —Scofield.
4. As no fault could be found in Daniel's political regime, the jealous presidents found it necessary to inveigle him in his religious life; a charge was laid against him of not having affiliated with the state church, with the result that Daniel was incarcerated in the den of lions (Dan. 6:1-24).
5. Daniel had the unique privilege of penning the first full length portrait of the Lord Jesus; it is found in Dan. 10:5-6.
6. Premier Daniel's fidelity to God resulted in his religion becoming the state religion during the reign of King Darius (Dan. 6:25-28).

Where Is He Now?

THIRTEEN years ago much interest was manifested in the project of a man who was then about to re-enter Washington and Lee University—from whence he had graduated in 1873—for the purpose of taking a course in law. Thirteen years ago, James McDowell, the gentleman in question, was sixty-four years of age. At that time he said that after he had finished his course and been admitted to the bar he proposed to go to New York or Chicago and hang out his shingle. He contended that a man can do his best work after he has passed sixty. It would be interesting to hear what happened in his case. At any rate it is an example that may well be taken to heart by those who have not accomplished all they desire in their youth or middle age. The truth of the matter is that it is never too late to learn. —A. F.

TELL US A STORY

CICERO was one day sneered at by one of his opponents, a mean man of noble lineage, on account of his low parentage. "You are the first of your line," said the railer. "And you," rejoined Cicero, "are the last of yours."

William Carey, the missionary, was never ashamed of the humbleness of his origin. On one occasion, when at the Governor-General's table, he overheard an officer opposite him asking another, loud enough to be heard, whether Carey had not once been a shoemaker. "No, sir," exclaimed Carey immediately, "only a cobbler!"

Much depends on the way a thing is done. When Ben Jonson lay sick and in poverty, the King sent him a paltry message, accompanied by a trifling gratuity. The sturdy, plain-spoken poet's reply was: "I suppose he sends me this because I live in an alley; tell him his soul lives in an alley."

THE Y.M.C.A.'S FINE SHOWING.

The reports presented at the annual meeting of the Young Men's Christian Association, indicating a banner year in practically all departments of the institution, should be the cause of satisfaction not only to the officers and members of the Y.M.C.A. but to the citizens.

The Y.M.C.A. is looked upon as a community asset, discharging a number of useful duties and providing services that are of general benefit.

That being so, it is most gratifying to note that G. H. Roper, general secretary, is able to report a "much healthier situation in the affairs of the association."

This is borne out by the various reports which indicate progress in the Y.M.C.A.'s activities, a physical department that is being more widely taken advantage of than ever before, a boys' division that is outgrowing its accommodation, and a healthy financial condition that indicates the association is paying its way.

This fine showing for the year just closed, with a big gain in membership and greater revenue as a result, will be appreciated by everyone who realizes what an important part in community life is played by this long established institution.

LATE HOURS.

When Miss Amy Wood, Salvation Army representative on the Local Council of Women and convenor of the Child's Welfare Committee, pointed out at the annual meeting of the Council the ill-effects of the late hours among the young people of the city, she was speaking by the book.

Unfortunately, however, Miss Wood touched upon a problem that can only be dealt by parents and parental authority as apparently obsolete in these modern days when home is regarded as a place to go to when nothing else is available.

There is no disguising the fact that too many young folks are burning the candle at both ends, and their health and their ability to study or work as the case may be are both impaired by their failure to get enough rest.

But what is to be done about it, if the fathers and mothers won't or can't assert their authority?

Frankly, we don't know; it all gets back to the home, and beyond suggesting that something might be accomplished by starting dances earlier instead of regarding a late hour for commencement as fashionable, we have no solution to offer.

THE COUNCIL OF WOMEN.

There was nothing in the annual meeting of the Local Council of Women to indicate that there is any falling off in interest or enthusiasm in the membership of this representative organization, which is composed of delegates for 31 different women's organizations in Peterborough and this represents the views of some 2,500 local women.
